The ALOHA

The Annual of Western Maryland College
Year Book of the Class of Nineteen Hundred Thirty Dedication

to

Lloyd Millard Bertholf, Ph.D.,

Head of the Department of Biology, whose interest in the students of Western Maryland College has made him beloved, whose high degree of scholarship has made him admired, whose devotion to ideals has made him respected by those students, we, the Senior Class, respectfully dedicate the 1930 ALOHA.
In Memoriam

A man whose administration marked an epoch in the growth of Western Maryland College, whose clear thinking led him easily through the maze of religious dogma, whose convictions were sensibly simple.
A leader whose life was an inspiration to honest effort and firm character.

Thomas Hamilton Lewis, D.D., LL.D.
President Emeritus

In Memoriam

A teacher confident in the merit of his subject matter.
An instructor in ways of more bountiful life.
An example of intelligent Christian conduct.
A man whose life was conducted in accordance with the rules by which he advised others.

Herbert Taylor Stephens, A.M., D.D.
Professor of Philosophy and Biblical Literature
In Memoriam

A loyal comrade, a friend, a happy companion, whose sunny disposition was an inspiration to those who knew her.
A faithful student, whose work was always sincere and well done.
An ever-ready participant in worthy activities.
A girl whose whole-hearted helpfulness and deep understanding of others endeared her to all of us.

OUR CLASSMATE
ELIZABETH OHLER GILLELAN

In Memoriam

An interesting companion, with ready wit and quick response.
A conscientious student, with work ever ready and commendably done.
A man sincere in his beliefs and loyal to them.

Foreword

“ALOHA!”, Hail! and “ALOHA!”, Farewell! Thus this musical word served the happy Hawaiians.

“ALOHA!” Thus are students greeted upon first entering this Isle of Knowledge; thus do they, in turn, meet those who follow them; thus do they bless those about to leave “The Hill;” and, finally, thus does the word serve for their benediction when they leave the Isle to make their cruise upon the Sea of Life.

Poignant are the memories summoned by the word. To make these memories concrete and imperishable, we, the Class of ’30, present to you this volume, bearing with it our “ALOHA!” of greeting, and awaiting your “ALOHA!” of farewell.

Alma Mater

When our college days are over,
Round our hearts shall cling
Memories of our Alma Mater,
Every day shall bring.

But our life is swiftly passing,
Soon its course is run.
What e'er our lot we'll ever cherish,
Friendships here begun.

College Ties can ne'er be broken.
Formed at W. M. C.

Far surpassing words unspoken.
Ever may they be.

Western Maryland! Hail, all Hail!
Echo softly from each heart.

We'll be ever loyal to thee
Till we from life shall part.

Browning Literary Society, Preliminary Contestant 1, 3; Shakespeare Club 1, 2, 3, 4; Le Cercle Français 2, 3; Gold Bug Reporter 3, 4; College Players 3, 4; Y. W. C. A. 1, 2, 3, 4; College Sunday School 1, 2, 3, 4; J. G. C.

WHY does Grace go home so often? Maybe there is more attraction there than we know. We wonder if she had something up her sleeve when she chose a college so near home. Anyway, we are all glad she came to Western Maryland.

Grace is one of those meek individuals who knows more than she expresses, but underneath her apparent demureness, there is an abundant store of fun.
HERE are three things which, without "Bummy," would not be wholly themselves.

One is his Ford, his new and speedy tin road-runner; the second is his banjo, with which he can make the very stones sit up and take notice; the third is the Jesters, which, without him, would not seem quite up to standard. It is by these three things that he is chiefly known to the multitude. To those who have associated with him during his college career, these three things are but three minor mediums which serve as interpreters of the better "Bummy."
ASENATH ANNA BAY

J. G. C.

EVERY day “Bay” carries out being “efficiency plus” as a matter of course and with no difficulty at all. She is always present at the right time in the right place, determined that what is to be done shall be done well.

In spite of her college duties, much of Asenath’s time is taken up in flitting from one room to another with her “orders from headquarters,” beginning, “Girls, Mrs. Stover says—.”

Enjoying both the serious and the lighter phases of college life, “Bay” also assumes the unusual role of collecting college strikes after dinner. Who knows how many interesting dates she has had while a less cautious co-ed stopped to apply the powder puff? Not even “Bay” will tell.

The least that we can say of “Bay” is that she knows the art of “real living,” and never fails to use it. That the world will appreciate her as we do is unquestioned.

"MY TRUE Love Hath My Heart" is the theme-song to "Mandy"s" college life, a comedy of errors. She is one of those little warblers from the mountains of Western Maryland, with a lively and amiable disposition, whose cheerfulness has penetrated many a heart. "Mandy" is especially fond of Longfellow’s poetry, and his description of Cambridge life has caused her to express a desire to visit "Cambridge" sometime to meet "the folks."

O. T. C. 4; Editor-in-Chief ALOHA 4; Rifle Team 4; Jesters 4; German Club 4; Honorable Mention 1, 2, 3; "Best Student" 4.

"Bell" is one who deserves universal acclaim for his accomplishments while at Western Maryland. It has always been his aim to discredit the general belief that the highest scholastic honors do not go with the greatest efficiency in extra-curricular activities. His long list of activities, culminating in the Editorship of the ALOHA, coupled with his enviable record as a student, proves him the victor. With all this, however, his social life was not neglected, and, more than once urgent business remained waiting until social hours were over. Undoubtedly "Bell" is the well-rounded college man.

Look the whole world over and you will be sure to find only one “Gus.” Who else could be so friendly and so kindhearted? College for him has been a great experience, a vital factor in rounding out his sincere and generous nature. For four years he has been, not a dazzling genius, but the same reliable friend that he was when he first came to Western Maryland. By his friendliness alone he has endeared himself to all who knew him, for good friendship is far more valuable than the success that often comes through sacrificing the little essential traits of good character.

There is one who is a born gentleman; not of the type who thinks only of dressing to the latest fashion, but one who can lay an honest claim to the title of gentleman, and who can, above all else, back up his claim. Anyone, knowing "Lee," cannot help but admire him. We have noticed that during his last year, quite contrary to the preceding three, his attentions were not nearly so widely scattered among the co-eds. We wonder why.
"BEHOLD, I see through a glass darkly."

Thus "J. D." announces the fact that the tempest in the test tube is deciding a questionable theory. "J. D." is a man of theories; his philosophy is that of a man of many years and experiences. But his knowledge leaves him unburdened, his tongue is ever ready with clever repartee, and the variety and novelty of his conversation is startling. Many is the housewife who has succumbed to his telling arguments to invest in the useful commodity he dispenses.
"Tom" is another one of those quiet fellows who says little and does much—his active club work and his "Y" work prove this. His masterful complacency is his most noticeable trait, but it can well be said that this merely forms the basis for his other equally important characteristics. He is among the most dependable men on the campus and is outstanding because of his business-like and quiet, independent air. Such stable characters and ready workers are never at a loss about what to do when "once-knocking" opportunity presents itself.

IN availing herself of the opportunity of the many home economics courses while she has been on “The Hill,” “Bettie” has displayed ample forethought; for, has she not recently divulged this reason? How well “Bettie” can use her famous “ten dollar words,” hand out acid comments, feed the hall on peanuts, while her thoughts are definitely concentrated on a certain celanese mill in the hills of Cumberland.

“T’l’ N’Y a pas de quoi!” “Çe n’est rien!”

This is fast becoming Mary Webber’s language as she does not want to go hungry next summer when she is in France. But don’t think that “Sunny” is always working on French. One can see her cheery smile anytime, anywhere. Everyone agrees that she is correctly nick-named, for she is seldom angry. It is provoking to find your best pair of stockings missing, and that’s the one time that “Sunny” does get angry. Can you blame her?

Was anyone ever seen Hayes Brown in a hurry? How, then, is it that he is so successful on the tennis courts? It must be that he has a vast reserve of speed to use at that time; certainly no one has ever seen him use it at any other time.

"Hazy" gives one an immediate impression of leisurely self assurance, which is justified by the fact that his work is done on time, with none of the bother and hustle that disturbs most of us.

“Bunce’s” most characteristic trait is that he sticks on his job. Whether an argument or a tough assignment, he has always approached every activity with a vigor and a persistency that could not but spell success. More than one man on “The Hill” has run up against his veritable stone wall of argument. Especially commendable is the interest which he displays in his military work, the manner in which he accomplished his practice teaching (a task which he had believed would be Herculean), and his ability to run down interesting snapshots. “Bunce” has managed very well, while on “The Hill,” to avoid the fair sex; but during his Senior year he has made frequent trips home by way of Salisbury—.

ROMPTLY around eight o'clock every morning one never fails to see "Joe" roll under the "arch" at a jolly gait in his well-known Whippet. Always he has a merry "Hello!" for everyone. "Joe" is a voluble talker, and can always be depended upon to make himself heard. No matter what is said, "Joe" always manages to say it in that peculiar "Bush" fashion that is all his own. Those who were at Camp Meade with him will never forget his interest in airplanes; and those who associate with him in the classroom or laboratory will never cease to admire his sincere interest in his work.
If you want stimulation for your creative imagination go tell your wild story to Lucille; she will not only believe it, but agree with you.

Lucille is a confirmed optimist; it makes no difference if work or trouble is piling up; she is always able to forget it and have a good time.

Have you ever seen Lucille burn the midnight oil? Yet who has ever known her not to have all her work in on time, though sometimes it be the last minute?

We have all learned to love Lucille's sympathetic and unassuming nature, and we have found that she is never so happy as when she is among her souvenirs.

THE salt of the earth—that is what “Libby” has been rightly called. Fun and seriousness mixed to just the right proportions make her, indeed, a good antidote for either the insipid or the over-seasoned.

Highly appreciative of the artistic, keenly sensitive to the humorous, and easily attractive in her unaffected way of speaking, “Libby” is the best company one could desire. And, oh; we must not forget her wonderful ability to spell words in the English language in most amusingly original ways.
"FRIEND in need is a friend indeed." This old adage well describes "Perry," for he more than once came to the rescue of his classmates in trying times. Along with this co-operative spirit, "Perry" proved to be a valuable source of information for his friends, for his six years stay on "The Hill" made him well acquainted with the channels of news. These same years also brought "Perry" into relation with many activities, and in each he has always been most efficient. Whether the abilities which he has manifested leads to railroading or the stage, we prophecy success.

No other member of the Class of '30 so well deserves his nickname as does "Frenchy," for "Frenchy" he is from his name to his tastes. Give him a few odds and ends, pictures, old sabers, anything, plus an unfurnished room and he will work a miracle. Mix well together the qualities that go to make up a cavalier, an actor, an artist, a musician, and a student, and what do you have but "Frenchy" DeHaven.

OBEHLD an "Argus-eyed" journalist. She but once in a lifetime of perfect behavior, and he will have you amusing "The Hill"—via "Around the Campus." The slightest whisper of scandal is sure to reach his ears, and is equally sure to be published for the edification of the reading public. But it is presented with such a cleverly original twist, that it strikes a humorous note even for the guilty persons.

Journalist? Obviously; but let's not forget the actor, debater, and orator. When it comes to putting words together, whatever the medium, "Mike" is the man for the job.

SCIENTIST to the core is Grant. At all hours of the day (and of the night too, if it were permitted) he may be found in the chemistry laboratory, bending over some evil-smelling brew that he is analyzing. He is the friend of every chemistry student in trouble. His unique schemes, un-thought-of methods, and original advice are sure to furnish the clue to the unraveling of the tangle. Don't think his interest has led him into a rut—he is as genuinely interested in the rest of the things that go to round out a personality as any of his class—but he does love chemistry.

Who would ever suspect that “Rip” had once been a school teacher? Rather would one think that he had been a mechanical engineer: for he can doctor a wheezy car until it sounds like the latest model from the show-room floor, and once in condition it stays there under his tender ministrations. How he ever gets time to star as he does in football and basketball is a fit subject for research. Interesting disclosures as to his rating and activities among the co-eds could, no doubt, be brought to light.

We have often wondered why Marianne didn’t hang out a shingle, “Room 15, Branch Office of Westminster Library.” Why study when there are so many books and magazines to read? But reading is not all that she does. Once she decides to attack some work, she can accomplish wonders in an exceedingly short time. Worry? Never! Marianne has a wonderful sense of humor and a good share of wit. But home economics is her forte. We wonder if she will be as efficient in handling the bills as she is in cooking.
"Well, I declare!" drawls "Fonny," the next instant clapping her hands over her mouth and giggling in characteristic "Fonny" style. Then she assumes her most lamb-like expression, makes an unexpected witty observation, and leaves before the meaning has penetrated the consciousness of those in the room.

Judging from her usual manner, one would say that "Fonny" goes along her way calmly and imper turbably, but once she gets really excited she shows it by tangling her words in a highly amusing fashion.

It has been truly said that "Fonny" possesses that rarity, common sense. Indeed, she has enough sense even to enjoy a bit of good nonsense.

Do these gloves look all right to wear with this coat?” Maude inquires. She is what we might term “pertickular.” Her beloved “Home Ec” probably accounts for part of this fastidiousness.

By the way, are home economics teachers in demand in New Jersey? We understand it to be one of quiet Maude’s ambitions to teach in that state rather than on her native Eastern Shore. Can you not see Maude now with her little nose turned up, laughing to herself as much as to say, “Wait, and see what happens!”

Dere is the perfect example of the modern business man who does things with a snap and air that command attention and assured success. Before joining the Class of '30 he completed the first two years of work at Shepherd College. At first acquaintance one is impressed with his individuality; but as acquaintance ripens into friendship, that characteristic blends into and supports all the other qualities which are, to us who know him, so outstanding in his nature.
ALTHOUGH Marie joined us for only two years and was a day student, she so readily took her place among us that it seems as if she had shared our entire four years' journey. Her sunny disposition added another bright spot to our class, and her hearty co-operation, an efficient member to it. Tall and stately, this Westminster Maid, appearing over "The Hill" with her books, personified intense seriousness; but her ready laughter dispelled the illusion.

We are glad that Marie chose a belated place in our class—we only regret that she was not with us all four years.

HE better some people are known, the less they are liked. Not so with Selena; for the more intimately one is associated with her, the more one can appreciate her kind, sympathetic nature. Indeed, her willingness to see only the good in others makes her admired by us all. And it is amazing that Selena retains her good disposition since the Class of '29 was graduated; for is it not true that "where one's treasure is, the heart is also?"
O one, especially those who have taken courses in Education, can ever forget "Ports" and his bus. There are those who know his bus better than they know him; but that is not surprising, for "Ports" is one who is forever on the go. A graduate of the Moody Bible Institute and of the Westminster Theological Seminary, George had the courage to undertake four years of college work while handicapped by his duties as a full time minister. This in itself speaks eloquently of his character and stamina. What he has accomplished under the circumstances is heroic.

Catherine is one of the outstanding members of our class. Not only does she "rate" high scholastically, but she also participates in many extra-curricular activities. We know her to be a true friend, a "regular" pal, and a good sport. She has been a member of the Student Government Board every year except one, and was president the last year. By her fairness toward everyone and her ability for leadership, we shall have to admit that her task has been well done.
"Bucky" is well known to all on "The Hill." Usually he doesn’t have much to say, but when he speaks he has something worthwhile to tell. "Bucky" is quite a sport, he is always neatly dressed, and can often be seen striding up the "Sacred Path" whistling some gay tune.

"Bucky" has ideas of his own along dramatic lines. He is waiting for a chance to demonstrate his gift to the eager public and thus establish a new "salon" of the theatre.

"Honesty now! I think that's right cute!"

Maybe it is a joke or maybe it is a new dress that "Mims" is talking about; nevertheless, it is "right cute." "Mims" does not talk as much as do some of her classmates. Perhaps she meditates more upon the mysteries of science, and will someday make an important discovery in Biology. Senior Hall has made one discovery about "Mims," however—she can make good cake.

You just have to know her to appreciate her! Strangers are always misled by the quiet manner which conceals her really charming personality. "Aud" is a woman of moods—sometimes she is in the depths of despair and then again she is sitting on top of the world.

She came to us from Blue Ridge College, well recommended as a talented musician in both piano and voice. Now she is interested in English and History and just recently she has added a third subject, namely, birds. Her special avocation is dancing. You should see her when the music is to her liking.
HO is making all of that noise? Give “Happy” two black marks!

“Come on, “Happy,” let’s go down town. Don’t bother to give the Navy and St. John’s a treat tonight.”

If she’s not creating excitement, “Happy” is sure to be getting practice for her composition and journalism courses, by writing voluminous letters to her numerous friends. We think she is destined for a future career in writing, but you probably wouldn’t think of her as such a serious-minded person if you were to see her on the campus as chief entertainer with her witty remarks and her clever antics. In short, “Happy” spells FUN in capital letters.

In this small space we cannot do justice to Edith; her good nature and readiness are ever apparent. Just start talking Latin to her; you will surely think she inherited the tendency to speak it. It's Edith who is always explaining the Morrison Unit, or solving that complicated Math problem.

The door of the future is open to you, Edith. Its joys and responsibilities are beckoning to you, ever saying: "Come, we have a place for you."

In short, if it's a dance, "Rab" is there. And why not? Believe us, that bundle of personality and winsomeness can really dance. But that isn't the only reason a man's chest expands when "Rab" is at his side—just take a look at her picture!

Whether our typical co-ed believes that "variety is the spice of life" or that "there is safety in numbers," we don't know; but we do know that "Rab" doesn't need to "ask Aunt Ada" for assistance.

A good student, a real pal—but why pile up compliments? "Rab" will treat them with her usual indifference. Nevertheless, just between you and us and the goal-post, the fellows got a "break" when "Rab" entered our class.

"UKEY" has gone through four happy years of college; and during that four years she has been bubbling over with contagious laughter, occupied at the same time with truly serious thought, and surrounded by a host of sincere friends.

"Ukey" is especially interested in Speech. When one sees her rushing madly from corridor to corridor, that is a sure sign that the Speech Department is presenting a program. She has made a name for herself as one of the outstanding orators of her class.

Her ambitions are two fold—she wishes to be either a teacher of Speech or a “Great Politician.” Whatever “Ukey” takes up, we are sure that she will make a great success.

We feel that Eliza “put one over” on us by doing two things at once, as shown by her dual superiority. And being systematic, Eliza decided there was a time for everything. She chose seven o’clock for dates, which put her so much behind schedule that she in time became queen of the mystic hour, and seated on her waste-paper basket throne she reveled with her nightly subjects: homogeneous equations, differential calculus, and analytic geometry. Doesn’t this prove that, so far as Eliza is concerned, what’s to be done will be done well?

It has been predicted that Ruth will have a joyous old age, laughing at the jokes which her English sense of humor has prevented her from appreciating in her youth. O

H, for the faculty that Virginia possesses of remaining calmly serene in the midst of the most irksome difficulties! Does a long assignment daunt her? Hardly. Watch and see if her's isn't completed at least two weeks in advance; and then, with work far from her mind, she's ready for fun.

Her main ambition is to find something different to do, and she usually does. Whether it be coasting down college hill on a bill-board or trying her luck in the rifle range, it's sure to be interesting. This fun-loving quality in her nature combines with her more serious traits to make her a person that one is fortunate to know and happy to call a friend.

THE gamín-like spirit of mischief manifesting itself in sundry "quips and cranks and wanton wiles" makes the demure appellation of Mary Louise a misnomer for "Ship." Intermingled with her fun-loving propensities, however, "Ship" possesses unusual talent along artistic and literary lines. All these characteristics are concealed by her modesty and her outward nonchalance.
HERE he comes into the dining room, late as usual. Yes that’s Harry Smith. We know him by his Cheshire cat grin, his “bubbling-over” pep, and his clean sportsmanship. With a way all his own, “Horry” is a sure-fire success wherever he may go. Admired and liked by all, he is certain never to lack friends. You’ll like him without ever knowing why, and like the rest of his acquaintances will go far out of your way to win the insouciant grin that betokens his gratitude.
"SPIKE" is just as keen and sharp of wit as her name implies, and yet we find in her a most sedate person.

The Class of '30 has something different by having "Spike," for she is a regular "walking encyclopedia." Please don't let the last statement persuade you to believe that "Spike" is a book-worm; it is true that she has known work and study—but not to the exclusion of fun.

DEPENDABLE—that’s “Jim.” Witness the regularity of the issues of the Gold Bug. Never bragging about his achievements, never shirking responsibility, “Jim’s” conduct shows him to be a disciple of the man who said, “What’s worth doing is worth doing well.” Steadily persisting in difficult work, he eventually finds himself the master of the task.
ONE of us who have truly known Ruth will ever forget her. To the casual observer she will seem noticeable for her hurried and extremely late departure for a Christian Council Association meeting in Baltimore, or tardiness in things of perhaps little consequence. To those who study her motives closely, she is outstanding for her fine precision, her gentle speech and manner, her poise, and her artistic ability. In Ruth's daily living are maintained and exhibited some of the finest pearls of character.

URADS were invented for Sterling. In the face of most trying circumstances he maintains his nonchalant poise and air of self-confidence. This is one of the assets which help him greatly in debating and in acting, two fields in which his analytical intellect and adaptive ability make him a leader. A leader he is in Military, too, where his intuitive sense of precision makes him outstanding. Suave and polished, but basically sincere, he makes false the widespread advertisement, "You wouldn't care to meet Marvin."

THE tread of busy feet walking down the hall, a thump on somebody's door, a cheerful, happy face thrust in, and a "Hello, everybody"—that's "Pete"—peppy, jolly, sympathetic, new (to us), but bound never to wear out. With an "Oh, gee! I've gotta see 'hickeydubiz,' don'tcha know," she breezes out again.
EVERYBODY is noted for something, but Minnie is rather unique in her fame. She has the unexcelled art of marrying off room-mates. Along other lines, though, she is equally as good. Her mathematical mind will serve her in good stead, whether it be in computing statistics or in determining the dimensions of a self-respecting water wave.
"Streettie" fell down and made a hole in her head. We are sure question-marks would run out for her daily quota of questions outnumbers those in any volume of "Ask Me Another." But one doesn't mind attempting to satisfy her insatiable curiosity, for she never forgets anything. This remarkable power of retention probably counts for "maximum grades from minimum work."

Someone said the name, Mary Katherine—so quaint—just suits "Streettie;" but we beg to differ. Of all the mischief and devilment proposed, "Streettie" can supply the worst; many a prank concocted by her has been executed (and punishment received) by others.
To appreciate a true mosaic one must be familiar with it, see it daily, and live close to it. The same can be said of girls like "Tillie," for we, who have been able to associate with her and be her friend, have profited much. If all "life is a mosaic," as a poet declares, then the college life of a girl like "Tillie" must be a mosaic of gems. If gems have meanings, then "Tillie’s" mosaic of life on "The Hill" would be "cut into tiny pieces and set with skill" into a frame of gold, symbolic of ties that bind us to her. We are glad to claim "Tillie" as a member of the Class of ’30, and are looking forward to seeing her great success in life.
DOES Harold Lloyd need a double? Gloria will do. She's a good girl to have around for more than one reason. Who supplies McDaniel Hall with mercurochrome and pencil sharpeners? Who is always ready to do an extra bit of typing? And who helps most to pile up basketball victories for the co-eds? Gloria, of course. Gloria's effective reasoning, her calm assurance, and her easy-going nature speak for the success she may expect in life.

If brevity is a criterion of wit, "Tilly" is the wittiest man on "The Hill." His sentences are almost monosyllabic, but there is a world of meaning in them. Perhaps it is his thrifty "Dutch" nature making the most use of the least effort. This efficiency is obviously not without reward; for he has risen to the heights in fraternal, language, science and athletic fields.
A few men of the Class of '30 have more friends than "Trice," and the fact is probably to be accounted for by his ability to get along well with people. When heated arguments in his room disturbed his study, he never expressed disapproval, but quietly left the room and proceeded with his work elsewhere. As a Science major, he found that his studies demanded most of his attention; however, he still found time for other activities. "Y," Student Council and his fraternity, along with good work on the soccer field, balanced his interests. Most of his spare time in his Senior year was divided between computing the interest of the "Y" finances and developing another sort of interest on the "Eastern Shore."

After having completed two years of work at Shepherd College, "Van" joined the Class of '30 in its Junior year. He is noted for his quiet manner and his industry. His character has a flavor all its own; and his ideas are equally as original. He seems never to worry, and always has a cheery smile and a merry hail for everyone. His laugh is the very soul of jollity, and his eyes are never without their laughing twinkle and sparkling mirth.
WHEN we think of Nila we always think of music, too. During her four years on "The Hill" she has accomplished more and more in this field, until now when she is to be graduated—the first who has majored in music. So much has her fame spread that a song, "The Wearing of the Green," has been dedicated to her.

But music isn't all that claims Nila's attention. We find her ready to take part in other activities, and in those favorite pastimes of playing bridge, eating apples, and combing her curly red hair.
"E-OH-OOH! All out for fire drill!" Echoes through the building, as Captain Ward stalks down the hall. Frances began her Senior year by throwing her helmet into the political ring when she aspired for the estimable position of McDaniel Hall Fire Chief. Since the election she has found it impossible to escape the publicity of the press.

Any sketch of Frances would be incomplete without at least mentioning her prophetic dreams, with which she entertains at the breakfast table. Besides her nocturnal visions she is frequently occupied with day-dreams about—well, farms, cats, etc.
"DOUG" is one of the students who goes back and forth every day from school to home with the regularity of the clock's ticking. And he is just as dependable and punctual as a good clock. There are many reasons for his likeableness: he has a knack of smiling a real, friendly smile, he always has a cheery greeting for everyone. Such things as these will be remembered by his classmates, though he comes and goes with no more show than the passage of time.
"THE HILL" will indeed miss this demure, modest maiden after she is gone. Helen is small physically, but not so in the thoughts of all her friends. Helen is a good student in whatever course she studies, but especially is she interested in music and mathematics. (The latter is a heavy subject for such a little person.) She loves her music and has done remarkably well in the short time she has studied it.

Here is another interesting little person. Mary, too, is small, but she is radiant with life and energy, and forms a striking contrast to her more demure sister. The girls get heaps of fun in teasing and playing jokes on Mary, but she takes it all as a good sport would, and is just as ready to play tricks in return.

Mary is interested in studying bugs; in fact she is interested in all sorts of science. She is very keen-minded, and, would she exert herself just a bit more, we could expect wonders from her. Who knows? She may surprise us anyway.
"Foot" has never been heard to complain loudly about anything, nor to judge anything unjustly. Faced sometimes with seemingly overwhelming difficulties, he always has a sound reserve from which to draw the means for attaining his purpose. "What is, is, so make the best of what you have" seems to be the keyword of his life. Everyone who really knew him will say that his friendship is helpful and encouraging on all occasions.

If you are intent upon your work, be sure "Jap" is just about to come in with the latest funny story. Beginning with, "Does anyone here take 'Labor Problems'," he manages to while away the rest of the evening for you—and make you like it. If there is a funny way to look at a situation, he realizes it first. If he can't make you "bite" on a joke, you gain his everlasting respect. Few there are who have thus gained it. His ability to tell clever stories, his nimble fingers, and his head full of nonsense make him an invaluable trouper, as the patrons of the Jesters know so well.
HERE is a man who, following the well known adage, hitched his wagon to a star—and landed at Western Maryland College. Few there are who know him, for he is one who says much in few words. Though he has been hindered from taking part in activities because he lives at such a distance, his well-meaning loyalty to his class cannot be mistaken.

What is more characteristic of “Billy” than her happy-go-lucky attitude? Her whole self is nothing but Pep and Dance! Can she? Does she? Her week-ends in Manchester will testify to this.

“Billy” is interested mostly in speech and music. She becomes very serious and settles down to real work when a speech or music recital is to be given. Her success in these is well worth her effort. Beethoven and Haydn would feel quite proud if they heard “Billy” rendering one of their sonatas.
WHEN the final roll is called and the merits are awarded, Roger will be right there. That's just his nature. He is patient as a Dutchman and thrifty as a Scotchman, but these two characteristics alone do not account for his popularity on "The Hill." Coupled with them are the more ideal virtues; a high sense of honor and duty, and an appreciation of the good things of life. As for the future, we know he will make good.

If you ever want to be entertained just ask her to sing for you, and when she laughingly rolls those brown eyes and shakes her saucy red curls in time to the song—it's a treat! You'd be surprised how deceiving her red hair is, for she seldom loses her temper even under a deluge of perplexing problems or annoying trivialities. Deceased.
History of the Class of '30

All classes go through the same routine during their college career, and have practically the same historical sketch at the end of the four years. At least one distinction, for awhile, can be claimed by the class of '30. We are the largest class that has ever been graduated from Western Maryland College. During Freshman Week several orientation speeches were made, saying that, judging from the statistics of previous classes, only one half of the class that was entering would graduate. We are glad to state that in our case the statistics proved false.

The first part of our Freshman year was spent in becoming oriented into college life and bowing to the Sophomores. During the year we became more bold, and by spring were ready to introduce the innovation of May Day. In fact, the class staged two such fetes. The co-eds tried to imitate the old English custom, and the freshmen imitated the burlesque form the co-ed performance.

The Sophomore year was our crowning year for athletics. Both men's and women's teams won their respective class basketball tournaments. Besides this, the women put up strong opposition in the inter-class field ball and volley ball tournaments. All four years the class has given good material to the varsity teams; the climax was reached in the Senior year, when six of the class were represented on the undefeated eleven.

The main event of the class of '30 during our Junior year was the entertaining of our sister class at a delightful party in McDaniel Hall Parlors.

Scholastic work in extra-curricular activities has labeled the class during its whole college life. In its Freshman year it produced an inter-collegiate debater, and during its Junior year both of the men's Literary Society debating teams were entirely comprised of 30-i ans. In dramatics, journalistic work, and the Jesters, the class has had a high percentage of representation.

Truly it can be said that the class of '30 has not been the center of an extraordinary number of progressive experiments and ideas; but it came at a time when many innovations needed firm support to establish them as precedents. This we hope our class has helped to do.

As the Senior year of the class of '30 draws to a close, we realize that the years have generously yielded education and happiness. Our one desire now is to repay our Alma Mater by continuing to bring it honor.
Class Prophecy

Baltimore, Maryland
May 15, 1950

Dear Flo—

I have been having the worst time imaginable, trying to get this 20th anniversary lined up. It seems that our class has scattered to the four corners of this old earth, and I am afraid that all of them will not be able to get here by June 2. Why, only this morning I had a cable from Tom Grove, who is in charge of the missionary work in Antarctica, saying that he was afraid he should be snow bound until August.

And do you know, Flo, I had the greatest thrill yesterday. I saw our old classmate, Leslie Grover, in "Her Man." He certainly did rise rapidly in the talkies after taking that dramatics course at W. M. C. Around that same movie set was Helen Harry. She's quite a success at doubling for Dolores Del Rio in the talkies. Even Julia Williams and her husband were with the movie set. She is the proud wife of a preacher who is undertaking the reforming of the actors and actresses. All the movie folk from W. M. C. have been loyal to Watson Phillips, the great criminal lawyer who cleaned up Chicago. "Phil" says "Charlie" Havens has received a medal in the courts for being the greatest defender of females in the history of divorce proceedings. Don't say a word about it, but Dennis Raynor's name is brought up quite frequently. He's the man who has taken over Flo Ziegfield's Follies, and is quite notorious.

I was down at the school the other day looking over the younger generation, when whom should I bump into but the Warren sisters. Helen is teaching Math. As a side line she is keeping watch over Mary, who is teaching First Aid in the Classroom. Her specialty is First Aid for fainting. I was quite amazed when I looked on the shelf and found the Gunby Dictionary. Eleanor is a great lexicographer by choice rather than by vocation, I heard. Along with that was Arvalene Hitchen's book, "Fame." Arvalene is cited by critics as the second George Eliot.

John D. Bowers has accepted our invitation to be toast master, and that takes a great load off my mind. He bought out the Real Silk, and perfected a process of his own. Lee Bowers is coming, too. He wanted to bring his wife, but I told him this was strictly limited to the class of '30. Since he adopted the slogan, "Give me Liberty or give me Punch," he has trebled his sale of magazines.

I have been in touch with "Jap" Weisbeck to supply the music for the reunion, but since he has succeeded to Paul Whiteman's crown as jazz king, he is about
I want to get George Baumgartner to help with the entertaining, too. He and “Dan” Link are on the radio now. “Dan” also introduces Ruth Gleichman. She plays the violin on the side, but her real work is as head of the music department at Allegany High.

Speaking about “The Hill,” you heard that Wilmer Bell, the renowned bloodless surgeon, had been made chief of the medical staff, didn’t you? Yes, they had so much appendicitis they had to get a special surgeon to stay there full time. Helen Harvel came down to “The Hill” to familiarize W. M. C. with the unit issued by the N. E. A., of which she is the secretary. Edith Rill is teaching her favorite Math in place of Spicer. She’s anxious to get to Cornell, where all the Math teachers go. ‘Jo certainly made a haul on “The Hill;” for Ruth Routson is also there. She is assisting Miss Lease in the Speech Department, and is making a good job of it.

Excuse me a minute, Flo, while I answer the door bell— . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . . I’m sorry I was so long getting back to this letter, but it was “Frenchy” DeHaven, the great Metropolitan Basso. He says he sees “Mandy” Bell often. She’s a prima donna, but it looks as if she will soon settle down to domesticity. Speaking of singers, Minnie Strawbridge will be at the reunion, as she takes time off her concert tour to sing in Alumni Hall during Commencement Week. That’s another incentive. But, getting back to “Frenchy,” he just came back from an extended tour of Europe, and while there he came across any number of our classmates. Here’s the dope I got from him just as he told me:

“I went to Paris first, and no sooner had I gotten off the train than I met “Alex” O’Lear. “Alex” had started as a fight announcer, but later he went into the promoting game. He was on his way to Spain to take back a couple of bulls to the states. Just as I was turning about, who should walk up but Mary Webber Broughton, with her husband, Count Houzat. She had been studying French, now she’ll probably teach it. I decided to take a taxi to my hotel. Who do you suppose was the taxi-driver? “Rip” Engle! “Rip” told me he had imbibed a love for gas engines while at W. M. C. and could not give them up. “Rip” had made good, but hearing that Otis Trice had gone bankrupt trying to support his family, he gave Otis his fortune to start anew.

“I arrived at the Bijou and went straight to my room. I was so terribly worn from the heat of Paris that I called down for ice water. About an hour later in loped ‘Speedy’ Warren with his old time dash and vitality, balancing a huge pitcher of ice water in his hand.

“I spent several days in Paris, and then decided to hop over to Oberammergau to see the Passion Play. My old friend, Granville Eaton, was the casting director of the company. I asked Eaton for some of the college news, and, in turn, offered him some. Evelyn Mather was so taken up with the system of transportation in Europe that she knew there was only one vocation for her. She was to go back to Westminster as a taxi-driver. Granville reluctantly gave us the news that Virginia Merrill is a second Sarah Bernhardt. He seemed to think that perhaps ‘Gincy’ would play in Europe. Maybe he was just trying to keep something from us.

“Upon arriving at Le Bourget on the way back, who should I see but ‘Joe’ Bush, the big Barker from Hampstead. ‘Joe’ had gone into the circus business as a Barker, but found that he was dissatisfied. He is now the world’s most famous airplane caller. Naturally he doesn’t forget any of his old friends. He told me that Isabel Wentz is a musical comedian on Keith Circuit, now playing in her old hometown, Hampstead. When I got into the airplane who should I sit next to but ‘Perry’ Dawson. He had just sold his chain of restaurants, and was answering Eaton’s pleas to become stage manager for the Passion Play. ‘Perry’ had seen Paul Tillman on the way down, and said that now he is Herr Von Tillman, and is running for president of the German Republic on the Free Soil ticket.

“Our plane stopped off in Amsterdam to pick up a very distinguished passenger, old Albert Van Meter, the financier. Albert told us he had come over to the old country to rebuild the dykes. You can’t imagine who was at the flying field—Mary Katherine Streett! She had been spending all her time testing planes preparatory to her attempt to make a non-stop flight to Brazil. What will she do next?

“My next stop was at Monte Carlo. I met Hayes Brown, the senator from Kansas. He was rather tired out from his trip from the states, where he had just completed his fight to have the Volstead Act repealed. It was a smashing victory. Who should appear on the scene at this time but ‘Dick’ Willis. He had just broken the bank at Monte Carlo. Eliza Russell, his wife, had figured out beforehand by statistical methods just how this could be done, and ‘Dick’ gave her all the credit for making the fortune that they had to take back home. ‘Dick’ didn’t seem to be thinking much about taking the money home to the children, though, because he was pitching twenty dollar gold pieces with ‘H. O.’ Smith. Harry has become the heavyweight champion of Russia. Some people told me that they thought he was out gunning for ‘Pete’ Gomsaak. ‘Pete,' he said, had taken over the cartoon strip, ‘Toots and Casper,’ and changed it to ‘Toots and Harry.’ Harry said he had seen Katherine Speicher in Russia at the meeting of new nations. She was representing Accident. Well, we had a grand time. ‘Dick’ took us out to the Riviera in his limousine to hear Mark Jenkins, the internationally known tent-speaker, who was traveling and speaking throughout Europe. It seems as if Grace Armstrong had tried evangelistic work there, but forsook it for poetry. She now directs the Poets' Club Confederation of Colleges in the East. For a time Grace and Mark ran a big competition.

"I had been traveling for a week and had gotten so deep into Europe that I welcomed the sight of somebody who spoke English. I was driving in a cheap foreign car, when I noticed that a stranger popped up out of nowhere. I recognized the old sign and stopped. It was Leon Bunce. He was bumming over Europe after having cleaned up a million by inventing a process for making synthetic country butter. Leon had been traveling with 'Gus' Belote; but when 'Gus' found that the nights were six months long in Xuzhai, he decided to stay there and sleep awhile."

My dear, I must get back to business, although "Frenchy's" experiences are very interesting.

I just received "Tom" Braun's acceptance of the invitation day before yesterday. His stationery was headed, "Eat Bran for Brains and Braun." The same mail brought short, newsy letters from other members of the class. Asenath Bay accepted and said that she was with the Western Union Telegraph Company delivering messages, a new occupation for women. She said that "Betty" Brengle's marriage anniversary had just been telegraphed to the Davidson College Busy Body for publication. Another letter told us that the Raughley sisters have really been separated. "Anne" is a keeper of the Zoo. She is especially attracted to the bird cages. Frances is now in Texas. Don't think she is a Lone Star Ranger, though; because "Cowboy" will take care of that. It looks good to see a Westminster postmark again. I got a letter from "Jim" Stach, who has succeeded "Dick" Harlow as athletic director at W. M. C. "Betty" Mitchell and Gloria Thornburg, who have finished their work at Sargeant, are back with the athletic department.

The theatregoers, or rather movie fans, experienced a queer thrill the other night. I was at the movies and never have I ever seen so many people that I know on one row. On the Maryland Board of Censors was Virginia Scrivener. Next came the Theatre Wit, Elizabeth Clough, of all people, was Wit Editor for Cameo Corporation. Next came the Pathe News. Ellen Garcelon was shown in her swim o( the Atlantic, which broke all records. She surely hasn't lost that grace. Lands! Alice Huston is spending time at the Military Station in Hawaii. I couldn't help laughing, but someone behind me laughed and enjoyed the same joke that I did. The cause was Edna Johnson, anxiously awaiting the vaudeville in which some man, I didn't catch his name, was to play the violin. I wonder!

I was up in Westminster for the day last week and saw C. H. Wentz. He is now Dean of Education at W. M. C.; so there won't be any doubt about his being there. Oh—and Dr. G. R. Hitchcock, too; he took over his father’s business. George’s slogan is “Your teeth extracted without pain, or your teeth back.” Marianne Engle was in town for the day with her children. They all look very healthy, probably as a result of the crack Home Ec Department that was in the college when Marianne went there. You remember how very domestic Marie Lynch was? Well, she settled down to be chief buyer in Nusbaum and Jordan’s. While I was talking to Marie, up comes “Mims” Reifsneider for a complete farmer’s wife’s costume. Her love of farms has kept her in the country. “Mims” says she sees Audrey Repp quite a bit. She’s a preacher’s wife, visiting the congregation and playing the organ. As a side line her little “crows” are progressing rapidly.

The folks from the Eastern Shore will have an easy time getting to the reunion, now that the new bridge has been opened. That sure was a novel idea of “Bill” Hobbs to build the bridge from College Hill to the “Sho’” better to facilitate bumming for the students. Think of all the girls from the class who will be able to come over. Virginia Fontaine is Supervisor of the Eastern Shore High Schools. Her name helped to qualify her for the position. Maude Heath will bring her boy husband on a tricycle, I guess. She wouldn’t marry until she was thirty-two and by that time all the older men were taken. Edna Nordwall did just the opposite and showed her good sense when she became an old man’s darling instead of a young man’s slave. “Dot” Holliday is down on the Eastern Shore, working hard for Uncle Sam. They say matrimonial bliss is sweet. “Es” Hollins is so pleased over the prospect of this bridge that she was caught making a fatal jump to the “Rattlers” last week. She’d better be careful. Margaret Leonard wants to drive over in her high-powered car. It looks as if teaching is really a good business. Catherine Read is going to take time off from her campaigning for Maryland Congresswoman and drive over. By the way, Catherine takes two cars around, one for herself and one for her four children. Speaking of children makes me think of another Eastern Shoreman—Ruth Sartorius. She has started a Pocomoke School for Babies. It’s a shame that Taylor’s Island is so far from the new bridge, but if “Tillie” Thompson can leave her beauty parlor long enough, she’s coming to the reunion.

Our transportation problem has been solved by “Bill” Pelton, who began with his old flivver running between Westminster and Harrisburg. Now “Bill” has a fleet of luxurious coaches covering that route at irregular intervals. “Bill” has offered us the use of his busses under the personal supervision of Grant Edmonds, his master chauffeur. By the way, that provides a way for Rebekah Stonebraker to get down from Hagerstown, where she is supervisor of all W. M. C. extension courses.

Remember how we used to take trips to New York right after we graduated? If you go up anytime soon, I can give you a tip-off for a peppy place to go. Mary Moore started in the tea room business, but got a big break and is now hostess at the Connecticut Cafe, the most popular night club for the theatrical celebrities. I'll tell you who I saw the last time I was there—Louise Shipley. Her new play is running in New York now. She's also secretary of the Theatre Guild. It was just like a reunion of W. M. New Yorkers the night I was there. Even Blanche Robinson came in. Upon Dorothy Dix's resignation, Blanche took her position in giving advice to the lovelorn, no doubt from her own experiences. Naturally with Blanche came "Beth" Howard. She's out in Greenwich Village. The lure was too great; they all took to "Beth" right away. But, Flo, before you dare enter the place be sure your dress and etiquette are the very best. You could go down to "Happy" Rickards, who runs the "Cole Culture School." Then go to see Elizabeth Scott at her Parisian gown shop on Fifth Avenue.

Oh, I almost forgot Roger Willard. You remember what a genius he always was for making both ends meet. He has established the Bank of Scotland and saved his country from ruin, for which his countrymen tried to make him their patron saint. I'll let you in on a secret if you promise not to mention it. Lucille Charles uses his bank. She's awfully rich, and is a great sportswoman. Her "Fox"-hunting has done wonders for her name. "Pat" Proskey was going to pool her fortune with Lucille's; but she decided she "really couldn't afford it," so now she is doing social work among the "Japs."

Our reunion should not suffer from lack of either funds or flowers. Latimer Watkins is now president of the Farmers' International Bank in Mt. Airy. Selena Pickett promises to decorate the dining hall with flowers. Everyone says her gardens are beautiful.

You know I told you we had lost track of Branch Phillips. Well, right after graduation it seemed that he stumbled out West. While out there he was kidnapped by an Indian tribe and adopted. He worked his way up to be chief, and then started to experiment on them by feeding them peanuts.

George Ports is still a preacher. He got the novel idea of building one central church and running a bus service to carry his flock to church. The bus goes up as far as Belair every Sunday. Last Sunday I heard that Thelma McVey came down. She's superintendent at the big Belair Hospital. W. M. C. is trying to get her.

You mentioned "Bucky" Reed in your last letter. I looked him up in "Who's Who," and found that he is listed as the greatest living authority on machine guns, and that he is known as the "Little Corporal of Carroll County." "Bucky" is down in Central America, now running a revolution in the Republic of Waiback. President Hoover is too much engrossed in affairs at the national capital to pay any attention to the war down there, because Hannah Mace is now chief dietitian.
at the White House. That old saying, "the way to a man's heart is through his stomach," must be true. Nila Wallace plays her original piano compositions during every meal at the White House. Do you blame him for staying at home?

Excuse me, Flo; there goes my doorbell again. ................. Guess what!—it was a radiogram from Marvin Sterling. He is now the owner of the Chesterfield Night Club, Ltd., 14 Downing Street, London, and he has invited us to have our twentieth anniversary there.

My! I feel as if you'll never wade through my letter, Flo; but this is all the news, and plenty for this time. Let me know how the refreshment committee is getting along.

Reminiscently yours,

P———.

P. S.—I almost forgot to tell you that D. O. Ward is the new W. M. C. president. Don't make any wild mistakes.

P———.

History of the Class of '31

THREE short years ago a new group of Freshmen made their debut at Western Maryland College. They were fresh from high school, green, it is true, but of a dauntless spirit. Now they are Juniors, having gained in experience, but not lost in spirit.

The class of 1931 had not been long upon "The Hill" before its qualities were discovered by various organizations. The literary societies sought valuable addition to their memberships. Musicians and singers have appeared in local concerts. The Jesters have drawn heavily upon this class for talent.

Athletic teams have come to depend more and more upon members of the class of '31. Some of the bulwarks of the undefeated football team were Juniors. Two of these were selected on the All-Maryland team, one of them was designated best bet. No other class has contributed to the boxing team in the last three years as this one has. Two Eastern Intercollegiate champions belong to the class of '31.

In intramural athletics it was first "Watch the Freshmen," then "Watch the Sophomores," and now is "Watch the Juniors." But all the athletic honors must not be rendered to the boys. The co-eds have done their share toward the success of athletic teams, extramural or intramural.

With the widening of opportunity the class of '31 has broadened its activities. Each new responsibility has been met. Before us is our Senior year and then Life. It is our hope that we may meet these new responsibilities and meet them well.

History of the Class of '32

HE past year has been a memorable one in the annals of the class of '32. “Silly Sophomores?” Yes, at times, but we are well on the way to wisdom. From the time that we rode under the Arch in early fall the Sophomore sway began. It is not difficult to imagine the atmosphere of awesome respect that we impressed upon our new (and now very dear) Freshies. Sophomores will (and must) be Sophomores; so “Rat Rules” were cheerfully and effectively enforced.

In the field of athletics the Sophs have shown prowess and an unusually fine spirit. Football, hockey, basketball, baseball, and the other sports found ready participants in our midst. Co-eds and men alike gave keen competition in the various interclass tournaments.

It must not be supposed, however, that athletics have set the limits of our achievements. Our class has given outstanding support to the many social functions on “The Hill.” In addition to our successful Hallowe’en party, we gave time and talent to May Day and Commencement activities. Besides this, the various student organizations received our heartiest co-operation.

The class of '32 has made its mark not only in extra-curricular fields, but also in scholastic fields. Beginning with a well-grounded freshman foundation, we have been successful in our further intellectual development.

This second year has been a very happy one; and, though a few have left our ranks for other walks in life, the Sophomore class remains a unit, and is happy and proud to be a part of W. M. C. We are looking ahead with eager anticipation toward further achievement on College Hill.

History of the Class of '33

The memorable day upon which we were first initiated into the mysteries of college was the nineteenth of September. On that day many a very green freshman stood hour after hour, footsore and weary, in a seemingly endless line at the library. Our purpose? It was just an old Western Maryland custom, that of registering.

Our Freshman Week, though truly not a week, seemed quite adequate to us, poor bewildered adventurers that we were.

Then followed the eventful return of the upper classmen and Sophomores. Who can look back upon “Rat Rules” without experiencing a tingling sensation? At the time we considered the Sophs cruel monsters luring us, poor innocents, into their wily clutches purely for their own amusement. Then who does not remember the “rat caps” and green ties? Doubtless many an earnest prayer has been delivered to the effect that those bothersome bits of tradition be abolished by a bolt of lightning from heaven or by some other superhuman intercession.

Then we underwent a long period of adaptation, a necessary factor in the production of perfect co-operation. We participated in the various activities upon “The Hill,” such as the Y. W. C. A., the Y. M. C. A., the literary societies, debating, and special entertainments.

Examinations are like the measles, we all go through them. Some there are among us who were exposed to those necessary evils for the first time. Nevertheless, we all managed to survive, but perhaps that was because Bonnies’ aided in the process of recuperation.

The most notable feature of our athletics was the boys’ basketball team. They are perhaps the ones who have made the best showing athletically for which we feel not a little proud.

Under the fine tutelage of its coaches, Captain Woolley and Sergeant Mashburn, the rifle team experienced another successful season. In a preliminary match to determine the teams to represent the Third Corps Area in the National Matches, our team competed with the teams of all the colleges in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, and the District of Columbia. In this match we ranked third, winning the privilege of firing in the National Matches. This consisted of a series of weekly telegraph matches with forty different colleges in all parts of the United States.

Shoulder-to-shoulder matches were also fired. The University of Maryland, Gettysburg College, and Georgetown University were the opponents in these matches. Needless to say, marked success attended the efforts of the team in these matches as well as in the others.

EVER before in the history of Western Maryland College has any one of its athletic teams reached the heights upon which the present team now stands, for the Western Maryland Football Team is the only team in football history to play and win eleven games in eleven consecutive weeks. Finishing the season of 1929 with a perfect undefeated and untied record in eleven engagements, including three major opponents, it remains at the top of the Eastern football world, second only to the University of Pittsburgh, the ranking national champion.

The "eleven straight" amply rewarded Coach "Dick" Harlow and his players for their untiring efforts. "Dick" worked devotedly with a small squad faced with the constant peril of being left without sufficient reserves because of sickness and injuries, which played havoc with the eleven. Situations were expertly analyzed and strategic adaptations were made in order to attain the maximum of efficiency, and to use the available material to the best advantage. The team's record again supports the football knowledge and instructive ability of "Dick" Harlow.
The outstanding features of the season were the triumphs over Georgetown, Temple, and the University of Maryland, and the defensive that yielded only three touchdowns in the eleven games.

While winning its games the Terrors also produced two of the country's outstanding football stars. Paul Bates, Western Maryland star end, who figured so prominently in wins over Georgetown and Temple, was named on several All-Eastern teams, and obtained further recognition in being named on several of the mythical All-American teams. The other Green and Gold best bet to receive nation-wide recognition was “Charlie” Havens, the sterling captain and center, who was also mentioned on several All-American teams. The remaining ones on the team were not to be outdone, however, for when the mythical All-Maryland team was named the line-up was very similar to the original Green Terror team. Six men were named to receive the coveted honor. Among these were Bates and Havens, end and center respectively; Alexander O’Leair and Ludwig Pincura, tackles; George Ekaitis, quarter-back; and Frank Clary, half-back. To George Ekaitis belongs much of the credit for the team's success. It was his superb generalship and his accurate diagnosis of plays and hard and deadly tackling that caused many people to say "he made the line." It would not be out of order to mention the fine and effective work of Floyd Doughty as passer and punter extra-ordinary, and of Karl Welling as speedy ball-carrier and nonchalant "safetyman." Neither can we forget the steady and consistent work of the guards, Weisbeck, Kohout, and Benson, and the work of "Rip" Engle as a defensive end. The other members of the team, when called upon, responded by giving their best efforts to make the team a winner.

The first opponent, the University of Baltimore, was disposed of easily on Hoffa Field by the score 34-0; but the victory as well as the large margin was expected.

Traveling to Washington the next Saturday, the Terror squad amazed the entire football world by a brilliant victory over Georgetown University, 7-0. The winning points came as the result of a well executed pass by Doughty to Bates, and Gomsak's successful try for point. In this game the Terror captain and team played inspired and perfect football.

Clary and Lawrence, then, in the next game, brought Western Maryland from behind to defeat St. Thomas, 12-6. "Tiny" Pincura, two hundred pound tackle, sustained a shoulder injury that kept him out of the game for two weeks.
Temple was the next major opponent to fall before a slashing and deceptive attack in the first Stadium game. Coming to the game with a highly touted team and record, Temple received a severe jolt that stopped at 23-0, for Doughty and Lawrence out-Whearshinged Whearshing. Bates and Havens again played a lot of football, with Bates scoring two touchdowns on two beautifully executed passes, and "Rip" Engle accounting for the other by intercepting an "Owl" pass.

Albright found a 6-0 half-time lead too small to hold Harlow's fast-stepping outfit and they were humbled 20-6 before hostilities ceased. Bates, Clary, Havens, and Wellinger carried the brunt of the battle.

St. Johns and Loyola were easily taken into camp in the next two contests by the respective scores 20-0 and 35-7. Loyola registered the first and only touchdown that has been scored on the Terrors in the last four years of Stadium competition. It was in this game that we lost the service of our star bucking-back, "Pete" Gomsak, for the remainder of the season, because of a broken scapula suffered during the opening minutes of play.

The team, although they hit a slump in their next three conflicts against comparatively weak but highly inspired opposition, managed to forge through maintaining a perfect record. Mt. St. Mary's played a commendable defensive game until Doughty cut loose with a 32-yard escape that netted the only six points gathered. St. Francis' record number of passes were short of the end zone against Western Maryland's defense. In the second quarter Wellingher scampered 28 yards on a clever break-away from the scrimmage line, and Ekaitis kicked goal, giving a total of seven points for us against none for our opponents. Muhlenberg, our bugaboo, after playing a creditable game and offering stubborn resistance, fell before a beautifully executed pass from Doughty to Bates by a 7-0 defeat.

In the closing struggle of the season, with the University of Maryland, for the Maryland football championship, the Terrors recovered from their temporary slump and decisively defeated Maryland, 12-0. The University of Maryland had recently tied with Yale 13-13, and was conceded an even chance to win. It was a matter of clinching a possession already owned and Western Maryland proved capable of sustaining an untied and undefeated campaign. In this last game the Terrors played without the services of Captain Havens, O'Leair, Pelton, and Gomsak. The above-mentioned players, with Tillman, Stach, and DeHaven, completed this year their football careers at Western Maryland College.

Freshman Football

THE "Baby Terrors" opened their difficult season by journeying to Lewisburg, where, after having held the Bucknell Frosh even until the last minute of play, they were defeated as the result of a last desperate pass, which ended with the ball in Bucknell's possession over the goal line. They next traveled to Annapolis, where they were defeated, 18-6, in a game marked by a last-quarter rally on the "Little Terrors'" part to score a touchdown. Their next venture in football netted them a victory at the expense of George Washington to the tune of 7-6, the touchdown coming as the result of a pass from Koppe to Brown.

Playing at home before a fair-sized crowd, the "Baby Terrors" came through with a bang to defeat Georgetown University Frosh, 18-0. Brubaker and Brown furnished the thrills by their running and kicking abilities. The success did not last, however; for in the next two starts, against the frosh from the University of Maryland and the Belfont Academy, superior force prevailed, and the team came home on the short end of the scores 18-0 and 13-0.

Some of the outstanding players whose work during the entire season was of a high order were Brown, Brubaker, Koppe, and Patterson. They were ably assisted by Laff, J. O'Lear, Callaghan, and Gealey. Too much credit cannot be given "Barney" Speir. Although the squad was small and the time for practice short, he worked wonders with the team.

Soccer Resume

RAYMOND BEAUCHAMP, former star boomer for Western Maryland, piloted the Terror soccer team through a very creditable season. The schedule worked out by the manager was a very difficult one, having on it some of the best teams of the East. With but a few days practice the Terrors defeated Maryland State Normal by a 2-1 score, but lost to the well-equipped Haverford eleven a few days later. The team then found its stride and defeated Franklin & Marshall the following week. One of the greatest games of the season was played at the Naval Academy. The Terrors outplayed the Middies but lost in two extra periods by a score of 4-3. The Terrors took the lead in the start and held it until within a few minutes of the end when they faltered under the continuous onrush of Navy reserves. The following week they held the strong Army team to a 1-1 tie in two extra periods, but lost to Penn State.
Varsity Basketball

The basketball season of 1930 was apparently not a very successful one as Western Maryland won only one game during the entire year. It was successful, however, in that a team which was almost lacking in basketball fundamentals, under the able tutelage of “Bill” Pelton, developed into a small but powerful aggregation, combining speed and deception with the same type of fighting qualities that have often brought Western Maryland teams from defeat to victory, to make it a respected opponent of any collegiate basketball team.

One of the first moves of Pelton, and probably the best, as the resultant games showed, was to change Wellinger from forward to a guard position. Captain Engle was the other guard, and it fell to his lot as the most experienced and consistent player to serve as a balancing influence upon the team. Baker was shifted to forward from guard, and worked well with Woolley, who was the outstanding shot of the team. Hamill from the start grabbed off the center job, and though rather erratic in his passing became adept toward the end of the season, both in passing and in obtaining the tip-off.

The remainder of the small squad was composed of Lamb, Lawrence, Kohout, Wilker, and Smith. This squad, supplemented by the strong Freshman team, should prove a formidable contender for the 1931 State Championship. The team will lose through graduation the services of Captain Engle and of Smith.
Freshman Basketball

The Freshman basketball team made a very creditable showing during the past season, coming through with five victories against two defeats. The "Little Terrors" were victorious in games with Maryland School for the Deaf, Knights of Pythias, St. John's Junior Varsity, and Baltimore U. Frosh, with adverse scores at the hands of St. John's Junior Varsity and Gallaudet.

When few men Coach "Bill" Pelton worked long and intensively to organize a well-balanced team, composed of Brown and Murray forwards, Kopp center, and Kleinman and Whittaker guards. They combined speed, aggressiveness, and ability to sink the ball from all angles with a well planned offense and defense worked out by Pelton to place them quite often on the winning side of the score-book.

Probably the outstanding star of the team was Brown, who possessed uncanny ability in dropping the spheroid through the basket from all positions on the floor. Murray on the other side of the court proved a fit running mate, while Kopp's ability to get the tip-off and cover and retain the ball under the back-board made him an absolutely essential member of the team. Kleinman and Whittaker throughout the season played consistently sound basketball. Credit must also be given to such men as J. O'Leair, Baird, and Eaton, who when called upon proved equal to the occasion.

It is apparent that with the addition to the Varsity of these men much needed power has been added, which should result in the formation of a versatile team capable of meeting and overcoming any intercollegiate rivals.

ONE might think from glancing at the co-ed basketball scores, that this year’s season had been most unsuccessful. Their defeats have outnumbered their victories; yet the girls have gained much from this season. Every game was a hard-fought one with close scores, and the teamwork was commendable.

Much credit must be given to Gloria Thornburgh, who has been an able captain as well as an excellent jumping center.

The squad loses through graduation Gloria Thornburgh, Hannah Mace, Betty Mitchell, and Eliza Russell.

The team is deeply indebted to Miss Parker for her interest, patience, and encouragement throughout the season.
NE of the outstanding developments of the present scholastic year, as far as athletic progress is concerned, is the admission of Western Maryland into the Intercollegiate League in lacrosse. It will require another year for the fruits of this entry to be reflected in the schedule; but the step places Western Maryland in the front rank among the colleges of the country in this fast growing sport.

At the college lacrosse has progressed rapidly since it was introduced a major sport a year ago. As such it begins to rival baseball in the number of candidates for the positions, and, in truth, it seems to have placed baseball on the boards.

The team will again be coached by T. B. Marden, former University of Maryland star, who handled the team so successfully in its first year of the sport.

Last season the "Terrors" defeated Lafayette and other colleges, and lost only to Maryland and Penn State in well-played games.

From last year's squad Norris, Machamer, and Broll were lost by graduation, and Van Buren and Smith are no longer in college. The 1930 team will be built around the regulars remaining—Willis, Wilker, Usinger, MacLea, Lawrence, Havens, Gomsak, Wellinger, and Bates.

Intercollegiate Champions
Boxing Resume

In her third year of intercollegiate competition in the "squared ring," Western Maryland built up an enviable reputation, a reputation based upon the clean-cut sportsmanship, boxing skill, and punching ability of its representatives, the result of the efficient coaching of "Dick" Harlow.

The season's schedule was a difficult one, including meets with some of the major colleges in the East. The Terrors, living up to their name, won seven out of nine dual meets, losing only to Penn State and Navy by a margin of one bout. Then, participating as a member of the Intercollegiate Association in the meets in Philadelphia, they proceeded to take second place by reason of the fact that "Doug" Crosby and "Ted" Klepac retained their championship crowns, "Tiny" Pincura capturing second place, and Norman Barnett a third place for a team total of fourteen points, five points less than Penn State and one point more than Navy, who took first and third place respectively.

The outstanding meets of the year were with Penn State, the 1929 Intercollegiate Champions, who showed their class by taking the meet four bouts to three by reason of greater superiority in the lighter weights; and the meet with Navy in McDonough Hall, in which Navy upheld its unblemished record of eleven years of intercollegiate boxing without a defeat, by winning from the Green Terrors four bouts to three. For close contests, thrills, and excitement, this meet has probably never been equaled in the state. Western Maryland's chance for a victory came in the 175-bout; but "Pat" Moret, Captain of the Tars, got the decision over Barnett and clinched the meet for Navy.

To "Doug" Crosby and "Ted" Klepac must go the individual honors. Crosby, as the premier boxer of the squad with twenty-three straight victories, and twice consecutively the Intercollegiate Champion in the 135-pound class, was easily the outstanding man in that division, and proved his ability in out-boxing, out-punching, and out-generaling his opponents in the Intercollegiates. Klepac, "the fighting fool," and Captain of the team, with but one loss in twelve bouts this year, succeeded in winning the 160-pound Intercollegiate Championship, because of his great speed, clever "in-fighting," punching ability, and all-round ring skill.

Other outstanding men of the squad were Barnett, who capably filled the shoes of George Ekaitis after the Captain, having won two bouts, left college, by winning five bouts, then losing to Navy and taking third place in the Intercollegiates; "Tiny" Pincura, with five wins and four losses, and second place in the Intercollegiates; Borchers 145 pounds, with four victories and four defeats. Then too, one cannot easily forget "Pete" Flater, with four victories and five defeats and his fighting ability and courage against odds, nor "Rhody" Hastings' ability to mix things.

Credit also must be given those fellows whose efforts in the "Synagogue" made possible the development of the team as a whole. Never before has such interest in boxing been shown by members of the lower classes, many of whom will never be great boxers, but whose physical development will show the worth of the sport at Western Maryland.

Indications point to a repetition of this year's success for future Terror Boxing Teams, since the present squad will not be depleted by graduation; and with the experience gained in dual meets it should prove a formidable opponent against the best in the college world.
The graduation of Broil, Shriver, Woodward, and Seitz in 1929, the tennis team was placed under a great disadvantage for this season. A very promising team turned out for practice, however, and the outlook was brightened somewhat by the fact that four regulars from last year’s team—Woolley (1930 captain), Willard, Willey, and Mather—would again swing their racquets against such opponents as were scheduled for the spring of 1930.

Because of an early spring vacation and adverse weather, outdoor work was reduced to a minimum; but the squad refused to be stopped, and much benefit was gained by practicing in the gymnasium. In this way the team was in fair shape by the 12th of April, when the first match of the season was played against Hopkins.

No extensive trips were planned this year, which means that most of the matches were played at home. As the season advanced, the men profited by experience gained in early matches, and gave every indication of becoming first class racqueters and developing into a winning team.

Le Cercle Francais

DEPUIS sa naissance il y a quatre ans, le Cercle Francais, sous la direction de Monsieur le docteur Bonnotte, a fait beaucoup de progrès pour soi-même et aussi pour les étudiants de la langue. Dans les séances nous sommes encouragés et aidés à parler, écrire, et penser en français. Chaque année nous avons présenté une ou deux pièces. Cette année les pièces sont "Les Deux Sourds," "Le Malade Imaginaire," et "Le Médecin Mystifié."

En général le programme consiste de poésies, chants, et discussion toutes en français, donnés par les membres.

Les membres du bureau pour cette année sont:

La présidente .................................................. Mlle. Thompson
La secrétaire .................................................... Mlle. Merrill
La trésorière .................................................... Mlle. Read

Les membres sont:

Dr. Bonnotte                                      Mme. Bonnotte
Mlle. Barnhart                                    Mlle. Broughton
Mlle. Davis                                       Mlle. Dryden
