A RINGING CHALLENGE

To All Friends of Western Maryland College

*The Making of a "Greater Western Maryland College" Now Possible
If the Alumni and Friends of This Institution Meet This Challenge*

The Maryland Legislature has made an appropriation of $125,000 for a Building at Western Maryland College, conditioned on the college raising $250,000 additional endowment. This appropriation is payable July 1, 1927.

THE GENERAL EDUCATION BOARD OF NEW YORK CITY (THE ROCKEFELLER FOUNDATION) ANNOUNCES A CONDITIONAL GIFT OF $125,000 TO WESTERN MARYLAND COLLEGE PROVIDED THE COLLEGE RAISES ADDITIONAL ENDOWMENT TO THE AMOUNT OF $375,000, WHICH WITH THEIR GIFT MEANS A TOTAL ADDITIONAL ENDOWMENT OF $500,000. THIS CONDITION, IF MET, WILL BRING THE TOTAL ENDOWMENT OF THE COLLEGE UP TO $800,000, AND PLACE WESTERN MARYLAND COLLEGE IN THE FRONT RANK OF AMERICAN COLLEGES. IN OTHER WORDS RAISING $375,000 SECURES THE STATE'S APPROPRIATION OF $125,000 AND THE ROCKEFELLER GIFT OF $125,000, A TOTAL OF $250,000.

The Board of Trustees of the College at a meeting held in Baltimore, Maryland, December 9, 1924, gave hearty endorsement to the campaign to raise $375,000 for endowment, to meet the conditions imposed by the State of Maryland and the General Education Board; and in addition authorized the sale of 1,000 certificates at $125 each to churches of the Maryland, West Virginia and Eastern Conferences, the proceeds to be applied to the building of a Boys' Dormitory.

These two campaigns, each working independently of the other, will have as their goal the raising of a total of $500,000.

In addition there will be the gifts of the State of Maryland and the General Education Board, making a total of $750,000. The successful working out of this campaign will mean two new buildings and $500,000 additional endowment.

It is desirable that this campaign shall be put on before Commencement of 1925, probably during the month of May.

HEREIN IS THE PROMISE OF A NEW DAY FOR WESTERN MARYLAND COLLEGE. THE "HOPES AND FEARS OF ALL THE YEARS" OF THE REMARKABLE HISTORY OF THIS COLLEGE ARE MET IN THIS CHALLENGE TO OUR LOYALTY AND TO OUR FAITH. AN OPPORTUNITY IS NOW PRESENTED WHERE WE MUST THINK AND GIVE IN LARGER TERMS THAN EVER BEFORE. THE ALUMNI AND FRIENDS OF OTHER COLLEGES HAVE MET THEIR RESPONSIBILITIES IN GENEROUS FASHION, AND IT IS CONFIDENTLY BELIEVED THAT OUR ALUMNI AND FRIENDS WILL DO THE SAME.

BUT THIS CANNOT BE PUT ACROSS UNLESS EVERYBODY DOES HIS PART. THE CALL TO THE COLORS WILL BE SOUNDED IN THE EARS OF EVERY FORMER STUDENT OF WESTERN MARYLAND COLLEGE. THE RESPONSE WILL MEASURE THEIR LOVE FOR THE OLD COLLEGE AND THEIR BELIEF IN THE IDEALS FOR WHICH THE COLLEGE HAS STOOD SINCE THE DAY OF ITS FOUNDING. AND EVERYBODY MUST HAVE A PART IN THE REJOICING THAT WILL FOLLOW THE SUCCESSFUL ENDING OF THIS VENTURE OF FAITH!

TWO POEMS BY PROFESSOR CROUSE

We take pleasure in publishing two poems by Professor Wm. S. Crouse, of the first graduating class of Western Maryland College. Professor Crouse is now living in Denton, Maryland. These poems show a true poetic sense and are exquisitely beautiful. The first poem is addressed to Professor Gildersleeve, now deceased, but written in commemoration of his eighty-fourth birthday. The second poem is an answer to Lizette Woodworth Reese's lines, entitled "Arrangement," which appeared first in the Baltimore Sun.

PROFESSOR GILDERSLEEVE

A part we are of all we know. The Past
Is ours if we but know the Past and think
The thoughts of those prophetic souls that link
Their present to the Future. We, not cast
As prophets in life's drama, we essay
In vain the Future; but the years alone
Are not beyond our ken. The breaking dawn
Of letters lights for us the backward way.

O scholar, teacher, poet, sage, for whom
Blind Homer sings in stately verse the doom
Of Troy. Iocbrates and Attie bards
And orators have made "the glory that was Greece"
Your own and given you a longer lease
Of life than twelve and four score honored years.

ARRANGMENT

By LIZETTE WOODWORTH REESE.

What woe, what guerdon, Life, asked I of you?
Brooches, old houses, yellow trees in fall,
A gust of daffodils by a gray wall,
Books, small lads' laughter, song at drip of dew?
Or said I, "Make me April, I would go
Night-long, day-long down the gray little grass
And therein see myself as in a glass;
There is none other weather I would know?"
Content was I to live like any flower
Sweetly and humbly, dream each season
The blossom things that serve a girl for bread,
Involute against the bitter hour,
You poured my dreams like water on the ground:
I think it would be best if I were dead.

REPLY

Depressed, oh, Poet, your complaint's unjust,
And Life to you is kinder than you know.
You've planted in a thousand hearts to grow
Bless'd seeds—but not "of daffodils a gust!"
The germs of better things than gems or books.
Not April did Life make you, as you asked,
But gave the best of all the months and tasks
You, that a full return you make in song
Of April freed, and all her tinkling brooks
Singing in glee the beauty of the long Blue days to be of summer. Would you such days
Disdain, and girl-like be content to live
An April day, nor song exultant raise,
A tribute to the months that harvest give!

COLLEGE OPENING

1924-25

The College year opened September 15th, 1924, under exceedingly favorable circumstances.

The new Freshman class numbers 126, 60 men and 66 women.

The enrollment for the last three years, which shows an increase for each year, is as follows:

1922-23, 400; 1923-24, 405; 1924-25, 434. This enumeration does not include the Preparatory school. This shows a decidedly healthful increase in the college enrollment.

GEOGRAPHICAL DISTRIBUTION OF

The student enrollment is divided geographically as follows:

Maryland, 348; Pennsylvania, 24; Virginia, 18; West Virginia, 9; New York, 6; Ohio, 5; North Carolina, 2; and 1 each from the following states: Delaware, Illinois, Kentucky, Maine, New Hampshire, Oklahoma, and South Carolina.

ITEMS OF INTEREST IN CONNECTION WITH PRESENT ENROLLMENT

Of the students enrolled this year:

Forty-one have fathers who are college graduates, 7 have mothers who are college graduates, and 9 have fathers and mothers who both were college graduates.

Fifty-six students now enrolled have fathers who attended college, but did not graduate, and 44 have mothers who attended college, but did not graduate. That is to say, 157 of our students came from homes where either the father or mother attended college.

Of the present enrollment of students who formerly had relatives at Western Maryland College, the following items are of special interest:

Five had both fathers and mothers; 30 had fathers; 9 had mothers; 61 had brothers and sisters, and 68 had other relatives.

FACULTY NOTES

There have been a few changes in the faculty.

Mr. A. E. Woodhead, who had been associated with the Department of Biology for several years, is continuing his studies in the University of Michigan. Mr. Lloyd M. Bertholf, a graduate student of Johns Hopkins University, has been appointed as his successor. Miss Emily W. Emmart, a graduate of Johns Hopkins University, has been appointed as associate in Biology.

Mr. Samuel B. Schofield, who for several years was head of the Department of Chemistry and the Dean of Men, is taking graduate work at Princeton, and is on leave of absence. Mr. Frederick Warren, Jr., a graduate of Johns Hopkins University, has been appointed to fill the vacancy in the Department of Chemistry and is Dean of Men. Miss Ruth Warren, a graduate of Western Maryland College, is assistant in the Department of Chemistry.

Dr. R. B. James, of the Department of History, resigned in September to enter the Lecture Field. Mr. James B. Rank, a graduate of Harvard, has been appointed to the Department of History.

In the Department of Music, Miss Margaret V. Limes, a graduate in music at Adrian College, has taken the place of Miss Marjorie Lewis, resigned. Miss N. Faye Rees, a graduate in music at Adrian College, has been appointed to the Department of Public School Music, succeeding Miss Gertrude Morgan.

ENTERTAINMENTS FOR 1924-25

An interesting series of entertainments for the year has been arranged as follows:

September 19th, Mr. Thomas L. Gibson, Supervisor of Music, State Department of Education.

September 26th, Prof. Leon Sampaix, a former teacher of Piano in the college and now head of the Piano Department of the Ithaca Conservatory of Music.

October 24th, Mr. Southwick, of the Emerson School of Expression, in "Richard III."

November 14th, Mr. Edwin Swain, baritone, of New York City.

November 21st, College Players and Powder Puffs.

January 16th, Heath-Gregory Artists.

February 13th, Dr. Milton Harold Phillips.

March 12th, Louis Williams.

April 10th, Temple Singers.

Other entertainments are being arranged for.

CHAPEL CHRISTMAS SERVICE

PEACE ON EARTH, GOOD-WILL TOWARDS MEN!

The most impressive religious service of the college year took place Sunday evening, December 14th, 1924, when the Sunday school gave its Christmas program, "The Blessings of Giving," Dr. H. T. Stephens, Superintendent, conducted the service. The chapel was tastefully and artistically decorated with evergreens. Burning candles in all the windows at once made us realize the spirit of Christmas.

A beautiful anthem "Sing, Oh Heavens" excellently rendered by the college choir, under the direction of Miss Dorst, followed the organ prelude by Miss Harris. After the invocation, Miss Florence Johnson, '20, sang a contralto solo, "The Virgin's Lullaby." Miss Johnson sings in Dr. Percy Stickney Grant's church in New York City, and has broadcasted from station W-E-A-F several times, and has a very rich and mellow voice. An original essay, "The Man Christ Jesus," by Miss Miriam Strange, followed by three readings by Miss Hite, Mr. Dinkle, and Mr. Trader, from "The Following of the Star," by Florence Barclay. These readings expressively given, proved the ancient gifts of gold, frankincense, and myrrh have survived down through the countless ages.

The Christmas offering was then received by the treasurer, from representatives of the different classes appointed to bear the gifts to the altar. This offering amounted to over $100.00, quite an increase over last year. President Ward then wished each one the happiest and best Christmas they have ever had. The chapel was then darkened and an illustrated hymn was thrown on the screen, after which the "Three Wise Men Following The Star," was shown. Then pronounced the benediction, and the students filed out of the dimly lighted chapel only to realize once more the birthday of the Babe of the Manger, and King of kings, was the greatest thing for the world, for the free gift of God is Eternal Life, in Jesus Christ, our Lord.

LEAD GREEN TERRORS THROUGH SUCCESSFUL GRID SEASON

Under the capable leadership of Captain Byham, Western Maryland has just gone through one of the most successful grid seasons in the history of the college. Time after time we have seen the "Green and Gold" triumphantly towering over the colors of her rivals; and, in spite of playing the hardest schedule of any Maryland college, she succeeded in piling up 199 points against her opponents 74.

Beginning their season with Bucknell University, the "green terrorists" displayed a fighting spirit that absolutely astounded "Charlie" Moran's heavy gridmen. Although the score was 6-0 Bucknell, Western Maryland could easily claim a moral victory, for the Lewisburg gridgers fully expected to whitewash their foe.

Undaunted by their 6-0 defeat by Bucknell, Byham's men came back the next Saturday and tripped the U. S. Tank Corps team 20-3, in spite of the fact that the Tanks outwitted them man for man.

Next week, however, the tide was again turned, for the Terrors took a beating of 19-0 from G. W. U. But still the old Western Maryland spirit was unbroken, for the very next Saturday the largest crowd that ever attended a grid game on Hoffa Field saw our gridmen pile up a 13-0 score on their old rival, St. Johns.

The following Saturday, still bubbling over with their victory over the Cadets, the Terrors surprised the strong Catholic U. team by a whipping to the tune of 13-7.

On November 1st "By's" men were again halted by Carnegie Tech, but the plauds were so well pleased with the splendid fight that they picked two men, Byham and Seerist, for the first team of Carnegie's best opponents this season.

After a week of rest, due to Fordham's cancel, on a field only fit for hip hoots, and climate conditions most unfavorable, the Terrors fought a 12-12 tie with the Eastern Shoremen at Washington College.

Then again with that never give up spirit, so characteristic of Byham's men, Western Maryland humbled Loyola by a score of 39-0, being the last game of the season played on Hoffa Field.

Finally, all eyes were turned toward Emmitsburg on Thanksgiving Day, when Western Maryland, unbeaten by any State team, scored her last victory over the mountaineers at Mt Saint Mary's, and for the last time this grid season hoisted her colors challenging the State-championship with Hopkins and University of Maryland, who battled to a 0-0 tie on turkey-day.

FOOTBALL FOR NEXT YEAR

The most ambitious plans in football that Western Maryland has ever made are being worked out for next year. The schedule is not complete, but up to date includes Bucknell University, University of Maryland, United States Naval Academy, United States Marines, Catholic University, Washington College, and Loyola. The prediction is made that next year Western Maryland will assemble a team that will compare favorably with the best college teams.

BANQUET TO FOOTBALL MEN

A complimentary banquet was given the football team by Col. Robert J. Gill, at the Emerson Hotel, Baltimore, Md., on Saturday evening, December 6th. About forty football men were present, including several guests.

The menu served was a most excellent one and the whole evening was spent in most delightful fellowship.

Col. Gill, in his speech, paid a high compliment to our team and expressed a great desire to see the development of a football team that will carry everything before it. He pledged his support to the team and gave great praise to Coach Shroyer. Other speeches were made by the President of the College, W. P. Roberts, Ralph Cover, Holmes Lewis, George W. Dexter, Frank Bowers, and Groton and Holt of the graduating class.

The Rotary Club of Westminster gave a banquet to the team Wednesday evening, December 17th, at the Westminster Hotel. About 75 persons were present. Mr. Howard E. Kountz, the president of the Rotary Club, presided, and speeches were made by Dr. Ward, the president of the College, Carl Twigg, and others. A letter was read from Col. Gill, who had expected to be present but could not attend.

The affair was one of the pleasantest happenings that has occurred in recent years in connection with the town. The finest spirit prevailed and everybody present seemed to be back of a Greater Western Maryland College and a Greater Football Team.

AN AIRPLANE VIEW OF WESTERN MARYLAND COLLEGE

Western Maryland College Bulletin

Vol. 5

WESTMINSTER, MD., APRIL, 1925

No. 3

THE TIME HAS COME!!

Western Maryland's Opportunity Depends Upon You!

Campaign to Raise $375,000 for Endowment to Meet the Conditional Appropriation of the State of Maryland of $125,000 for a Building and the Conditional Gift of the General Education Board of $125,000 for Endowment, Will Be Put on May 11-18. Every Friend of the College is Invited to Help.

The necessary successive steps in authorizing a great campaign for a Greater Western Maryland College have been completed.

The Board of Trustees, at a meeting held in Baltimore, December 9th, 1924, accepted the conditions laid down by the State of Maryland and the General Education Board of New York City, and gave hearty endorsement to the campaign. Endorsement of the campaign had been previously given by the Board.

The Alumni Association of the College, at their meeting in June last and at the Mid-winter Banquet, in Baltimore, February 6th, 1925, called upon every friend of the College to get behind the movement and to throw himself or herself, as the case may be, into the campaign.

The Maryland Conference of the Methodist Protestant Church, at their sessions held in Hampden Church, Baltimore, the first week of April, 1925, also accepted the challenge of the State and of the General Education Board, and unanimously voted to sustain the movement and to open the Churches of the Conference District to a canvass for funds.

The date authorized for the intensive campaign for the securing of subscriptions is May 11-18. Sermons will be preached in the interest of the campaign on Sunday, May 10th, and a canvass for funds will be begun at that time.

The purpose of the campaign may be briefly stated:

By Act of the Legislature of 1924, the State of Maryland, made an appropriation of $125,000, provided the College should raise additional endowment to the amount of $250,000.

The General Education Board of New York City (the Rockefeller Foundation) announces a conditional gift of $125,000 to Western Maryland College provided the College raises additional endowment to the amount of $375,000, which with their gift means a total additional endowment of $500,000. This condition, if met, will bring the total endowment of the college up to $800,000, and will place Western Maryland College in the front rank of American colleges. In other words, raising $375,000 secures the State's appropriation of $125,000 and the Rockefeller gift of $125,000, a total of $250,000.

BANQUET AT HAMPDEN CHURCH

The College entertained the ministers of the Maryland Conference, and their delegates, at supper, Thursday evening, April 2nd, at the Hampden Church.

The occasion was one long to be remembered. About 250 guests were present and the greatest enthusiasm prevailed. The President of the College, Dr. A. N. Ward, presided. He briefly outlined the campaign. Speeches were made by President Emeritus Lewis; Rev. G. I. Humphreys, D. D., President of the Maryland Conference; Rev. J. H. Stranghn, D. D., of Washington, D. C.; Rev. F. W. Stephenson, Secretary of the Board of Education of the Methodist Protestant Church; Col. Robert J. Gill, Chairman of the Campaign Committee; Mr. L. Irving Pollitt, of Baltimore; and Dr. William J. Thompson, of New York City.

The prevailing sentiment of this meeting was that the campaign must and would be put over.

MEETING OF THE COMMITTEE OF ONE HUNDRED

The first meeting of the Committee of One Hundred was held on Friday evening, April 3rd, at St. John's Church, Baltimore. A delightful supper was served by the ladies of the Church. Seventy-two members of the Committee were present, besides some visitors. The meeting was presided over by Col. Robert J. Gill, the Chairman of the General Campaign Committee. The Executive Secretary, Dr. A. N. Ward, outlined the campaign and made some suggestions for it. The interests of the campaign were carefully considered, and the conclusions arrived at were unanimously adopted.

Speeches, endorsing the campaign, were made by the following: Col. Robert J. Gill, Mr. Wm. G. Baker, Jr., Miss Mollie E. Jones, Dr. H. L. Elderdice, Dr. Wm. R. McDaniel, Mr. W. Frank Thomas, Mr. J. H. K. Shannahan, Mr. T. Gordon Bennett, Mr. Milton L. Veasey, Mr. L. Irving Pollitt, Mr. Robert R. Carman, Mr. B. B. Webster, Mrs. Martha S. Fenby, Rev. J. H. Stranghn, Mr. F. Robertson Jones, and Mr. J. Samuel Turner.

As announced above, the date set for the campaign is May 11-15.

The Executive Secretary was authorized to make apportionments for the various cities and counties, the apportionments to be based on $375 multiplied by the number of former students in that particular county or city.

Apportionments are also to be made for the Methodist Protestant Churches in the various cities or counties, and one-half of the amount apportioned for the Churches will be added to the apportionment made for the former students. The combined sum will be the apportionment for the county or city.

It was ordered that great Promotional Meetings should be held for the following centres: New York City; Washington, D. C.; Salisbury, Md.; Baltimore, Md.; and at other points, if arrangements can be made. The group leaders will exert every effort to secure the attendance, at these meetings, of every former student of the College and of all interested friends. These meetings are not for the purpose of raising subscriptions; they are intended to be inspirational in character.

It was voted that subscriptions are to be received covering a period of three years and payable in six semi-annual installments.

The appointment of the various committees in the organization was authorized.

THE GREAT PROMOTIONAL MEETINGS

One of the most important features of the campaign will be the great Promotional Meetings which are being planned in the interest of arousing a sentiment favorable to the campaign and sufficient to put it over. It is not intended to take subscriptions at these meetings. The intensive campaign for solicitation will be staged the week following the Promotional Meetings.

The Meetings so far decided upon are:

New York City, Friday evening, May 1st. Place to be announced later. This meeting is for the metropolitan area, including New York City, Brooklyn, Newark, Elizabeth, and other nearby points.

Salisbury, Md., Tuesday evening, May 5th, in the Banquet Room of the Methodist Protestant Church. This meeting is for the Eastern Shore of Maryland, Lower Delaware, and the Eastern Shore of Virginia.

Washington, D. C., Wednesday, May 6th—place to be announced. This meeting is for Washington, D. C.; Alexandria, Va.; Prince George, Montgomery, Charles, Calvert, and St. Mary's Counties, Md.; and nearby points.

Baltimore, Md., Friday evening, May 8th, at the Maryland Casualty Building, 40th St. and Cedar Ave. This meeting is for Baltimore City, the remaining Western Shore counties of Maryland, and nearby points in Pennsylvania and Upper Delaware. It will also include Wilmington and Philadelphia, if meetings cannot be arranged for those two cities.

In each case, supper will be served, tickets, $1.00, at the door.

At these meetings, as heretofore stated, all former students now living in the territories mentioned, are urged to be present. In addition, all friends of the College are also invited and urged to attend.

We are planning for an attendance of 500 at the Salisbury meeting; of 500 at the Washington meeting; and of 1,000 at the Baltimore meeting. We hope to have a large attendance at the other meetings also. These great meetings will furnish the enthusiasm for the campaign which will be staged the following week. All who love the College and are interested in the success of this movement, ought to be present.

The Committee in charge of the New York City meetings are: Dr. H. G. Watson, Hotel Latham; Mr. Paul C. Whipp, 54 Wall St.; and Mr. J. Samuel Turner, c/o Edison & Co., 247 Park Ave.

The Committee in charge of the Salisbury meeting will be the group leaders for Wicomic County, with Mr. H. C. Adkins, Salisbury, Md., as the Chairman.

The Committee for the Washington meeting are: Mr. Roger J. Whiteford, 815 15th St., Chairman; Rev. J. H. Stranghn, D. D., 2324 First St., N. W., Executive Secretary.

The Committee in charge of the Baltimore meeting are: Col. Robert J. Gill, 1010 Keyser Bldg., Chairman; Mr. T. K. Harrison, 1000 Continental Bldg., Executive Secretary; and the other group leaders of Baltimore City.

THE COMMITTEE ON POTENTIAL DONORS

This Committee has a very important work to do in the campaign. Through them as many of the larger subscriptions, as may be possible, will be secured by the date set for the great Promotional Meetings. At these Promotional Meetings, it is hoped to announce a number of large subscriptions which have been secured. If the number of subscriptions and the contributions thus secured are considerable, the effect upon the campaign in general will be fine.

THE AIM OF THE CAMPAIGN

The aim of the campaign is to get every former student to contribute or raise $375 in the campaign in subscriptions covering a period of three years.

It is evident, however, that many persons will have to give a great deal more than $375. The time has come when our friends must think and give in larger terms than ever before. It is a large undertaking—it will mean much sacrifice and hard work—but the ends gained will greatly advance the interests of Our College and will make glad the hearts of all who love Western Maryland College.

There ought to be a number of large subscriptions, and we think that there will be. The success of the campaign will largely depend upon this. It is hoped that several subscriptions reaching into five figures may be secured, and any number of four-figure subscriptions. Money given now to the College will be worth twice the amount given later.

COUNTY AND CITY CONFERENCES FOR ORGANIZATION

The following itinerary has been arranged for conferences in the counties and cities for the purpose of organizing the campaign. The Executive Secretary will meet the group leaders and former students at the time and place herein scheduled. As these are important meetings, it is desired that all group leaders and all former students, who can possibly arrange to do so, will attend these meetings.

Somerset—Princess Anne, Monday afternoon, April 13.

Worcester—Pocomoke City, Monday evening, April 13.

Wicomico—Salisbury, Tuesday afternoon, April 14.

Dorchester—Cambridge, Tuesday evening, April 14.

Baltimore County—Baltimore City, Wednesday, 2:00 P. M., April 15.

Baltimore City—Baltimore City, Wednesday, 2:00 P. M., April 15.

Talbot—Easton, Thursday afternoon, April 16.

Caroline—Denton, Thursday evening, April 16.

Queen Anne—Centerville, Friday afternoon, April 17.

Kent—Chestertown, Friday evening, April 17.

Cecil—Elkton, Saturday afternoon, April 18.

Harford—Bel Air, Saturday evening, 8 P. M., April 18.

Garrett and Allegany—Cumberland, Monday evening, April 20.

Washington—Hagerstown, Tuesday afternoon, April 21.

Frederick—Frederick City, Wednesday afternoon, April 22.

Howard—Ellicott City, Wednesday evening, April 22.

Anne Arundel—Annapolis, Thursday evening, April 23.

Prince George—Upper Marlboro, Friday afternoon, April 24.

Washington, D. C.—Washington, D. C. Friday evening, April 24.

Montgomery—Washington, D. C., Friday evening, April 24.

Carroll—McDaniel Hall, Western Maryland College, Tuesday, April 28, 7:30 P. M.

We are not able to schedule meetings for Charles, Calvert and St. Mary's counties. Mrs. Frank T. Miller, of Westminster, a daughter of Dr. J. W. Hering, one of the outstanding friends of the college in the earlier days, will visit these counties in the interest of the campaign.

FROM LETTERS ENDORSING THE CAMPAIGN

(Additional letters will be published in succeeding Bulletins.)

From Former President Lewis:

Many limitations, both personal and circumstantial, prevented me in my thirty-four years of administration as president of the College from realizing my ideal of greatness for Western Maryland. For instance, I was never able to secure a student roll of three hundred which I fondly hoped for. I congratulate you upon your great success in securing this year a roll of 473. The Psalmist complained, "How are they increased that trouble me!" I trust you have no cause for a similar complaint. Such a large body of students call for greatly increased facilities and for increased responsibility and work on the part of those who administer the trust. Friends may aid you in getting the facilities, but only God can give you the strength and wisdom for the more important elements of success.

Every friend of Western Maryland College will give you the heartiest support in your labors; will realize that larger opportunities call for larger contributions on their part of money and sympathy; and I, as one of these friends wish for you and pledge to you all the help in my power.

WESTMINSTER, MD., MAY 1, 1925

No. 4

Entered as second class matter May 19, 1921, at the Postoffice at Westminster, Md., under the act of August 24, 1912.
Acceptance for mailing at special rate of postage provided for in section 1103, act of October 3, 1917.

INTRODUCING THE EDITOR

The College has requested Mr. Ralph Cover, of the Class of 1910 to take entire charge of the editing and publication of a number of special issues of the Bulletin. Mr. Cover has the distinction of being the youngest graduate of Harvard Law School in the entire history of more than one hundred years of that Institution. He has been a close student of educational matters and developments, and intensely loyal to Western Maryland, and is particularly well qualified to perform this labor of love.

A. N. WARD.

*"Here's where we turn and go
Down paths of Memory
Back to the land we used to know
The land of Used-to-be."*

What tender reminiscences are awakened by this scene! Those days of care-free youth! That conception of a sense of responsibility! The realization of the true meaning of manhood and womanhood! E'en a reflection of the face of "The loveliest lady this side of Heaven" that once adorned the old campus!

To you who never have been charmed by its captivating beauty, or enchanted by this picturesque spot, may this be said: The above is not the effort of a Master attempting to show a little corner of a Fairyland or Paradise. It is a vital, living thing—a COLLEGE—conceived and founded by practical idealists—all God-loving christian men, erected through great sacrifice, and consecrated to the cause of making this world a better and happier place in which to live.

To all of those so fortunate as to have received in the fullest its blessings and advantages, it is known both reverently and affectionately as

DEAR WESTERN MARYLAND

The All-Western Maryland, All-Time Football Team

By W. WILSON WINGATE
of the Baltimore Sun

At least two Western Marylanders stand in the very forefront among the sports writers of this country. The one is Chandler Sprague, 1912. The other is W. Wilson Wingate, 1918, of the Baltimore Sun. Through the courtesy of THE SUN and Mr. Stanley M. Reynolds, its Managing Editor, Mr. Wingate has been loaned to his "Mother in Learning."

Fulltime they may be, attempts to compare past and present in any branch of athletics rarely fail to interest followers of the sport in question. But always when the effort is made apologies are in order at the outset.

So before discussing the selections for the All-Western Maryland, All-Time football teams, the writer wishes to have it noted that he feels justified in seeking whatever refuge is afforded by the divided responsibility necessarily entailed in such an undertaking. Western Marylanders whose recollection of Green and Gold football go back much farther than the writer's have been consulted and their opinions given every consideration. In fact, the result that may be noted on this page is largely that of an effort to arrive at a consensus of the best expert opinion available—to bring together the facts, digest them and secure as satisfactory a translation to common terms as is possible.

If the game of football had remained the same as it was a quarter of a century ago it still would not have been easy to arrive at a reliable estimate of the comparative merits of players who were stars in periods separated by a score of years. The sport is like boxing, which in its general aspects has changed little in the last half century, any one attempting a comparison of champions in different periods will find many to debate the question with him, regardless of his stand. To assert that John L. Sullivan in his prime would have defeated Jack Dempsey or vice-versa is but to start an argument.

Football has undergone a sweeping metamorphosis since the days when Roberts was starring "on the Hill." It has changed not a little since Bob Gill gained fame as an end on Green and Gold teams. In the last five or six years there have been important alterations and developments. But running through the whole history of this crowning American adaptation of an old English game have been the distinctive characteristics—the elements that have made the sport a test of the stuff of which real athletes are made. This is one common basis for the selection of an all-time, all-star football team.

However, no apology has to be made for the individuals named on these two All-Western Maryland teams. Every man in his time has been feared and respected by all opponents, and for due cause. A number had no equal in their day in Maryland, and some in their specialties have had few, if any, peers anywhere. Old records and newspaper files bear out this assertion. What gridiron combinations these selections would make, if it were possible to bring them all together at Hoffs Field in the condition that was theirs in the heyday of their fame on the old "stone pile," or Lawyer's field!

No better starting point in the discussion of the selections could be chosen than W. P. Roberts—the man whose name still is synonymous with the greatest that the Green and Gold ever has known on the gridiron. A super punter, mighty plunger, marvelous defensive player and great leader, Roberts immediately stands out as the one best bet among all that Western Maryland ever has produced in football. Roberts was phenomenal. He was the best punter in the history of the game. His last word in go back punts, is our full back and best bet. We go back to the class of 1903 to pluck Roberts.

Almost as obvious for places in a backfield that would be one of the sport world's wonders are Sam Turner, Bev. Garrett and Holly Keller, three players who were used in a combination could not do, and do better almost than the best. Speed, power, brains and stamina in wholesale quantities would be theirs. Two of the last three named were quarterbacks in their day, and they were head and shoulders above anything else in the State when they were playing. As individual performers and as pilots they had no equal among Maryland rivals. The writer selects Sam Turner to direct this All-Western Maryland first team and names Holly Keller for the position at left halfback. Bev. Garrett, the greatest defensive back the State has ever seen and a wonderful ball carrier and interferer, gets the other job at halfback on the first team.

A backfield made up of Roberts, Turner, Keller and Garrett would have everything. Each member of the quartet would be a double or triple threat—a decidedly brilliant threat in each and every position. Roberts could kick, plunge and smash the tackles. He also could run the ends, for he was fast despite his big bulk of bone and brawn. Keller, a little low, fast, shifty, brainy and as hard as nails, could do anything asked of him and do it remarkably well. Garrett could be a tearing, smashing whirlwind of some 170 pounds of the toughest bone and sinew imaginable. He would star equally on offense and defense and could pass fairly well if called upon.

Turner's specialty would be brains. Wise, crafty and daring, he would get the best out of the splendid resources at his command. Besides he would star individually on both offense and defense. He also would be a good kicker and fair passer. Turner captains the first team.

Understudies to these four men, and therefore selections for the second team backfield, would be players falling little short of the high standard set by the first string quartet. Frankie Bowers, another remarkable field general, would be the quarterback. The halfbacks would be Frank Thomas, a great triple threat man, and Molly Twigg, the greatest forward passer Maryland has ever seen. For fullbacks we take Frank Sillin, a brilliant offensive and defensive star who still is attending Western Maryland. Honorable mention should be given Harry Adkins, '07, Clarence Lawyer, Ex-'07 and Pat Henry, '05.

Starting with center on the line, we find the claims of Somerville Nicholson and Les Twigg answered immediately. Each was a splendid snapper-back and an All-Maryland selection in his day.

There is little basis for a choice between them but since Nicholson was the bigger, stronger and more rugged, the first team berth is awarded him.

Among the guard candidates we would be forced to name b.g. Hugh Ward first. Ward also played tackle at center at times. McRobie, still in school, gets the other guard position. Ed Leary and John Alexander are the second team guards.

Going to the tackles, we begin by making LeRoy Byham right tackle on the first eleven. Without a doubt he is the greatest tackle Western Maryland has ever had. On the other side we place Dewey Flanagan. Heavy Statton and Willie Gibson, two "old-timers," are picked for the second team.

As candidates for the four end positions there is a wealth of splendid material. However, the outstanding men seem to be Bob Gill, Pop Langrall, Chandler Sprague, Harry Beall and Doc Weaver. Gill as an end was what Roberts was as a back—a super performer. He did everything expected of a wingman just a little better than the best of all his contemporaries in the State. Like Sprague, Gill was as famous as a receiver of the forward pass as Molly Twigg was as the hurler. He had an ideal build for an end and was a phenomenal performer in every respect. The story of how he played through a season with a broken clavicle is well known to most followers of Western Maryland's gridiron fortunes. Gill was as game as they make them.

Langrall, who could and did play center, tackle and in the backfield in addition to end, gets the call by a narrow margin over Beall and Sprague for the other first team end. Sprague was famous for his proficiency at taking forward passes from Twigg, and Beall also was a good receiver of the aerial. Beall was a star all-round performer, and played the backfield at times. Beall and Sprague are awarded the second team jobs at end. Beall, who like Turner, first team captain, coached football at Western Maryland after graduation, is chosen captain of the second team.

Western Maryland is "Paged"!

Upon entering the hotel where I was to stop in the West a few weeks ago, I heard my name called. I was being "paged" and, of course, I gave instant attention. It is a strange feeling that comes over one when a thousand miles from home and among unfamiliar faces, he hears his name called.

Western Maryland College has been "paged." All over the State of Maryland, and in other States, attention is being called to a situation in which Western Maryland College figures. And everybody is listening to hear what response she will make!

At a dinner recently given by Dr. Goodnow, at which were present the Governor of the State, the trustees of Johns Hopkins, presidents of a number of our State colleges, and representatives from both the State and Baltimore City Departments of Education, President Goodnow outlined the changes which he is proposing for Johns Hopkins University. His suggestions for a change in the curriculum of that University have now become familiar to every one interested in higher education. The proposal is to do away with the College of Liberal Arts, and to devote entire attention to graduate work. This arrangement will eliminate at Johns Hopkins the degree of Bachelor of Arts, the first degree offered being that of Master of Arts, while the second will be that of Doctor of Philosophy.

Governor Ritchie, in his remarks, raised the point that adequate provision would have to be made somewhere to take care of the work that is now being done by the Hopkins undergraduate departments and to fill the gap thus created, and also pointed out that, if the State undertook to fill this gap, a large appropriation would have to be made from the State Treasury in order to care properly for the work given up by these contemplated changes.

On behalf of the colleges of the State, I accepted the challenge of the situation. I said that Western Maryland College was now in the midst of a campaign to raise a large sum of money, that I was sure that this money would be secured, and that with increased resources from which to draw, Western Maryland College could assume its full share of this added responsibility. I also stated that the other colleges of the State would join with us in accepting the challenge.

The colleges of the State can adequately meet the situation. Several small colleges, adequately endowed, can do the college work of the State more effectively than could one much larger institution, and the State can be saved the larger appropriations that would be necessary to take care of an institution entirely dependent upon State aid. A great opportunity is before Western Maryland College. The campaign in which we are now engaged will answer the question and will make sure the future of an institution of which we all are justly proud.

Particular attention is called to the significance attaching to the appropriation made by the Rockefeller Foundation. Their experts have made a survey of the field, and they have pronounced Western Maryland College as an institution deserving a larger support from its constituency. In effect, their appropriation means simply this: "Western Maryland College occupies a favorable position in the situation created by the intention of the Johns Hopkins University to abandon its undergraduate work. We are making this appropriation to you to help you to realize your opportunity."

Western Maryland College is being "paged"! Everybody knows that her name has been called out loud!

I believe in Western Maryland College. I believe in the men who founded the College, and in the ideals that have characterized the progress of the College from the beginning until now. I believe that such a college has a great place, in the mind of God, in the development of the leadership needed for our times and for the days that are to come. I, therefore, call upon every friend of this institution to rally to our standards, in order to make possible the realization of a great opportunity, and to make forever sure an institution founded on faith and dedicated to the ideals and inspirations of Christian education.

A. H. Ward

When Good Fellows Get Together

Anyone who attended the Western Maryland Mid-winter Banquet in Salisbury a few years ago knows that the dinner and good old-fashioned mass meeting, to be held in the beautiful new banquet room of that magnificent M. P. Church recently completed in Salisbury, will be a howling success. That is the way things are done down in that part of God's country.

This delightful get-together event, occurring entirely too infrequently, will commence at 6:30 o'clock on Tuesday evening, May 5th. It will never end, because a spirit will be awakened there which will live forever. There will be songs and talks, a good meal for a dollar, and all those things that will make one more glad that he is alive and among those present. The principal speeches of the evening will be made by Hon. Joshua W. Miles and an old and very dear friend of all, Dr. Thomas Hamilton Lewis, our beloved President Emeritus.

Any man or woman who does not want to feel a little younger, or his or her step to become a little lighter, should stay away from this meeting, because it is going to be good for what ails you.

On the following evening, Wednesday, May 6th, at the same hour, our "silent Cal" is going to wonder what in the world is happening over in the direction of Rhode Island Avenue Church, Corner of Rhode Island Avenue and First Street, N. W., Washington, D. C. Complete details are not available, but we understand that the roofs and walls of this structure are being specially braced for this occasion. There will be many entertaining features, plenty to eat, lots of music, and speeches by people who know much about life and more about many of us than we would wish to have told.

Every Western Marylander, every friend of Western Maryland, every man and woman interested in education and in the provision of adequate training facilities for their children and their neighbors' children, will at tend these great meetings, which represent the cumulative power, strength, influence and spirit of Western Maryland from the beginning until now. In addition to having plenty of fun, the sun will shine a little brighter in your life on the mornings after the big joyous nights before, because of your having met together in the furtherance of a mighty purpose that is going to confer immeasurable and everlasting benefits on posterity.

The details concerning the monster Jubilee to be held at the Maryland Casualty Company Buildings, Baltimore, on Friday evening, May 8, will be announced in the next issue.

Go early and to as many of these meetings as you can. Bring all your friends with you. Fill your ears to the point where the springs meet. Dare not to enter if you come with a single seat in your car vacant. If you or any friend should have no car, call or write Harry C. Atkins at Salisbury, or Roger J. Whiteford at Washington, and a car will come for you, for you see, these are the nights when the spirit of Western Maryland will be rampant and at large in the world, when men and women will be just boys and girls again, and when this song will fill our hearts to overflowing:

"College ties can ne'er be broken
Formed at W. M. C.
Far surpassing wealth unspoken
Ever may they be,
Western Maryland! Hail, all Hail!
Echo softly from each heart
We'll be ever loyal to thee
'Till we from life shall part."

The Committees on Potential Donors

Dr. Ward may get a little thrill when paged while far away from home, but most of us get more kick out of seeing our names in print. In a contest between the written and spoken word, Printers' Ink has a decided edge. If what is written about us is pleasant, not only can we read it over and over again in the privacy of our Sanctum Sanctorum, but also all our friends,—and enemies, if we have any—can see what is written. If the writing is unpleasant, the chances are pretty good that it is because we are temporary visitors near Ex-Warden Sweeney's old home, and then it doesn't matter anyway.

When the Committees on Potential Donors were announced, we were so much impressed by the ponderosity of this title that we wondered if we had been designated as a member. Failing to find our name in the Baltimore City group, we went down the imposing line, but nowhere could it be found,—not even away down there in good old Calvert County where there weren't as many names, and where Nettie Northam and Annie Huthins drew the lucky numbers. Feeling that there must be a valid reason for this apparently serious omission, we sat down and thought it over, and finally the light dawned.

As for that Calvert County Group, anyone who knows these two wonderful women realizes eo instantio that this section needs no further representation on this Committee. Personally, we are glad that our purse does not have to withstand the onslaughts of these splendid exemplars of the true character of real womanhood that Western Maryland is capable of producing. Greater consolation however was found by us in the ultimate realization that so many nice people,—so many strong men and capable women—were not to be found on these Committees at all. A number of football stars had to be left off of Mr. Wingate's Mythical Football Eleven, because there wasn't room for all, and for that very same reason, many competent, qualified Western Maryland men and women are not named here.

While, to some, the Committees on Potential Donors may appear to be super Committees, in reality they are subordinate both to the Committee of One Hundred, and to the sub-committees of that group. The Committees on Potential Donors are not in competition with the other Committees. As a matter of fact their chief purpose is to assist the one hundred committees. Subscriptions procured by the committees on Potential Donors are credited to the one hundred committees on whose lists the names of the contributors appear.

What an extraordinary opportunity confronts these Committees on Potential Donors! Theirs is the privilege—and it is a privilege—of selling their Alma Mater to the world.

The Alumni Advisory Committee in Athletics

By W. WILSON WINGATE
of the Baltimore Sun

This is the second article written by Mr. Wingate on subjects dealing with Athletics at Western Maryland. This star of the first magnitude in the Sports Writers' solar system has been loaned to his Alma Mater through the courtesy of THE BALTIMORE SUN, and Mr. Stanley M. Reynolds, its Managing Editor.

ALUMNI ADVISORY COMMITTEE IN ATHLETICS

Western Maryland College

Robert J. Gill, 1910, Chairman—
1010 Keyser Bldg., Baltimore.

Ralph Cover, 1910, Secretary—
1114 Continental Bldg., Baltimore.

W. P. Roberts, 1903
3420 Harford Ave., Baltimore.

ALUMNI, THEY REPRESENT YOU!

Here they are, Western Marylanders—the Alumni Athletic Committee, a body politic, diplomatic and otherwise. Let them know at the earliest possible moment of desirable young men with athletic tendencies in high schools, or with high school education, so that this exceptional triumvirate may proceed, without shouldering a handicap, with the business of selling these men the advantages of Western Maryland as an educational institution and as a field for developing their athletic abilities.

Alumni, and even alumnae, of Western Maryland, and all friends of the College, take off your hats to three of the most loyal, industrious, and efficient sons any Institution of Learning ever had!

Reference of course is to the men who compose something comparatively new and novel in the history of the great old Institution "on the Hill"—the Alumni Athletic Committee. Bob Gill, Ralph Cover, and "Robby" are Western Maryland's unpaid Athletics Sales Managers, and they make part of their business everything connected with students' sports activities at Western Maryland. We said "unpaid." This is hardly accurate, for this trio measure their compensation in terms of results achieved in the line of sound progress in Green and Gold athletics and promise for the future.

Individually, they need no introduction to any Western Marylander. Every alumnus knows of Gill, Cover and Roberts, and most of the alumni know them personally. For one thing, the men in question make it their business to see to it that Western Marylanders know what the Committee stands for and is trying to accomplish.

It is a great combination,—what one might call an ideal organization, that Alumni Athletic Committee. Taet, diplomacy, industry, driving force, knowledge of sports, and acquaintance with the proper means of combining, for the sake of the end in view, the practical with the theoretical,—all this that unusual Committee has in large gobs, and utilizes. It deserves the full and hearty co-operation of every alumnus.

Briefly stated, the object of this Committee is to aid, through personal and intelligent effort, the work of putting athletics at Western Maryland on a BIG LEAGUE basis, and effecting a stabilization at the proper point.

Right here is where the Sales Management comes in: these men are forever engaged in talking Western Maryland to friend, foe, and non-partisan along all lines connected with athletics. Being a part of her "inside" and "outside," they make it a point of being buffers between Western Maryland athletics and the interested inhabitants of the "outside." Of particular concern to the Athletic Committee is the selling of Western Maryland to clean cut, serious-minded, industrious young men desiring to continue their education after they graduate from high school. The profiting men of the student-athletic type in prep school and high school are their special objectives.

Another angle of their work has to do with the establishment and maintenance of closer relations between Western Maryland and the other State institutions, and the effecting of wholesome new alliances in sports.

Then there has been the problem of working out a sound eligibility code—an absolute necessity, and there remains the problem of enforcing strictly the spirit of such code, looking toward the establishment of the now fairly general "one-year-residence" rule and other regulations enforced among the leading institutions of the country and which form

BILL FIEBE IS COMING

Bill Fiege, stellar football, basketball, and baseball performer, of our Johanne Clayton's "Army & Navy Prep" team is coming to Western Maryland next year. Bill is one of those boys who does everything he attempts well, and is the type of player around which teams very often build. He never hears the bell at quitting time. He is a triple threat halfback, forward, and pitcher respectively, in the sports named.

the basis of the soundest athletic systems. The eligibility code has been drawn up and will become effective at the end of the present scholastic year. It will not be possible to discuss this feature here and now, but a later article will be devoted to the code as drawn up and adopted.

Good will, sound policy, fair dealing, and hard play are the foundation upon which the goal of the Committee is built. The Committee is seeing to it that none who can be made to listen will forget that Western Maryland athletics are growing and must be made to keep on growing as speedily as the institution is advancing generally. Business optimists are Gill, Cover and Roberts. They have proved that they can see as far ahead in athletics at Western Maryland as can Dr. Ward in other respects. There is much evidence, later to be discussed, that they have convinced others of the soundness of Western Maryland's foundation in athletics, and the security of its position in the future. They are looking ahead to the time when Western Maryland athletics will be mentioned in the same breath with that of the largest schools and when Western Maryland will be known, feared, and respected as thoroughly and as heartily as the greatest.

Apparently one doesn't have to look so far to see Western Maryland in the most likely candidate for the mantle of challenger of the football supremacy that has been Maryland's since "Curly" Byrd, who, incidentally, attended Western Maryland, put the College Park institution on the athletic map. The Committee saw the opportunity immediately and lost no opportunity in grabbing it. Their machinery has been functioning along this line for some time and the first results have been secured in connection with the scheduling of a game in the Baltimore Stadium with the College Parkers. That is the starting point. Watch what follows!

It is the belief of the Committee that State colleges are not fully realizing upon the splendid opportunity there is in bringing about a closer relationship among the Maryland colleges. There are great possibilities that big be up overlooked, both in stimulating a more widespread interest in Maryland in the sports' activities of the colleges, and in making sure that financial opportunities are being embraced. It is the belief that this angle could be developed to a point where the widespread interest and enthusiasm that would be lettrated and developed would be a source of great revenue to the State. But the big thing now is the placing of Western Maryland College Athletics upon a sound, stable and the selling of Western Maryland to eligible and desirable high school students with athletic tendencies. The rest will follow in the normal course.

RAY MACROBBIE

Playing his first game of football in 1923, in the short space of 15 months this Heron expugned his way to a place of Guard on the A Maryland Eleven. He has several years more at Western Maryland, and if progress continues as rapidly in the future, indications are that he will become one of the greatest stars that ever clad the College Hill. Personally, he is a up-cud, whole-hearted jow, and unless we are all wrong, Western Maryland is going to be proud of "Mec," and we are going to hear much more from him.

What does it cost to build a College?

Brains!

What does it cost,—this Fount of Knowledge?

Pains!

For men must labor, suffer, love,—
Inspired with visions born above,
If struggling youth shall ever rise,
And then, triumphant, reach the skies!

What does it cost to build a College?

Skill!

What is it makes effective knowledge?

Will!

And those who live fore'er at ease,
Nor hear the oft re-echoed pleas
Of children swiftly marching on,
Must do their bit ere they are gone!

There must be coupled, too, with Knowledge,—

Truth!

For we are sending to our College,
Youth!

And while world history they learn,
And, often, other lessons stern,
They're finding, also, how to live,
And good account, at last to give!

So, now, help spread Life's Golden Knowledge,—

You!

Who love this Old, Historic College,
Too!

'Twas consecrated with the tears
Of Saints who wrought in former years!
Now it must rise to greater height
And shed abroad a vaster light!

If you should e'er forget your College,
O,

I think you'd find,—in spite of Knowledge,—

Woe!

For Fathers, Mothers, Daughters, Sons,
Are all among the busy ones,—
And you would hate to be left out,—
So, Come, and be a loyal Scout!

DEAR MR. COVER:

There never has been a time when thorough preparation for meeting the problems of individual and social life was more needed than it is today. Every age has been an age of transition, but ours is an age of revolution! Time honored principles and standards are being scrutinized in a manner which former ages would have regarded as irreverently sceptical. The whole plan and pattern of life is undergoing alteration. What will the tomorrow be?

Tomorrow will be better than today, in every way, if the men and women who shape it are adequate to their task. And that is just another way of stating that tomorrow will be glorious if the education of today is correct, courageous, and progressive.

Certainly there is great need for just the kind of education, broadening, looking education Western Maryland College represents. May her influence be enlarged and her shadow lengthened.

Very sincerely,

(Signed) PAUL M. PEARSON,
President.

MY DEAR MR. COVER:

I am very happy to learn that Western Maryland has a splendid campaign to provide for additional Fabric construction and educational Expansion. Every movement of this kind by such an institution of learning in class and aim as Western Maryland College is a step forward in all affairs of life.

The natural and logical outcome of a combination in instruction of the fine arts, religion, science, and commerce, is a citizenship of worth in all the different spheres of human activities—the Home, the Church, and the Community.

In this respect the alumni of Western Maryland have a splendid heritage in the history and traditions of their Alma Mater; and they should not only deem it an obligation upon them, but also esteem it a privilege to get behind the present movement and by contributions of their time, talent, and money push the good purpose forward to a successful and sufficient accomplishment.

With all good wishes, I am

Most sincerely yours,

(Signed) JOHN G. MURRAY.

What Will Carroll County Do?

Twenty-two hundred men and women, scattered over 48 states, and from Canada to Brazil, and from Ireland to India, sing the praises of Carroll County because of the days that they spent at Western Maryland. Nearly three hundred additional men and women now living in Carroll County have received the benefits conferred by that Institution. All of Carroll County has profited, has been made richer in ideals and happier by virtue of the fact that this glorious college has been in its midst.

Carroll County is about to receive, large benefactions. The State of Maryland is going to toss into its lap the sum of $125,000.00. The great and wise Rockefeller Foundation, recognizing merit, is going to lay at its feet another $125,000.00. The Twenty-two hundred men and women in acknowledgment of their colossal and incalculable obligation to their Alma Mater are going to place into its arms at least $275,000.00 more. $525,000.00 is to be given to Carroll County, merely because it is the Home of Western Maryland,—given, literally given, not for individual profit nor for temporary expediency, but as a permanent investment for the present and future generations of little ones so fortunate as to start their life in this wonderful community. And this is but the beginning of such contributions to Carroll County.

Who will be benefitted most by this movement? Carroll County. Who will derive the greatest amount of happiness from this extension? Carroll County. Whose children will profit most by the atmosphere of a great er and larger Western Maryland? Carroll County's. Where will the lights of this mighty beacon in the world's advancement shine the brightest? In Carroll County.

There are more automobiles per capita in Carroll County than in any other county of the United States. Carroll County justly takes pride in the fact that it is one of the richest counties of this richest of countries. It has given large sums of money to attract industry to it. In the development of Western Maryland College, it never has been delinquent. It has played a noble and illustrious part in this scheme of things. And today it is better organized to serve and to move forward than ever before.

What will it do now to insure the perpetuity, to enlarge the foundation, to extend the scope, to increase the efficiency and to magnify the energy of this industry whose products are higher Christian Education, ideals, and culture. It is asked to do but a very small part of the total job, even though it reaps the greater part of the benefits. It is not asked to give one single cent of money. The entire county is asked to invest for its children less than 5% of the deposits in but one of its 22 banks, in a security that will yield quick and large returns, that is safe, that is permanent, and that will improve in the quality of value,—in short, a security that will stand the acid tests to be applied by the most exacting of investors. What is the outcome? That the Home of Western Maryland is going to broadcast to the world?

An alumnus is a man who demands a box seat for a dollar in a million dollar stadium built by somebody else.

It is old news to some but new to a many that our Chandler Sprague, '12, now a noted newspaper writer on the Pacific Coast, was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal by the U. S. Congress for highest gallantry in action "over there."

"All women, of whatever age, rank, profession or degree, whether virgins, maids or widows, that shall, from and after the passing of this act, impose upon and betray into matrimony any of his majesty's male subjects, by scents, paints, cosmetics, washes, artificial teeth, false hair, Spanish wool, iron stays, hoops, high-heeled shoes, or bolstered hips, shall incur the penalty of the laws now in force against witchcraft, sorcery, and such like misdemeanors, and the marriage, upon conviction, shall stand null and void."

This law, passed in 1670 during the reign of Charles II, does not appear to be effective today. In fact it is as antiquated and out-of-date, as is the picture some alumnus still have of the College they once attended.

Any alumnus of Western Maryland who has progressed as much in his personal affairs as has his Alma Mater in the days since he left her, is a most successful man. The only ones who do not know this, if there are any of such, are those who refuse to open their eyes to the facts.

The wooden nutmeg goes to Joe Bona, now at W. M. C., for the greatest effort to make good in athletics. Joe is the midget who starred in the 6-0 game with Bucknell last year. The other day he was seen carrying around under his arm a large slab of marble. Investigation showed Joe to be official score keeper for the inter-class baseball games, and this miniature tomatstone was Joe's score card. During the summer months Joe wrestles with a pick at the bottom of a hole known as a coal mine. In the fall he plays football. During the rest of the year this towering giant of five feet and a few inches high tries to keep in condition in ways such as above stated. Some morning we are going to wake up and find Ward Hall missing. No doubt it will be found somewhere on Joe's person. It is reported that Joe is going to take "Bible," so that he can have some large books to carry to class.

Perhaps good use for this energy can be found during the Campaign. It is suggested that Joe be used to assist in handling the bags and wagon loads of executed subscriptions that are going to entirely bury the Administration Building, commencing May eleventh.

All Western Marylanders will do well to consider receiving the "ALOHA" annually. This is becoming a stupendous production and a real work of art. It is bound in leather and contains the very latest views and statistics of current college life. It is worth $4.00 of anyone's money. The view on the front page of the last issue of the Bulletin was to be shown for the first time in the 1922 "ALOHA," but through the kind courtesy of its managing staff, this splendid scene was published here. Incidentally, the ALOHA has become a much more beautiful volume than ever before, due to the return to Westminster of Mr. Serick S. Wilson, formerly of the Harris & Ewing, and the Bachrach Studios, in Washington and Newport.

Almost every institution of learning has among its constituents those who blame the college for their failure to attain all of their heart's desires in the world of affairs. Colleges are not super-human agencies, and cannot warrant more than the making the most out of the materials provided from which the cloth is to be woven. In other words, buddy boy, can your growth and admit that the old college did it first.

Ten different states were represented on the Green Terror football squad of 1924. The number will be materially increased another year. Rubbing shoulders with this cosmopolitan group is a considerable education in itself.

Dr. W. F. Elgin, '23, has made more small-pox vaccine than any other man in the world. Dr. Elgin is Director of the Smallpox Vaccine Laboratories of the H. K. Mulford Company. This sort of fame does not spread as speedily as the achieving of great wealth or power, but if we all could hear the prayers of those saved from this terrible disease by the scientific efforts of this man, it is probable that Dr. Elgin universally would be regarded as one of the outstanding scientists of this generation.

To those who have never tasted the exquisite sweetness of unselfish sacrifice, come on in, the water is fine. It will put a smile on your face, fill your soul with sunshine, make you feel years younger, and your business or profession, for some unaccountable reason, will become more successful.

Byham: "Say, Coach, what's this school, PENDING, we play on the 10th."

W. M. C.'s crack debating team took a fall out of another hefty opponent when it defeated Bucknell by a unanimous decision last Friday night. "Coming events cast their shadows," and Charlie Moran can well afford to devote serious thought to the game between his Risons and the Terrors on September 26, next, in Bucknell's new Memorial Stadium.

Western Maryland's Eligibility Code

By W. WILSON WINGATE

of the Baltimore Sun

Again, through the courtesy of THE BALTIMORE SUN and Mr. Stanley M. Reynolds, its Managing Editor, Mr. Wingate, one of the country's outstanding sports writers, writes about a phase of Western Maryland athletics.

In this day, the desirability—yes, even the necessity—for a proper code to govern the eligibility of athletes in colleges is too obvious to demand more than mere superficial treatment here.

For many years Western Maryland, along with all the other institutions of higher learning in the State of Maryland had nothing more than indefinite and largely flexible unwritten standards by which to measure the fitness of young men who were candidates for the various representative athletic teams.

In the first place, the evils which a code such as Western Maryland now has and which is printed elsewhere on this page, is intended to correct, are of comparatively recent origin. Commercialism, if it may be said to exist now in inter-collegiate sports, and professionalism among college athletes, were factors that were negligible a relatively few years ago. These vices came with the tidal wave of popularity that has marked the growth of the great national game, baseball, since the formation of the second major league, the American League, with the consequent birth of what is known as the "world series," and with the even more miraculous strides of that distinctively college sport, football, since the abolition of the old "mass-momentum" style of play, and the introduction of the forward pass, with the consequent enlargement of opportunity for spectacular play, and which has been the great starting point of the modern game.

The money and fame possible of achievement by athlete and institution alike have been the elements that have caused these regrettable conditions to prevail and has forced the imposition of much needed restrictions, first by the larger institutions of the country and later by others not quite so large.

However, in many smaller colleges it has been found practically impossible even to make an effort to follow the lead taken by the larger schools, without completely killing off competitive athletics.

But Western Maryland has passed that point. It is growing and will continue to grow by leaps and bounds and "big league methods for a big league school" are now in order. Hence the stringent and commendable code drawn up by the Alumni Advisory Committee in Athletics, and approved by the College administration. "Western Maryland, prepare for much greater enrollment," might be a fitting slogan for every friend of the school to adopt, and, "Western Maryland,

Article I—This code shall become effective on and from June 15, 1925.

Article II—This code shall govern the eligibility of all men participating for Western Maryland College in all inter-collegiate games in the major sports of football, baseball, basketball and track.

Article III—The Alumni Advisory Committee in Athletics (hereinafter called the "Committee") shall be the sole judge of the eligibility of all men playing hereunder.

Article IV—No man shall be eligible to play in any such contest unless and until he shall have given to the Director of Athletics of the College a written statement duly sworn to by him, and in a form approved by the committee, which statement shall contain a complete record of his previous participation in athletics. The Committee may make further inquiry and may require additional statements at its discretion.

Article V—No man shall be eligible hereunder unless and until such sworn statement shall have been passed upon by the Committee and he shall have been declared by it to be eligible.

Article VI—No man shall be eligible to play hereunder unless he shall be a candidate for a Bachelor's Degree, and shall be taking the required number of semester hours leading thereto.

Article VII—No man shall be eligible to play hereunder who shall have received a Bachelor's Degree from any college of equal rank and classification.

Article VIII—No man shall be eligible who plays under an assumed name.

Article IX—No man shall be eligible to play hereunder while his grades in more than 25 per cent of his studies are below the passing mark.

Article X—No man shall be eligible to play hereunder in any sport in which he has played for Western Maryland College or any other college or colleges of equal rank and classification for the whole or any part of a total of four different playing seasons.

Article XI—No man who shall have attended any other college of equal rank and classification during the whole or any part of the previous year shall be eligible to play hereunder until he shall have been a student in the college for a period of at least one full semester.

Article XII—No man shall be eligible to play hereunder who shall accept or shall have accepted or received money for engaging in any form of athletic contest as a player or coach.

Article XIII—In cases where compliance with this code or some other specified code is included in contracts for the playing of games in any major sport, no protest of the eligibility of any player shall be recognized or effective unless made to the Director of Athletics of the College at least two weeks before the day on which the game in question is to be played.

prepare to meet the strongest and most reputable in competitive athletics," is the policy, if not the slogan, of the alumni athletic authorities.

The code prepared by Robert J. Gill, Ralph Cover and W. P. Roberts, the members of the Alumni Advisory Committee in Athletics, is scheduled to become effective on June 15, next.

It will be neither necessary nor possible to go into detail regarding the reasons for or the results to be expected from the various component regulations specified. Each will speak for itself. However, it might be well to say that in some respects it is even more stringent than that in operation in a great many institutions.

Many colleges permit the playing of graduates—expressly prohibited by Article VII of this code. Special students, frequently held eligible elsewhere, are ruled out by Article VI. The limitation imposed with respect to grades by Article IX usually is left discretionary with the college authorities. Article XII covering professionalism is most severe and omits the loopholes usually to be found in this connection.

Moreover, there are further limiting Articles pending, and when they shall have been incorporated—as they will be within the next twelve months, the Committee declares—Western Maryland will have as rigid a code as any institution in the country.

The most important additional limitation planned is the "freshmen" or "one-year residence," rule. This regulation, according to the Committee, will become effective in fall of 1926. When this day comes it will mean that no freshman or other first-year student will be permitted to represent Western Maryland in competitive inter-collegiate athletics on Green Terror Varsity teams.

CARROLL "SHORTY" LONG

Is in, as every, high school stars fall miserably short of making the grade of college football. "Shorty" came to us with a splendid record behind him, having been chosen on All-Maryland Scholastic Football Teams for two years. Needless to say he was made of that stuff which caused him to be selected in his first season on the All-Maryland College Team.

"Shorty" has a long time to go, is very popular among both men and women, and is a splendid student.

POLY SATELLITES TO BECOME GREEN TERRORS

"Shorty" Long, the chief representative of Baltimore Poly on the Green Terror squads, is going to find plenty of old friends with him next year. "Mose" Machemer, Poly's giant football captain of 1924, center on All-Maryland scholastic teams for two years, and star basketball and Lacrosse player, weighing 195 when down to weight, and well over 6 ft. in height, is going to try to prove that our own "Frankie" Bowers, 1913, knows how to teach the game. Likewise, "Ogie" Brall, diminutive basketball star of the same school will be with us.

The Old Professor

By HERBERT TAYLOR STEPHENS, A. M., D. D.

This, the second of a series of poems by Dr. Stephens, Professor of Philosophy and Biblical Literature at Western Maryland, speaks of one of the treasured links between every Alumnus and his Alma Mater.

Gold had he none, but what he had
He gladly, freely did impart;
And many a grateful, trembling heart
Was by his word of truth made glad.

'Twere wiser, some would say, to save
And pile up golden caducei high,
Until they reach into the sky!—
Such worth is cancelled by the grave!

Th' some would call the Prof. a fool,—
And others show no gratitude,
He still dispenses mental food,
And gives his best to our old School!

For in the lives of maids and men,
He sees the growing strength of soul;—
He wants them all to reach the goal,
And bends unto his tasks again!

I think he'll labor on till time
Rings down the curtain on the scene;
But, O, let's keep his memory green
E'en by a little halting rhyme!

For he so loved those girls and boys,—
Your children, all he tried to reach
How they Truth's loftier heights might reach,
And realize eternal joys!

DEAR MR. COVER:

I think the colleges like Western Maryland College have a place in the modern world whose significance can hardly be over-estimated. In the days when many institutions are putting their emphasis upon other phases of education, it is worth more than can be said to have such colleges as this, with their clear, unmistakable, uncompromising devotion to genuine culture and Christian character. I know of no institutions which are doing a more useful work for higher education than these. And, as an alumnus of one such institution myself, my enthusiasm for the institution grows with the years. I find myself increasingly grateful for the privilege of having attended it and the honor of being a graduate of it, and this spirit I commend your own alumni.

MY DEAR MR. COVER:

Christian Education for which Western Maryland College stands is the first and most vital necessity in this nation. I sincerely hope that your college will be enabled to do its work upon a very much better scale, and with even greater efficiency. No one who knows the condition of the United States today, and who is loyal to the basic truths of New Testament faith and anxious for the sound learning, can question the importance of the enterprise you have at heart.

With best wishes, believe me

Cordially yours,

A. M. ISANOGLE

DEPARTMENT OF EDUCATION

Mr. Isanogle was elected in 1920 to head the Department of Education and was asked to reorganize its curriculum. Under his guidance, the work in Education has become an important factor in the college and an eminent service to the State. This department now enrolls a large percentage of the students in the college, and supplies most of the new teachers, particularly women instructors, in the annual turnover in the Maryland high schools. Mr. Isanogle brought with him a wide experience in high school administration and the invaluable results of his studies in secondary education at Johns Hopkins University, where he did his graduate work.

9. Salaries paid the members of the teaching staff should be adequate. The minimum will depend upon the local cost of living as well as upon other factors.

10. In administering entrance requirements, exceptions should be few and made only for reasons of great weight.

Western Maryland was represented in the Association of Colleges of the Middle States and Maryland for the first time in the 1920 meeting.

In the fall of 1922, the Commission on Higher Institutions made a thorough survey of the college and Western Maryland was fully accredited.

In order to get accredited with an endowment of $500,000 instead of $500,000, an income other than that from endowment was assured. Having then a student body of 250, it has grown to almost double that number in two years. Endowment and other income have not increased in proportion to this increased enrollment.

It is evident that most of the standards determining a colleges classification are directly or indirectly affected by financial income. The effective functioning of a college depends upon three factors: faculty, student body and equipment, two of which are supported by, and the third leans heavily on financial income. There was a time, now past or passing, when some men and women, real Professors and Instructors, taught in the colleges, for the very love of teaching and received little or no salary for so doing. The college now must go into the open market and buy its Professors in competition with universities and with State and County Departments of Education. The tax-supported institutions have difficulty in filling their schools with satisfactory instructors and to pay them adequate salaries. It is not at all uncommon for graduates from college, who enter the teaching profession to receive forth with larger salaries than the college professors who trained them. This points to a condition which is growing more serious constantly. In order that competent professors may be secured, their salaries must compare favorably with salaries in other educational fields and with the salaries and wages in other callings of less importance to the general welfare.

Again, the College inadequately financed is apt to err in the selection of its student body. In order to overcome the handicaps arising because of lack of sufficient funds, admission requirements too often are administered loosely. Wishing to render maximum service, students are enrolled in numbers beyond the capacity of the college to care for them.

This, of course, results in a demand for more instructors, larger equipment, additional buildings,—all requiring funds and more funds. Failing to secure them, the college faces the alternative of retrenchment in enrollment or of doing sub-standard work. College administrations must refuse to sanction a one or confess to a halfhearted effort. Growth in service of necessity requires substantial increase of fixed revenue. In fact, the maintenance of service conforming to ever enlarging and broadening standards demands greater annual income.

In 1919, the Association of Colleges of the Middle States and Maryland, adopted a definition and standards for the Colleges of Liberal arts and sciences and the Commission on Institutions of Higher Education. The definition and standards adopted are similar in character to those adopted by other regional associations and other bodies interested in the same problems and, in part, are as follows:

1. An institution to be ranked as a college of liberal arts must have at least eight professors giving their entire time to instruction therein; must require for admission not less than four years of academic or high school preparation, or its equivalent, and must conduct a curriculum of four full years of approved grade in liberal arts and sciences.

It was recommended that in interpreting this definition the following standards should be employed with due regard to the fact that an institution falling below the desired standard in certain particulars may more than make good the lack by excellence in others.

2. Members of the teaching staff in regular charge of classes should have had not less than one year of graduate study and a majority of them should have had training equivalent to that required for the degree of Doctor of Philosophy; in all cases efficiency in teaching as well as the amount of research should be taken into account.

3. A preponderance of the teachers who have independent charge of classes should be of professional rank.

5. The curriculum should provide both for breadth of study and for concentration.

6. The curriculum should have justifiable relation to the resources of the institution.

7. There should be a library and laboratory facilities adequate to the work which the institution assumes and these should be kept up to their full efficiency by means of adequate annual expenditures.

8. There should be a minimum productive endowment, beyond all indebtedness, of at least $500,000. Financial support or contributed services equivalent in value to the endowment specified are substitutes.

This interest in and loyalty to the cause by successful business men who have not had the opportunity of securing a higher education are to be accounted for in the very short statement that they have learned that the way to make this world a little sweeter, is to put a little sweetness into it themselves.

There are many kinds of men of wealth. Some possess little else but wealth. Some are possessed by their wealth. Others are men of vision as well as men of possession. They are rich in character as well as in gold. They care for life more than they care for things. They are aware of their eternal as well as their temporal relations. They are men of light and of leading as well as men of means. To the one class, dollars are the little yellow idols of what they term a more or less corrupt civilization. To the other class, they are the materials with which to build a Road to Paradise.

During the War, this American Ace bagged six planes and two balloons, and was wounded, and taken captive behind the German lines, where he was held for four months. Afterward he was decorated by the Prince of Wales with the Distinguished Flying Cross.

There are a few, no doubt, who feel that their debt to their "Mother in Learning" has been completely extinguished. In the old days, the total cost of a college education, covering room, board, laundry, and tuition was the large and angry sum of $200. It was cheaper for parents to send their children to college under such conditions than to have them at home during the year. Inasmuch as the inexorable law of nature says that you can't get something for nothing in this world, what is the answer? It is that someone else footed the bill, partly in money and largely in sacrifice. And for what purpose? In order that you might be a better man or a better woman, and more fully equipped to face the morning sun.

Eliminating all sacrifices, and just counting the actual physical cost of what any alumnus secured in college, after adding interest on the money, you will find it runs to more,—much more,—than the $375 cash is now asked to contribute or secure.

This is one of the world's avenues leading to enlightenment and refinement. Every spot, every tree, every stone, once so commonplace, now has associations, hallowed and treasured by a multitude of people.

The old college is calling to them and to all the world,---not in desperation, nor meekly, nor humbly, but enthusiastically, with justifiable pride, and with its head held high,---that all might see and share in the precious opportunity to make this one of the glorious fountains of wisdom of the universe.

It is saying in its quiet, serene, beautiful way,---"Here is a gateway that may be made to lead to greater culture, vision, happiness and service. Here is a road, neither steep nor rough, leading to knowledge, power and truth. Here are buildings bearing the names of and dedicated to some of God's masterpieces among men. Here is tradition, honor, beauty, solitude, cleanliness, and consecration to divine principles. They are yours,---to make of them what you will."

This call is more than a challenge to the loyalty to Alma Mater. It extends beyond things temporal. It is an acid test of the stern stuff of which men are made.

Western Maryland's 1925 Football Schedule

By W. WILSON WINGATE

of the Baltimore Sun

Through the courtesy of THE BALTIMORE SUN and Mr. Stanley M. Reynolds, its Managing Editor, Mr. Wingate, prominent and capable sports writer and one of Western Maryland's own, writes about a matter that is pleasing to all alumni and friends.

Never before in its history has a program of such merit been arranged, as that constituting the 1925 Football Schedule of the Green and Gold. The card of nine games provides a well-balanced season, with two opponents which might be classified as having much weaker teams ordinarily than Western Maryland. The regularity, however with which supposedly impotent rivals have been rising against their recognized superiors and defeating them in the past several seasons makes the weaker opponent sometimes more to be dreaded than the stronger one.

First on the list is the Bucknell game at Lewisburg, Pa., in September. Here one of the schedule's high spots is found directly in its initiation, for Western Maryland, in holding Bucknell to the same score by which the Pennsylvanians defeated Navy, sealed a pinacle not previously gained by a team representing it. Charlie Moran, famous as coach of the Centre College eleven, realizes now he has not taken on a foe to be despised, and will have his players primed for Western Maryland's second invasion. This is the only contest to be played during 1925 by the Terrier team outside of the State of Maryland.

Athletic relations having been resumed with the University of Maryland, the college Park eleven will be tackled in the next game of the season at the Baltimore Stadium. It is Western Maryland's second hard settee in as many weeks, and the eleven will be called upon to strive its utmost to open its stadium season in an auspicious manner, preparatory to its second visit to the big arena, when it clashes with Loyola.

Maryland with its consistent growth, is producing stronger teams each year, and a victory for Western Maryland probably would assure the Green and Gold a place at the top in Maryland football circles and open the path toward a clear state title, rather than one shared with other institutions. When this attraction was announced, Stadium athletic authorities looked upon it as one of the best and most interesting games on their program. It will afford the Baltimore alumni a chance to see their team in action early in the season against an opponent truly worthy of its steel, without the inconvenience of travelling, and it will offer the Baltimore public at large its first sight in two years of the modern Western Maryland eleven.

Western Maryland gladiators did not enter Baltimore last season at all. Prospects promise that the Western Maryland warriors will more than live up to expectations. The American University, at Westminster, is the next game, and is looked upon as a relaxation between the two difficult opening struggles and the ensuing intersectional clash with Kentucky Wesleyan. A game of two of this nature is found on just about every football schedule in the country, not even excluding the famous Notre Dame. The big Three teams are notorious for their selection of easy opponents before hard contests, and it is a recognized sound principle of schedule-making strategy. How the mighty are surprised oft times has been touched upon before, and one but needs to conjure the visions of proud Harvard succumbing to Centre, Bucknell with its back to the wall in the 1924 W. M. C. game, and the Yale Bulldogs throwing a fit at the antics of the University of Maryland lads, to warn Western Maryland not to accept any opponent as defeated until the final whistle blows.

The great intersectional clash with Kentucky Wesleyan will be played on Hoffa Field and this glad occasion has been designated as Carnival Day. Wesleyan lost but one game last year, that to the Southland's Golden Tornado, Georgia.

Following the Kentucky battle, Western Maryland rides down to Baltimore for its second Stadium appearance, the settee with Loyola College. The Jesuits, in their first season last year, could not have been directed strong, but in the coming season under the direction of Jack Coffall, All-American Star, who will introduce Notre Dame into Maryland, they will bear careful watching. Loyola's material is good, and its ambition is exceeded probably only by its willingness to work hard to achieve its ends. Western Maryland and Loyola both offer proof of the statement that such a combination is likely to spell disaster to any obstacle thrown athwart the possessor's path. When an immovable object meets an irresistible force, even learned scientists find their theories unable to predict any outcome. With the clash of Western Maryland, the irresistible force of progress, and Loyola an immovable object of confidence in its own ability to advance, a spectacle worthwhile should be provided.

Then the Green and Gold is afforded another hall, the game with St. Francis being classed as a rest before the true climax of the season, the playing of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis, on November 7. That date should be heavily ringed right now on every alumnus' calendar, so that no engagement of any kind shall be allowed to conflict with his attendance when the Green and Gold mingles with the Navy Blue. Months of planning and arranging were necessary to secure this contest, late in the season, and Western Maryland has plucked the plum so much to be desired by its state rivals.

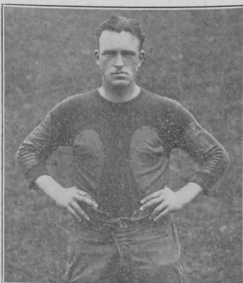

Western Maryland has not encountered the Midshipmen in football since the advent of the modern game. With the athletic advancement that has come to "the hill," however, it is but natural that stronger and more difficult opponents should be sought and played. Progress is not found on the primrose way, and the clearing of obstructions of graduated weight from the path ends in no bars being too strong for abolition.

A feud of long standing will be settled at Hoffa Field, on Alumni Home Coming Day, the week following the Navy struggle, when Washington College crosses the bay to look grips with Western Maryland in an effort to break the tie in which the two institutions have been involved for the last three games. Last season the deadlock was through the medium of a 12-to-12 score, and, as each team loses few men, a struggle which will be sung in the sagas of both institutions for some time should ensue.

The season closes with the Fathers' Day clash with Manhattan College of New York. The metropolitan eleven usually rates pretty well, so that the last game of Western Maryland's season likely will not give the athletes a "set-up" for the concluding number on the program. However, the contest may not prove to be the last after all, even though it of the final on the schedule, for negotiations are proceeding for an intersectional game on the Saturday following Thanksgiving Day. The name of the college to be met if plans carry through may not be divulged at the present time, but its calibre can be assured as ranking high indeed.

This may well be termed the "home-game lover's schedule." Every game save one is played in Baltimore or within an hour's ride from Baltimore. And each game is played on a great field having a wide reputation. Bucknell's Memorial Stadium seats 35,000, comfortably. The Baltimore Stadium has a capacity of more than 70,000. Farrisburg Field will take care of over 15,000, and Hoffa Field will hold as many. Add to this the high calibre of teams to be played, and you have the situation there, with the toughest schedule in its history,—the best among colleges in this vicinity, Western Maryland is awaiting its greatest year on the gridiron.

The Better Investment

By HERBERT TAYLOR STEPHENS, A. M., D. D.

Dr. Stephens again adds a little joy by another of his splendid poems.

"I'll hoard in safety vaults my gold,"—

The rich man in his folly said:

"I'll live in plenty when I'm old;"—

Lo! On the morrow he was dead!

"I'll build a mausoleum great,"—

Another said, with swelling pride,

Defying Time, and Love, and Fate,

And ere the dawn he, too, had died;

"I'll help my fellow men to live,

And share their sorrow, and their joy,"—

Another said, and turned to give,—

And lo! his giving saved his boy!

For selfishness is still a sin,

And he who works, and gives, and loves,

Achieves success,—without,—within,—

And Mercy's greater triumph proves!

A Last Call

During the next week it will be determined whether Western Maryland College is to meet the challenge of the present educational situation.

It is offered $250,000 from outside sources if we raise $375,000 ourselves. This in itself is a challenge that ought to bring every friend of Western Maryland to attention.

But this is not all. The success of this campaign will enable the development of a college of the very highest standards, and will make it possible for it to take the position that it deserves among the great American Institutions of learning.

Upon investigation, it was found that it would cost from $25,000 to $35,000 to put the conductive of the campaign in charge of one of the great promotional financial agencies. Rather than do this, a group of us are doing this work ourselves without compensation. This means that every dollar raised in this campaign will go directly to the purpose intended. The legitimate expenses of the campaign are provided for otherwise.

In addition to the time that I am giving to this campaign, I am also making a contribution of $5,000. I am doing this so that I may have a part in the sacrifice of others. The object to be gained by the success of this campaign is so vital to the future of the college that, I think, all of us ought to go to the limit in order to bring success out of this whole movement.

There should be at least fifty others who will join me in making, each, a contribution of $5,000. So, for the sake of a holy cause, I throw down this challenge to fifty others and dare them to take it up!

A. H. Ward

President, Western Maryland College.

The Home of Western Maryland is Answering

The vigorous and effective ROTARY CLUB OF WESTMINSTER, whose motto is "Service Above Self," has endorsed the Campaign!

The strong, wide-awake, and efficient WESTMINSTER CHAMBER OF COMMERCE has endorsed the Campaign!

The diligent WESTMINSTER WOMAN'S CIVIC LEAGUE has endorsed the Campaign!

The vital and forceful WOMAN'S CLUB OF WESTMINSTER has endorsed the Campaign!

And of the one hundred and sixty Carroll County's well-known, prominent and influential citizens to whom the subject was mentioned, the one hundred and fifty-six named below have endorsed the Campaign!

What is the meaning of this widespread, unified, vigorous local sanction? Is it the superficial, half-hearted act of indifferent organizations and individuals? It is not. Carroll County is awakening to a consciousness of the momentous consequences attending the success of this movement. Its people are beginning to realize what profits and benefits will accrue to its children, and what it means to the ideals and morals of the community, to have more than $500,000 poured into it by the outside world for the increasing of the effective scope of Western Maryland. It is beginning to see that colleges, like individuals, must move either forward or backward. It now knows that the greater happiness, that the improved atmosphere, that the nobler ideals, that the increased candlepower of education's light, that the extending of the outside point of view, that the enlarged efficiency and magnified energy, that the more liberal culture,—all are beyond the calculable value of dollars and cents.

Carroll County as in the past, is rising in its God-given might to meet this emergency. Carroll County is going to prove itself to be worthy of the multitude of natural blessings that has been bestowed upon it. Indeed Carroll County is going to show that idleness and culture, and Christian enlightenment has blazed forth from Western Maryland College, carrying over hills and down into its valleys, and into the homes, and has made its permanent impression upon the character and lives of those around it.

WE ARE WINNING!

Shades of Herman Bambino Babe Ruth, and Johnnie Roser! Did you see that $5000.00 home-run wallop that our Captain, Dr. Ward, slammed over the center field fence in the very first inning? Zowie! Let's sew this game up right now! Next batter up! That means YOU!

WORK HARDER! WORK HARDER!

The nicest part is that Dr. Ward is going to get more real joy out of seeing those five thousand bucks, cartwheels, iron men and smackers work in enlightenment's course for years and years than anything else he could do. He surely has found the "open sesame" to earthly happiness.

WE ARE WINNING!

The call from the side lines in the fall of the year is "Hit Low!" The call in this springtime now is "Hit High!"

WORK HARDER! WORK HARDER!

What is a Christian college? Not the teaching of such subjects as Mathematics, Language, Literature, History, or Science,—not even the teaching of Religion. The college gets to be a Christian college in consequence of its atmosphere, its tone, and its ideals. It exalts learning. It sets before its ideal as an ideal the highest culture and the truest relationships. It believes in character.

Commencing May 11, Western Maryland headquarters will be at the Emerson Hotel, and a special daily table d'hôte luncheon will be served on the mezzanine floor from 12:30 p. m. until 2:00 p. m., during the week. The doors will be open wide to all former students, future students and friends. The only limitations imposed by the management are that the furniture be saved, that the silver be left in the room and that cats, bon constrictors, chewing gum, and other pets shall be parked on the outside.

WE ARE WINNING!

The late Mrs. Charles B. Miller, (nee Sadie Kneller,) 1885, was known as the greatest woman photographer in America. Mr. Miller, 1881, formerly of Carroll County, is the capable president of the Fidelity and Deposit Company of Baltimore.

WORK HARDER! WORK HARDER!

At the close of the Civil War, an old farmer, bereft of his sons, sat down in a certain college chapel. He saw the students come in and had a vision of the long procession of students throughout the years. He said to himself: "These will go and others will come. These professors will go and others will take their places. My farm would just about endow a chair." And then he obeyed that impulse! Could any other farm in that country have produced so valuable a crop as has that one during the last 40 years? The principle has not changed since that time. Five hundred dollars invested now will help to endow chairs for many generations to come.

WE ARE WINNING!

The laziest alumnus we know of recently bought a Lizzie so he wouldn't have to shake the ashes off his cigar. We understand he has made application for the job of spokesman for Mr. Coolidge.

WORK HARDER! WORK HARDER!

The true man of wealth is a man of both property and ideals, of both possession and character. He has abundance of things, but his life does not consist either in these things or their abundance. He puts in gold and gets out character. He gives silver and receives an eternal influence. Money seemed good once because it was money; now it seems good because it can be transmitted into something vastly better than money. Once he wanted to be worth a million; now he wants to be "worth having." He once rather resented the appeal of the college President for an endowment. He now sees that the college will make the community rich in learning and that fine sense of civic duty which makes republics possible.

WE ARE WINNING!

If there ever was a man who, in addition to being extraordinarily competent, conforms to the "provisions of the code of the true sport, it is our "Curly" Byrd, now Athletic Director and Assistant to the President at University of Maryland. "Curly" never quits; never has an alibi; never gloats when he wins; never crabs when he loses; never takes unfair advantage; never asks odds that he is unwilling to give; never under-estimates his opponent; never over-estimates his own; and always he remembers that the GAME is the thing; and he honors the GAME and plays it straight and hard. Upon such a foundation has his institution thrived. Western Maryland is proud of the fact that "Curly" once graced its halls.

Our Campaign Chairman---Robert J. Gill

As a student, he scaled the loftiest pinnacle to a summa cum laude.

As an athlete, he overpowered the great handicap of poor health, surmounted the encumbrance of a weak physique, and did honor upon the field of sport both at Western Maryland the University of Virginia.

In the Great War, without previous military experience, and in the short span of nineteen months he achieved the rank of a Lieutenant Colonel, and became Assistant Chief of Staff of the Rainbow Division, famous for its daring and effective exploits at Lorraine, Champagne, Chateau Theirry, St. Mihiel, Argonne and Sedan.

In his chosen profession without influence and unaided, he has gained a position of enviable proportions.

What is the reason for the uniformity of color and texture of this thread that runs through the fabric of the world's affairs? Brilliance of intellect? Unquestionably this has contributed a share, although numbers of lustrous minds fail to successfully solve the problems that life presents. Magnetic personality? This, too, did its little part, but many an "attractive fellow's" name has gone unheralded in the field of human accomplishment.

What then is it? It is "Bob's" philosophy of life.

He is determined to keep young so long as the engine runs. He wants no one to tell him how the last chapter ends, for he wants to be wide-eyed, to be surprised continually by life, and "to carry youth's bright and spangled standards until every lance is splintered and every banner frayed."

He believes in laughter,—that life is what we make it, and "why not let it be a blur of blossoms?"

He believes in work and thinks that all should have a little of the dream of empire in their hearts.

He is a consummate optimist, is convinced that the world is nearer right than wrong, and better today than ever before. First, last, and all the time, "Bob" is a constructionist and a builder among men, and while ever summoning into play the best of his abilities, he keeps his eyes on the ultimate goal and lets consequences take care of themselves.

And this philosophy he has applied rigorously to his relations with Alma Mater. When he follows its men in the making on the football field, his compensation is measured in terms of something akin to paternalistic pride and joy in the development and advancement of Western Maryland's boys. And when he gives days of his time and thousands of his money to the cause of his College, he but wills to taste the ecstatic sweetness of unselfish service.

Winning Teams Mean Athletics for All

By W. WILSON WINGATE

of the Baltimore Sun

Mr. Wingate, nationally known sports writer and one of Western Maryland's own, again writes for us, through the courtesy of THE BALTIMORE SUN and Mr. Stanley M. Reynolds, its managing editor.

To the skeptical who query "Why all this fuss over good and winning athletic teams?" a direct and logical answer may be made.

Athletics are the backbone of student activities, and form a big part of college life. They help to make character and a strong body, give men a fine conception of the loyalty which marks the college man, and develop keen minds, resourcefulness and courage. The ideals fostered in sports form the basis of the integrity and strength which men to be successful so much need in after life. They offer the opportunity for the systematic development of a sound body, and combine with it the requisites of a manly man and a good citizen. They are a great force for college unity and individual accomplishment.

Naturally, in direct proportion as a greater number of students realize these benefits, athletics may be regarded as more successful.

The winning team is more attractive to the student than the losing one, and therefore keener competition for places on such develops, with the much-to-be desired result that a greater number share these invaluable benefits of competitive athletics. That's the real answer to the question.

Athletics in educational institutions find their proper place as a necessary adjunct to the courses by providing for the physical well-being and mental recreation of as many students as possible. The ideal condition in theory is for every man to take part in some form of athletic endeavor, and the nearer this ideal is approached, the greater is the real basic success of any institution's sports program. Good teams, representative teams and winning teams are direct promoters of success considered in that sense, for when a team consistently loses, when it is the laughing stock of its rivals, and when it is scheduled by all as a weak opponent, the prospects attending the trying for a place on such a team is hardly conducive to the inspiration of keen rivalry among students for the positions.

Western Maryland is progressing in the right direction in a rapid, yet sane, way toward achieving the end of turning out winning teams, and thus encouraging far greater numbers to realize upon the advantages to their physique by the rigors of training and regular, scientifically directed exercise, as well as the other benefits accruing, as above enumerated. The desire to win and the pleasure of competition are the main springs of athletics in our schools and colleges, but the all in all of athletics. They are but the seasoning which makes the food more palatable.

Western Maryland is growing. It's enrollment has doubled. It's Alumni Association is becoming more keenly alive to the possibilities of helping. It's athletic teams are becoming more truly representative of its type of institution and are showing commensurate growth with that of the college itself. The growth has been accentuated in football in the last few seasons. For some years to have considered the teams of Western Maryland contenders for any championship would have been ridiculous. Only four years ago the football team lost every game on its schedule save one, and that one resulted in a scoreless tie!

At the present time, however, conditions are reversed. By virtue of having beaten all State opponents play with the exception of Washington, which was tied, Western Maryland took its place at the top of the State Colleges in a tie for the football championship. In addition, in 1921, five of its players earned places on the All-Maryland football team, three on the first team, Sillin, Byham and Perry, and Long and MacRobbie on the second. All will return to college next year. The baseball team is in the midst of a hard campaign, and is proving to be a winning combination. Track is being revived in a manner which promises a soundly-built organization for the future. The basketball five closed a successful season recently. Football, however, is the one sport upon which the athletic authorities are concentrating most at present, and prospects were never so bright.

HALL DUNCAN TO RETURN

Everybody is delighted to hear that Hall Duncan, star center and end, will return to Western Maryland next fall. Hall is the kind of boy that helps to elevate the standards of any college. He indulges in many phases of college activities, and does everything he attempts well. His 20 lbs. additional avoidoids also will help.

Also, the schedule for the coming year, discussed at length in another article, is far superior to any ever before played by a Western Maryland team, and includes games with the Navy, Maryland, Kentucky Wesleyan, and Bucknell,—opponents strong enough to tax the powers of the mightiest.

Nor is the showing of the present athletic teams a spasmodic one, that will be forgotten in the near future as the teams produced return to the level of mediocrity that was once theirs. Freshmen of known athletic ability, real live men, worthy associates in every respect of any student in college, and representatives of the highest type of young manhood have signified their intentions of attending Western Maryland.

Mose Machamer, Captain of the Baltimore Polytechnic Institute football team last year, a lad of tremendous physique and engaging personality will pursue his further studies at Western Maryland. Once his bitter rival, but soon to be his college chum, big Jim Hahn, Baltimore City College's backfield ace and line plunger, according to rumor also may enter Western Maryland in the fall. Bill Fiege, of Army-Navy Prep fame, is another splendid type of lad who will enter. Chambers, the 200-pound sprinter and football back of the famous Quantico Marine Corps team, a graduate of Sidney (Nobruka) High School is also going to enter the freshman class, and many other high grade, splendid men, with proved athletic abilities have selected W. M. C. at which to secure their higher education. The presence of boys like these in the coming freshman class assures the permanence of Western Maryland as a college of young men of virile strength and able students, at the same time.

In addition the new eligibility code insures the freedom from taint of any of the athletic teams; a body of alumni alive to its potential power and ability to help, will guarantee support; and the type of new student sets at rest any alarm that either overemphasis will be placed on athletics, or that sports will not be given the attention they merit. Building upon such foundations as these, even greater future expansion is inevitable.

More valuable than the consequent production of winning teams, however, will be the very desirable effect of increasing even more the popularity of athletics, in the college itself, with the result that more students will participate in competitive sports, thereby distributing the benefits to be derived from athletics more widely over the entire student body. After all, this is the "consummation" that is most "devoutly to be wished."

The Man Behind the Man Behind the Gun

By HERBERT TAYLOR STEPHENS, A. M., D. D.
Dr. Stephens gives us some good advice here.

Is it the man behind the gun
That always, then, must win the war?
What if the man behind the man
Should fail to keep supplies in store?

Our Education is a task
That, well performed, will banish hate!
Then have we not a right to ask
Your worthy aid combatting fate?

God help us put in hearts of men,
Instead of force, the power of love,
And cause the Truth to shine again
On earth as in the realms above!

If those whom God would trust should fail,
When alien hosts are pressing hard,
How can the work of God prevail,
Or youth Love's higher claims regard?

Come ye, whom God hath doubly blest
With earthly goods, your School endow!
Of all the ways, Love's way is best,—
The need is great, and here, and now!

When Great Men Speak

A great Solicitor General, a great Ambassador, a great Lawyer and a Candidate for the presidency of our great Republic pauses to say a word to us.

Here is a friend of Higher Education in its truest sense, and therefore a friend of Western Maryland College.

MILLS BUILDING

15 Broad Street
New York City

April 27, 1925.

DEAR MR. COVER:

It seems to me that every reasoning man who understands the situation must be a friend of higher education, for only through such education can a large part of the wisdom of the ages be reaped. It is, therefore, a privilege and a duty of the alumni and friends of our colleges to aid in so far as their time and means permit in the support of movements having the extension of education in view.

With best wishes for the success of Western Maryland's project, believe me

Sincerely yours,

(Signed) JOHN W. DAVIS.

EXECUTIVE DEPARTMENT
Annapolis, Maryland

May 5, 1925.

Mr. Ralph Cover,
Continental Building,
Baltimore, Maryland.

DEAR MR. COVER:

It is a privilege to endorse the campaign for the expansion and development of Western Maryland College. This College fills a very important place in the educational system of Maryland. Every year our public schools owe it a debt for its excellent contributions to their teaching force. Maryland has always been fortunate in its facilities for higher education. This campaign will succeed, because merit always wins, and it will assure the State a still stronger and more advanced position in the field of higher education.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) ALBERT C. RITCHIE,
Governor.

The College of 750 Students

American standards in all departments of life are so adjusted to the idea of bigness that when a college deliberately makes up its mind to be small it is called upon to justify its decision. This decision is warranted by distinct advantages which the small college has over the large one.

The first of these relates to the faculty. Though an institution of learning exists not for the faculty but for the students, the faculty nevertheless is an essential element. For the sake of the students, therefore, they should be able to live and to work under conditions that make it possible for them to give their best service. In the small college they know each other better than in the large one; they can sympathize better with each other, and they and their families can have a more intimate, pleasant, and helpful social life than can the members of the large faculty. The "human touch" thus cultivated enables the members of the faculty and their families more successfully to resist the tendency, so strong among teachers, to get out of the line of normal life. This intimacy of relationship results in each member's getting such a knowledge of the work and the problems of his colleagues, that he can regard the college as a single unit making for the development of all around men and women, rather than as a collection of units making for the development of specialists.

The second advantage is in the relation of the faculty to the students. In the small college it is possible for the teachers to come in close personal contact with the students and to know them. When Charles Lamb said that he hated a certain man, his friend replied, "I did not know that you knew him." "I don't," said Lamb; "if I did I couldn't hate him." When the teacher and his students know each other, not only is the natural gulf between the adult and the youth bridged, at least to some extent, but the teacher can get an accurate idea of the student's difficulties,

GEORGE S. WILLS, PH. M., M. A.
DEPARTMENT OF ENGLISH

Dr. Wills was born on a plantation in North Carolina. He received the degree of Master of Philosophy from the University of North Carolina in 1896 and the degree of Master of Arts from Harvard in 1898. He taught at Western Maryland from 1898 until 1904, and returned to "The Hill" in 1922 as head of the English Department. He has been an extensive contributor of book reviews, bibliographies, biographies and articles of literary and historical nature, and has lectured widely on various subjects. His intimate contact with both large and small colleges particularly qualifies him for the writing of this article.

and can help him and stimulate him to better endeavors. Again, though the student is in the college primarily for study, he is at the same time developing character; and character is developed more by imitation than by heeding precepts. In the small college it is possible for the personal lives of the teachers to influence strongly the lives of the students. When one reads of the poor equipment, the attenuated courses of study, and the far-too-meagre scholarship of teachers in the colleges of fifty and more years ago, one asks how they could turn out such men as they did. The answer is to be found in the character, the ideals, and the personal force of the teachers.

The third advantage is in the relations of the students among themselves. In the small college they can know and understand each other, and sympathize with each other's interests. Instead of breaking up into cliques which may be mutually indifferent, if not hostile, they can approximate a homogeneous life. Cliques, it is true, exists in the small college as well as in the large one, but the lines of demarcation are not so tightly drawn, and the interests cannot be so completely segregated. Outside of the classroom the general activities—the social life, athletics, the college publications—have a unifying force. Even though no student can take part in all the activities, and a few take part in none, those who do participate are known to all, and have the loyal support of the whole college.

The last advantage to be mentioned here is the fact that in the small college students can be selected with reference to their ability and their willingness to take advantage of the opportunities offered them, and with a knowledge of their fitness for membership in the college community. More young men and women than can be accommodated are seeking admission to college. Among these are many who will derive so little benefits from college life that it will be a waste of money and time to keep them there, while others will be positively detrimental to themselves and to their associates. The small college is in a better position than the large one to select its students so as to keep out the undesirable ones, or, if they get in, quickly to eliminate them.

The big colleges and universities are indispensable. The huge sums of money at their command and their ample equipment in libraries and laboratories make it possible for them to secure as members of their faculties great scholars, and moulders and leaders of thought, but relatively few young men and women of the undergraduate grade are able to take full advantage of these opportunities. For a large majority the best institution is the small college with a faculty of scholarly teachers, an intimate intellectual and social relationship between teachers and students, and a homogeneous group with similar aims and ideals.

Special Bulletin: Pandemonium reigned when, after his prolonged absence from College, it was reported that "Ken" Shroyer had eloped with Mazie Pickford, of the Follies Chorus. It is said that a bonfire on Hoffa Field became so hot that the concrete grandstand just literally melted away. *He builds,—this incessant builder,—
A structure the world calls Man.
The house with the walls of plaster,
But marks where the work began.*

*He gathers the brick, and lumber,—
Commands the mortar and stone;—
Oft broken of rest and slumber,
He plans,—aware and lone!*

*The dream that he dreams is greater
Than any that ends on earth;
His vision crowns human spirits
With gold of eternal worth!*

*When granite and steel shall crumble,
And rot in the world's decay,
The temples that he is building
Will stand,—and will stand for aye!*

The structure he builds is Man;
And Wisdom, and Truth, and Mercy,
He seeks in th' unfolding plan!*

*Plain Faith is the trowel he wieldeth,
'Tis Patience steadies his hand;
Justice, Kindness, Temperance,
Are the rock, the timber, and sand!*

And fastens the beams in place,—
Makes Love the gravity holding
And polishes all with Grace!*

That wonderful structure, Man!*

Only those most intimately associated with this valiant Soldier of the King of Kings completely appreciate the perfect applicability of this beautiful poem, written and dedicated by Dr. Stephens to our great and noble leader.

His is the simple, holy idealism of the Nazarene Who died on Calvary's Cross.

He believes and knows that "Right is Might!"

His conception of the limits of man's sphere of service is as boundless as the mighty ocean, by which he lived and dreamed.

His canon of earthly standards is as lofty and magnificent as the divine creation of Yosemite, and as exalted as Arizona's canyons, where he sat and pondered.

Girded with these sublime qualities, commissioned from God, he came to us with the pent up spirit of a Crusader, yearning to be freed.

Instantly, he recognized in "Dear Western Maryland," in its cherished traditions, in its honor undefiled, in its unblemished beauty, and in its devout consecration to sacred principles, the supreme opportunity for the fulfillment of what he regarded as his niche in the imperishable structure of the Great Architect.

He had put in many years of his life in conceiving it, designing it, planning it. It had become very largely his life. It was the most stupendous commission that his mind could conceive.

And what a plan! Men cannot give birth to such colossal projects just simply as so much day's work. They take possession of the soul, dwarf all other interests, and become a consuming passion.

In the achievement, obstacles have been but as tinder to increase the burning heat of the conflagration within him. Physical barriers have been surmounted. Opponents have been converted. The surly growl of the knucker has been transformed into the fervent song of stancy, and perseverance, and industry, and labor, and pains, the gigantic victory in the field of unselfish Service is won.

The Greater Western Maryland,—lovely, imposing, fine,—is but the mirror of his heart and soul, and that day is here when all of humanity well may drop to its knees and thank Omnipotence for Albert Norman Ward.

The Alumnus and College Athletics

By W. WILSON WINGATE

of the Baltimore Sun

This is the last of a series of six articles written by Mr. Wingate, and covering subjects pertaining to Western Maryland athletics. Mr. Wingate occupies a place in the higher circle of nationally known sports writers, and is permitted to appear here for his Alma Mater through the courtesy of THE BALTIMORE SUN, and Mr. Stanley M. Reynolds, its Managing Editor.

Throughout this series of articles on Western Maryland athletics, an effort has been made to point out that Western Maryland's methods are steadily progressing toward the "big league" system and standard, and that the college has no intention of letting the advancement in competitive sports lag behind the general movement that is bringing the institution to the very forefront among its contemporaries by great leaps and bounds.

In order to insure the success of the athletics part of the comprehensive program, it is imperative that an united front of all component parts be presented. The College Administration is supporting the Alumni Advisory Committee in athletics in its efforts to effectuate the plan for greater things, and the committee is functioning, individually and as a body, at top speed. All that is needed now is a general awakening of interest that will bring active cooperation of alumni everywhere, and particularly in Maryland.

It cannot be denied that there are too few who take an active interest in the work of the college's representative sports teams. The alumni of our colleges are prone to become so engrossed in the affairs of the world that sooner or later they fail to some extent in their duty to their alma mater. This condition is general—with the exception of the usual few, who spend much effort in exhorting their comrades to support the athletic teams and lend their aid in other respects. By support is not meant financial aid in every instance. The desire of the loyal and active alumni of Western Maryland in the present case is to interest the entire body of graduates and former students in the school's athletics—in a genuine manner, so that manufactured enthusiasm will not be necessary as a goad to secure attendance at games or to bring about cooperation in other respects in which alumni may help.

The moral buttress of a well-filled cheering section is readily realized by any one who ever has taken part in competitive athletics before an audience. Jack Dunn, manager and owner of the Baltimore Orioles, holders of the world's record for consecutive pennants won in organized baseball, declares that a team capable of winning three fourths of its games at home should be satisfied to win half its contests "on the road." There is a certain "chilling" and inspiration-killing effect in the realization that all cheers are intended for your opponent, and that applause for the feats of your own team are merely perfunctory—given out of courtesy. And if this be true in commercialized, professional sports, how much more relative is this detail to the success or failure of the impressionable youngster competing for glory alone!

Western Maryland has athletic traditions of the first water, and its development is limited only by the support afforded by its followers. The basic foundation of success in sports, as in other lines of endeavor, is laid on the solid rock of careful planning. The coming football season is bound to be crucial at Western Maryland, in view of the pretensions schedule and the restrictions laid down in the newly and voluntarily adopted athletic code. Every ounce of energy from every source will be needed. The team appears to contain the elements for one of the best ever assembled at Western Maryland.

That team, the College and the Alumni Advisory Committee in Athletics—all heartily deserve the cooperation of the alumni. In 1925, all its football games will be played on fields accessible to every alumnus in the State of Maryland. The only contest scheduled for a field without the confines of the State is that with Bucknell, booked for the new Memorial Stadium at Lewisburg, Pa. Even this is within easy distance of Baltimore City by train or automobile. The Navy game at Annapolis and the Maryland and Loyola contests in Baltimore Stadium should not fail to have 100 per cent attendance, and the games in Westminster, particularly those with Washington College and Kentucky Wesleyan should not run far behind.

Altogether it is an ambitious program that is being mapped out for Western Maryland athletics by those entrusted with the work. If Western Maryland is to compete and it is against "big league" institutions, under "big league" methods and restrictions, it must adopt "big league" tactics. This means nothing more nor less than that the regular college agencies must be supplemented and supported by an active, energetic, purposeful graduate organization buttressed by every alumnus of the school.

Therefore, former students, make the Alumni Advisory Committee in Athletics' office—1114 Continental Building, Baltimore, Ralph Cover, secretary—your clearing house for information in connection with Western Maryland athletics. Cover, with Bob Gill, chairman, and W. P. Roberts, make up the committee. They are on the "inside" of everything connected with Western Maryland sports—on the "inside" of all sports activities "On the Hill" and on the "outside" of the "outside." Any valuable information about Western Maryland athletics you may desire they will be prepared to give, accurately and in detail. From them you can get all "dope" regarding any individual athlete at the college whom you may know or be interested in personally. All schedules of games may be obtained from them as soon as the cards have been completed.

Moreover, alumni not only may make but are invited to give any written suggestions regarding policy or practice. A sports organization "of" Western Marylanders, "by" Western Marylanders and "for" Western Marylanders is exactly what is wanted. The committee is a responsible body, representing Western Maryland past, present and future. That the committee can and will fulfill a real need is too obvious to demand further treatment here. Besides, a previous article was devoted to the work of that body.

In conclusion, it might be said that Western Marylanders may show their appreciation and at the same time be of great assistance in the attaining of the goal: First, by manifesting interest in what the school is doing in athletics and evidencing this interest by attending games and keeping in touch with the Alumni Advisory Committee in Athletics; secondly, by making suggestions in writing to the Committee; third, and of vital importance, by turning over to the committee at the earliest possible moment any and all information regarding elegant, desirable boys who have participated in athletics while in preparatory or high school, and who regard the securing of a higher education as a serious matter.

Furthermore, it is the idea to think Western Maryland "talk" Western Maryland and hire Western Maryland. Broadest the desirability of our college as an educational institution. Recount the triumphs of her athletes. Impress upon your widest circle of associates the supremacy of Western Maryland. If the committee and the College receive the cooperation they should have in these respects, the results which will follow will far surpass everyone's most sanguine expectations.

STAR MARINE PLAYER AND BROTHER TO ENTER W. M. C.

The credits of Allen and Roy Chambers, star athletes from the West, already have been received. Allen Chambers, a handsome six-footer, and tipping the beam at 200, has scintillated in the back field on the famous Quantico Marine Team for several years. He also is a crack basketball player, and runs the sprints in track. Mr. Chambers entered the service immediately after his graduation from high school, his enlistment expiring on Christmas, and he has cleared Western Maryland as the place where he will secure a higher education. Already, Allen Chambers has his heart in his work, having induced his brother, who graduates from high school this year, and who is a stellar three-sports performer of about the same structure and ability, to come with him to Western Maryland. Roy Chambers has the remarkable scholastic record of never having made less than a B-plus in his entire high school career.

Both men are a splendid student who recognize athletics merely as an indispensable part in the rounding out process for after life.

KENNETH PERRY

Perry hails from Clarendon, New Hampshire, and has been selected as First Team center on the Mythical All-Maryland College Eleven for the last two years. He is a hard worker, and as loyal as they make them.

Perry also is Varsity first string catcher of the baseball team. He has another year to go.

"Over The Top"

BY HERBERT TAYLOR STEPHENS, A. M., D. D.

Read this Poem carefully and often.

You're going "over the top"?—What then?
For "over the top" means into the fight!
'Tis "zero hour," and dark is the life,—
And Ignorance threatens the life of Men!

Yes, "over the top,"—for the War is On!
Tho' weapons are not the cannon and sword,
But Love, and Truth,—Lo! Christ is the Lord!—
He bids Superstitions and Lies begone!

Tho' skulking hosts that in darkness hide,—
Indifference, Prejudice, Error, Hate,
Slothfulness, Craftiness, Camouflaged Fate,—
These, and their kinsmen, Presumption, and Pride,

And Ease, and Lust of the World,—must go!
While Learning, and Wisdom, and Love must rule!

The Light of the Home, and the Church, and School,
Must help God's Children His Will to know!

"Over the top!"—And the battle's begun!
The rage of the foe is the rage of Hell,
Which only the power of God can quell,—
For only by Truth can the War be won!

It's "over the top,"—tho' the cost be great,
With sleepless nights, and with days of toil,—

But the hearts of our Sons are true and loyal,
And Righteousness triumphs soon or late!

With Mind and with Money, with Brain and with Brawn,
With Valor, and Virtue, and Faith, and Love,

And "Veritas" writ on the heights above,—
Behold! The Darkness gives way to Dawn!

Dr Stephens here sends Birthday Greetings to the skipper.

What? Growing old? Ah, nonsense, man!
The years but mark the golden span
That stretches from the world of sense
To realms where dwells Omnipotence!

And on life's journey, as ye go,
We would that ye our friendship know.
As long ye labor, rest betimes,
And list to songs, and speech, and rhymes!

The burdens that ye daily bear,
Lay down,—our congratulations share:
Just laugh a bit, and join in song,—
The night is short, the day is long!

The task ye have essayed to do
Is worthy of a man like you!
But with your toil, commingle rest;
So will your strength endure the test.

And you will live to see the day
Of dreams fulfilled, as now ye pray.
Great Sachem,—Worthy President,
You were for such high purpose sent!

Yet, as ye build, the kindly smile
Of loyal friends may cheer, the while.
The years may pass,—you're growing young,
We all declare with common tongue!

Tonight, we greet you with "All Hail!"
May "nerve" and "duets" never fail!
And years roll on as rolls the tide,
With blessings on yourself and bride!

Pack Up Your Pessimism

BY HERBERT TAYLOR STEPHENS, A. M., D. D.

Be sure to follow this advice.

(Tune:—"Pack Up Your Troubles.")
Pack up your pessimism in a sack,
And Smile! Smile! Smile!
W. M. Alumni are on the track,
Go in' the "final mile,"—
They have got their dander up,
Heapin' up a golden pile;
So, pack up your pessimism in a sack,
And Smile! Smile! Smile!

When Great Men Speak

Heretofore, in these columns under this caption have been recorded the words of men who have achieved national distinction in various fields of endeavor. Subsequently, this space will be devoted to the deeds of other great people.

Greatness is a relative term having a variety of meanings, but none is so great in the most exalted sense that the word may be applied as he who serves unselfishly for the betterment of the conditions of life. Therefore, the cataloging of these men, women and children and what they have done, signifies more than the mere registering of a group of isolated names and transactions. They stand for sacrifice. They represent love for humanity. On the tablets of magnificent achievements, these names and acts will be ineffaceable.

Nor is the quantum of the action necessarily determinative of the quality thereof. Sometimes the very smallest may portray the greatest depth of affection. By their total absence at roll call, a lonely, unhappy few, who can but won't, may indicate a plain, ordinary, inexcusable dereliction of duty, an absolute disregard and repudiation of a moral, if not a legal obligation, and a complete absence of contributory tint in God's master Painting. Nearly all, will signify vast honor and an abounding passion for civilization's cause. The composite whole will be the reason why the angels will sing a little louder in Heaven on that memorable day.

Strap and Luby

As Perpetual as the Rock of Gibraltar

WE ARE WINNING!

The tightest man in the world is the Scotchman who shot off a pistol outside his house on Christmas Eve and then came in and told his children that Santa Claus had committed suicide. He was not a Western Marylander.

A rare bird in the menagerie was discovered the other day when an alumnus made the statement that ever since he graduated, he had been trying to live down the fact that he went to Western Maryland College. By this logic, if your mother happened at one time to be in humble circumstances, you must forever disown her and try to live down the fact that you are of her progeny, and if she happened not to be so fortunate as to have had the advantages that she sacrificed comforts and even necessities in order that you might have, so as to be a better and stronger man, you must disclaim and abandon her forever. If Abraham Lincoln had had the opportunity to obtain a Christian education, with the library and laboratory facilities, etc., afforded this man at Western Maryland, we wonder if after he had finished, he would have made such a statement. We believe that our friend was only "kidding." He, and everyone else who knows what it is all about, appreciates that a college is nothing more nor less than an opportunity to be taken advantage of by those fortunate enough to be allowed the time and money necessary to secure a higher education.

There have been meetings and meetings of various kinds preceding and during the Campaign, but it is doubtful if any will compare with that one to be held in the assembly room of St. John's Church, St. Paul and 27th Street, Baltimore, on Thursday evening, May 21st, at 8:00 P. M. Refreshments will be served, but the big, interesting, and joyous part of that great night will be the announcements of the results of the Campaign. At the present rate of locomotion, Baltimore will be well over the top ere then, and as Baltimore goes, so will the Campaign go. The evening promises to be a thriller and one replete with joy. All alumni, former students, and friends of the college, from whatever neck of the woods they may hail, are WELCOME.

While we were missing his smiling face a lot around the Hill, George Monroe Englar, 1910, has been sawing wood. "Dickie" has climbed high in the field of finance, and has achieved a place of great responsibility and honor in that fast growing organization, The Title Guarantee & Trust Company, of Baltimore. While "over there" during the big fight, "Dickie" directed much of that part of the operation that concerned the sending of billets-doux to Heine in the form of high explosive shells. He participated in many engagements as a Captain in the heavy artillery ranked high among his fellow officers, and showed the world the kind of stuff that Carroll County and Western Maryland are able to produce in the form of virile manhood.

When time passes the milestone of the scholastic year, 1925, Western Maryland will have at least three more alumni of whom it will be particularly proud. Their names are Mabel Smith, Velva Lewis, and Miriam Strange of this year's graduating class—girls who love their college to the point that they are willing to give, in the years when it is hardest to give, in order that their Alma Mater might carry on now to greater things. All can envy these girls in their real Commencement in life, because they have started with their right foot forward. The assumption of individual responsibility in the consummation of a noble cause is the wisest step that any man or woman can take, anytime, anywhere.

Nature's rules are inexorable, and one of them is that the strength of the whole is determined by the strength of the constituent units. Every alumnus is a constituent unit of his college, and he who presumes to be so ungrateful as to attempt to criticize his Alma Mater need only to look into the mirror to see one of its basic weaknesses. Massachusetts Institute of technology and similar great Institutions did not arrive where they are today by their Alumni sitting back and knocking. Their buildings and endowments and elms and libraries and flowerbeds and laboratories—all are monuments erected by those who have gone before in grateful recognition of invaluable benefits received by them from Alma Mater, in partial liquidation of their incalculable indebtedness to the old school, and because the He-Men of this world make it a part of their life to see that the world becomes better day by day, and that theirs and their neighbors children shall be girded with stronger armor to fight the battle of life.

DR. WARD

I THANK you.

The rich man's susceptibility to noble appeal is not the test of his wealth but of his self. The man of wealth who is not open to appeal in behalf of a noble cause is not in danger—he has already gone beyond the danger line. It is a dreadful thing for a man of wealth to be that and nothing more.

The Campaign Management has missed an asset in not drawing into the movement in its initial stages the services of Dr. Howard Philip Doub, 1915, now Chief Roentgenologist in the renowned hospital of that struggling business man, Henry Ford, out in Detroit. For the benefit of those as uninformed as the editor, Roentgenography means to the medical world the art of taking of X-ray pictures. Dr. Doub has attained considerable distinction in this field and could have been of great service to the workers of the Campaign by taking a photograph of the inside of everybody's pocketbook.

However exalted may be his position, whatever may have been or may be his reputation in the world of affairs, whatever honors may have been conferred upon him, or however highly he may be regarded among his fellows, any man who is so weak and so narrow and of such low idealism as to permit his personal animosity to stand between him and the effectuating of this movement bears the indelible stamp of "smallness." This cause is mightier than any individual or any group of individuals, or any man's opinion, and will be serving Diety long after all of us have passed by.

Comprehensive plans are being made for class reunions at the coming Commencement to extend from June 6th to June 9th. The classes of 1924, 1920, 1915, 1910, and 1905, particularly are stressing what is going to prove to be one of the banner Commencement seasons. The Western Marylander who can, but will not elect to have the thrills that will come, to all on the eventful Commencement morning when announcements are made, had better consult a doctor at once.

"Most of our educators are women." That's an news for married men. (This is supposed to be a joke.)

The Call from The Hill

We who are in the valley, pushed from behind by the pressing needs of life, peer up to the summits along which Success dwells, and we meditate: "How wonderful it must be on those heights! What comfort! Neither care nor disappointment! Fame and power and wealth! How easy must be life on these pinnacles of triumph! And then slowly we begin to crawl and our hands know toil and pain, and our hearts fire, disappointment and despair. But we climb on until it is given us to reach out and seize the first of these places along the way.

Here, in what seems only the very beginning of our journey, we are confronted by the giants, Leadership and Responsibility, building the civilization of tomorrow, and there thunders in our ears the cry: "The day is gone when you may think only of yourselves. Henceforth, you will carry with you the hopes and dreams of other souls. Beginning today you lead."

And then we protest that Success fools him who achieves it, that it is a pot of gold at the end of a rainbow luring men on to struggle and to suffer, exacting a terrible price, and then mocking them when they have arrived. And we ask: "Are these never-ending? Is there no stopping place?" And the answer is hurled back: "No, there is no end, for, as life itself, it is endless."

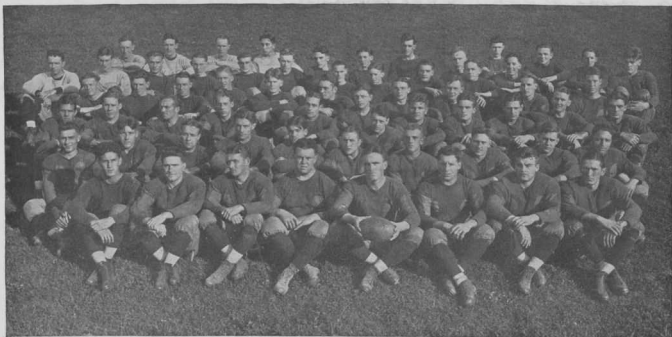

The true leader accepts this lot, and while we know play, and sleep, and youth, and dancing in the sun, responsibility knows the fury of a cruel, relentless taskmaster, and demands a price and sacrifice that even the road to victory never exacted. He is ready to grasp the flaming torch when it drops from the hand of yesterday's leader and carry it aloft—a new runner coming out from the throng, with the cry: "I am prepared for the clear air on the heights—for the hopes and the yearnings, and the hunger of these thousands after life."

On a hill overlooking a wide expanse of country enriched to the fullest by Nature's blessings, stands Alma Mater,—modest, unaffected, true, and good. She shelters not those free lances on an ocean of guesses who call themselves philosophers. Her doors are closed to those theorists that run hither and thither, each a law unto himself, and whose only service is self-satisfaction. She neither fosters nor tolerates caste and class distinction—the flower of pure democracy blooms abundantly under her trees. Her heart stands uncorrupted by pernicious agnosticism—she has kept the simple Faith. She is a Christian College.

Quietly she calls to the leaders of today:—"Help me to make more smooth and beautiful the way from the valley to the heights."

Beseechingly, with arms outstretched to her children, scattered here and there along the path—those men and women whose character she moulded and whose destinies she helped to shape—she pleads: "Come unto me—upward, upward,—ever upward."

Who of the progeny of this fair and chaste and worthy mother is so blind that he cannot see, so derelict and unfaithful that he will not act, so dead of soul that he resolves to turn his face the other way?

The Green Terrors of 1924

All alumni and friends of Western Maryland, whether they be among those who have evidenced their affection for and gratitude to Alma Mater by whole-hearted support in this campaign, or whether they be of the delinquent class, well may study the faces of these young men, and profit from their splendid example on the field of sports.

This large group represents more than uncontrovertible proof that "winning teams mean athletes for all." The size of the squad says more than merely that an unusually large number of men were interested in the rigorous development of rugged physical constitutions. A greater part of all the qualities essential to the achievements of success in after life were possessed by these men on the gridiron. They did not quit or lay down merely because they were ahead in the game. The quota in each instance was the provision that they should make more points than their opponents, but nevertheless they kept on fighting and struggling and working until the final whistle blew.

In fact their last shove was the hardest of all. Five times within a few minutes in the dying moments of the game, with their backs to the wall and in the shadow of their own goal posts, did they repel the savage charges of Bucknell's nightiest. After an inauspicious start, when Washington scored twice early in a contest played in a driving snow storm, these heroes battled their foe to a tie-score, and time alone prevented an overwhelming Terror victory. No one who was there ever will forget how these boys, as the game was ending, snatched a victory from the very jaws of defeat against Catholic University when Carl Merrill made the longest run from a completed forward pass that was made by any college player in the United States during the 1924 playing season.

The noblest quality of all displayed by these men was that of loyalty to the cause they represented. There was not a single attempt to secure individual glory at the expense of team play. The game was the thing, and they played it always with all their hearts.

The alumni and friends of Western Maryland who during the campaign have shown these qualities of fight and endurance and stick-to-it-iveness and loyalty and love of the game of unselfish service well can understand why football is the most popular of American sports. It is because it is a man's game, affording boundless opportunities for the development of the best qualities of citizenship, and because it proves the souls of men. Western Maryland is proud of these boys because as constituent units of the college, they contribute to her aggregate strength. These boys love their college and hazard their best in the cause of their college,—always,—because they know and appreciate the immeasurable benefits and opportunities that their college is bestowing upon and affording to them.

BACK FIELD STAR TO ENTER

Jim Hahn, Baltimore City College's 200-lb. line punting fullback has definitely decided to enter Western Maryland in the fall. Jim has made the All-Maryland Scholastic Football Team for three consecutive years, and is the man at which the defenses of all opposing teams have been specially pointed. In this, his last year at City, he developed into one of the best forward-passers seen in this section in many moons.

D. K. (Ken) Shroyer

When Ken came to Western Maryland as Athletic Director and Head Coach three years ago, athletics were at low tide. In this brief period, they have risen to the heights described in Mr. Wingate's series of articles previously published on this page. Much of the credit for this unprecedented but sound development and progress is due to the efforts of the owner of the smiling (!) face shown here.

He has made it his business to organize athletics as a part of the educational work, and today the college is represented in inter-collegiate competition in football, basketball, baseball, track and field sports, wrestling, and tennis. Plans have been completed to add Lacrosse to the list this coming Scholastic year. The establishment on a sound foundation of this increasingly popular college sport will be under the able tutelage of Malcolm Keech, whirlwind Mount Washington stick artist. In addition, games between classes are encouraged, and teams for freshmen, who play high and preparatory schools, are maintained in virtually all sports in which the college is represented. Greater opportunities than ever before are offered today for the student to participate in inter-collegiate athletic competition.

Ken played football at Carnegie Tech and then at West Virginia Wesleyan, of which school he is a graduate. Later he was very successful as the coach of championship football and basketball teams at Buckhannon High School. He is a very congenial fellow, having the outside Big-League point of view and ambitions, knows what it is all about, and is working overtime in the building of the Greater Western Maryland.

Commencement-Time

The renewal of acquaintanceships and revival of old associations—the sitting in hallowed nooks—the establishing of stronger and of new friendships—sweet, haunting music—delightful entertainment—romance and flowers—the invaluable inspiration derived from contact with vigorous youth in the joyous hour as it faces the Commencement of the responsibilities of life—the heralding of the greater Western Maryland—all these will pass by almost with kaleidoscopic swiftness at this happy Commencement-Time. Within the brief span of three days, of which less than two need be taken away from labor, will be crowded more real fun, genuine pleasure, and complete diversion, than ordinarily come to us in weeks of time.

All friends of the college are as welcome as the most distinguished alumnus. The greater Western Maryland is coming life being now. It is no longer a thing unto itself. Its sphere is not confined to its halls, campus, student body, or alumni. Its work is world-wide in its scope. It opens its arms wholeheartedly to all because its strength is limited only by the breadth of its effective influence.

The interesting program is as follows:

FRIDAY, JUNE FIFTH

8:00 P. M. Freshman and Sophomore Contest in Speech, for the Norment Prizes Award of Certificates and Honors of the Preparatory School

SATURDAY, JUNE SIXTH

2:30 P. M. Base Ball—Varsity vs. Westminster.

Alumni Headquarters during Commencement Week will be in the Social Parlor of McDaniel Hall.

At the Commencement Exercises the President will make important announcements concerning the result of the Financial Campaign.

It is conceded by all that here is one of the great minds of this generation. Mr. Bryan talks about Western Maryland when he emphasizes that education, to be most beneficial, must be a Christian education.

WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN

"Marymont"

Cocoanut Grove, Florida.

Mr. Ralph Cover,
Baltimore, Maryland.

May 2, 1925.

Dear Mr. Cover:

I am an enthusiast on the subject of Education. I would like to see every boy and every girl educated, not only in the graded schools but in the high schools, colleges, and universities. I would give them all a chance and let their failure to obtain an education depend entirely upon the individual.

But while I am very anxious to have all educated, I am not unmindful of the fact that education may be a detriment to the individual and to society if the mind when trained is not properly directed by an enlightened heart. The mind is a mental machine, a servant of the heart. When the heart goes wrong, it takes the mind with it. If the heart goes wrong, the mind plots a crime as willingly as it carries out the directions of a good heart that plans service to society.

There is a man being tried in Chicago now who illustrates the limitless possibilities for evil of a mind that becomes the servant of a wicked heart. The president of a scientific association confesses that he was to receive a hundred thousand dollars for training the would-be murderer in the use of typhoid germs that were to be used for the murder of one whose property the murderer desired.

There cannot be too much education, provided the education is for the use of one with the proper conception of life who uses the trained mind in the worship of God and the service of his fellow-men.

Very truly yours,

(Signed) W. J. BRYAN.

Still Another Word

Subscriptions aggregating $250,000 have been received. These represent the larger amounts and a great part of the results of all our labors.

If this campaign is to succeed and we are to receive the $250,000 additional from the State of Maryland and the Rockefeller Foundation, there yet must be raised $125,000. This will be much more difficult to do than was the securing of the first $250,000, but we must do it.

The campaign will continue until Commencement. It cannot proceed, for reasons that are apparent to all the workers, beyond that time. Those constituting our organization have worked to the very limit of their physical endurance. If the campaign does not succeed by Commencement, we probably shall lose the $250,000 promised us from outside sources.

I cannot make this fact too plain—It has been rumored that I have surprises to report at the last moment. This is entirely unfounded. The interesting things that I have reasons to believe will be brought about are entirely dependent upon the successful issue of this campaign.

It is wholly in your hands, and now, to say whether or not Western Maryland College is to go forward. If you have given already, you may be able to give still more. If you have decided to give, but have not sent in your subscription, please wire or send it at once. If you have decided that you are not able to subscribe, think the matter through and you may find an opportunity to give where you previously thought that you could not. I feel sure that every dollar subscribed to this cause will return in full measure to those who have given.

We have asked each former student to give or to secure $375 within three years. Some are not able to do this, but many are. Some are able to give and are giving a great deal more. Some of our students, still in college, are giving that much out of love to the institution—before they have started out to earn a single dollar. There are those who owe a great deal to this college—the writer is one of them—and they feel an obligation to make a return that measures in part their obligation. If we all do something the campaign will succeed.

When the final reports are published I hope to see the name of every former student on the list. What a report that would be if it contained the name of every former student!

The time has come when Western Maryland's opportunity depends upon YOU!

THE GOAL IS NEAR!

The Campaign has offered marvelous educational opportunities for the married man who wants to get out at night. After listening to the shirkers, he should have enough new, novel, and different excuses so that he would not have to offer a repeater for many many moons.

When the magnificent group of buildings may be seen silhouetted against the western skyline, and when the hundreds of thousands of dollars secured by this campaign and flowing in by virtue of its success are working every minute, every hour, and every day, and month and year in the perpetuation and advancement of this greatest of all causes, and when your little boy looks up and says to you, "Daddy, who built that?" won't it be worth a few cigars less a day now, a couple of miles less running around in the old joy-wagon once in a while, and a little less of that multitude of things that all of us, so easily and so well, can do without, to be able to say, "Daddy helped to build it, sonny boy, by paying back to his old college a small part of the debt which he owed it for what it gave to and did for him?"

The great demand for and universal popularity of Sports are not indicative of a day in the national character. On the contrary, these are mighty big and necessary cogs in the wheel of our every-day life. They furnish to many much needed opportunity for recreation and diversion. They vitalize civic pride and promote community loyalty, co-operation and comradeship. They provide an effective means for giving the little ones necessary lessons in the art of how to advertise and bring many people to your town. Better than these,—they take our minds from our selfish selves, give us vents for our feelings ruffled by overstimulation, help to keep us young, and make it a little easier for others to tolerate our presence,—in short they add many candle-power to home life's light.

The Christian College has no appeal to the unworthy man. He cannot understand its spirit, its intentions, its relations, its processes, or its ideals.

While many outstanding figures in the foreground of this movement, have attracted special attention, there has been one beautiful and inspiring light in the background that has contributed much to the success of the undertaking. Reference made to that wonderful little woman who once was identified as Ethel Blanche Murchison of the class of 1895, but who now is known as Mrs. Albert Norman Ward. Idealists and men of wide achievement always have somewhere in their lives a dominating inspiration without which their purposes probably never would be completed effectuated. When credit for success is awarded here, our much-loved Mrs. Ward will be in the very front of the very front row.

Already the great joys attending the success of the campaign are thrilling those who have approached or who have gone over the top, and by virtue of the effort many a man and woman can look into the mirror and see something of which he or she justifiably may be proud. There may be happiness derived from pleasures that can be purchased with money, but such is not to be compared with the genuine satisfaction flowing from the consciousness of having done a little bit of the taking of steps so glorious as the enlargement of the power and scope of forces devoted to Christian education for and righteous enlightenment of the generations that are yet to come.

The harnessing of Nature's energies in different combinations usually begets skepticism and doubt in the uninformed in the initial stages. "It can't be done" and "He's a fool" are but the sincere utterances of those who have neither analyzed or dreamed, and the man who says to the skeptic, "Yes, it is possible, here it is," is just one of God's chosen few who, having faith and courage, gives his little all to the consummation of his vision.

Height, length, width, and thickness of tangible objects may be gauged by well-defined rules; material wealth may be measured in dollars; character, physical strength may be compared by definite tests; but the work of a Christian college and the moulding of character therein cannot be evaluated by mortal standards.

Last Saturday afternoon, in three hours time, the venerable, distinguished, and efficient University called Maryland. We with its extensive resources and established athletic systems was smothered by Princeton's Baseball Nine, was overwhelmed by Yale's Lacrosse Twelve, trailed Navy's Crew on the Severn, and ate the dust off the heels of Princeton's Track Team. Nevertheless, all was peaceful and serene along the historical Chesapeake River on Sunday. We with know the road not far back when after a Western Maryland squad dropped one game to some opponent who had the better team, a few alumni of Western Maryland, were on the hang the Athletic Committee, discharge Dr.

Ward, and blow up Hoffa Field. The difference between the two is that in one case it is recognized that all not only that it is best for one's self to suffer adversity occasionally, but also that there always must be a loser for every victory, and the other fellow deserves his share of the sweetness. In the other case, men who attend college functions a couple of times a year and who know little or nothing about the game or sportsmanship are giving vent to their grouching acquired by their constantly thinking about themselves alone. Of course nearly all if not all Institutions have a few of these pills that must be swallowed.

While Johnny Harvard was meeting reverses on every side, the Terrors were trouncing Dickinson on the diamond by the count of 6 to 1. Carl Merrill, fanned the losing batsmen with almost monotonous regularity, kept his hits well-scattered, and had the situation well under control at all times.

In an editorial written in 1866, two years before the establishment of Western Maryland, by Dr. J. Thomas Murray, grandfather of Chas. H. Murray, 1912, to whom we are indebted for the historical data below, is to be found the following:

"Among the most important matters for the thoughtful consideration of our leaders and of the approaching session of our Maryland Conference, we suggest and emphasize, is the establishment on Maryland soil of a Christian college. "Our great mistake heretofore has been in looking upon such an enterprise as an impossibility. We regard the establishment in Maryland of a first-class college as entirely feasible and as an impossibility. Who can exaggerate the advantages of such an enterprise! Maryland is the place and the Methodist Protestants of the Maryland Conference are the men to found a college which will be an immediate blessing to our children and a blessing to our commonwealth."

This identical term, "utopian," was applied sincerely a year ago by able men to the plan for a greater Western Maryland, now so near to completion. This is more than coincidence. It is in concrete evidence that basically the world is the same today as yesterday, and just as the above words helped to stir into action that little group of big men who promoted the Genesis of Alma Mater, so the spirit of those faithful pioneers of '67 is awakened in us here and now by the prophecies and dreams, and plans, and words of our Dr. Ward. that day started the Western Maryland which has come to us, so this river of gold of today will perpetuate the work so well begun.

When the final list is known, it will include many descendants of this former generation of Christian people, all of whom recognize not only that the hundred dollar is the equivalent of the $100 given by each of these, but also that the work of today in the establishment of a greater Western Maryland is as important, as real, as any deed, or utopian as that of the times when standards and ideals were simpler.

ON TO COMMENCEMENT!
