DEDICATION

To

Richard Cresson Harlow, M.S.

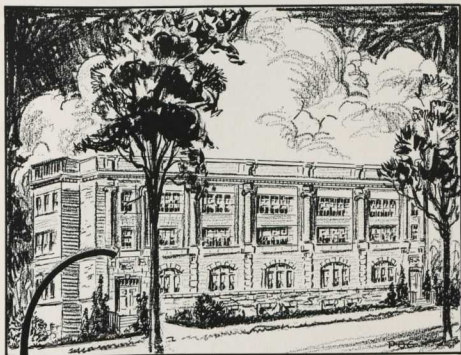

Director of athletics, whose achievements as an athlete and as a coach even before he came to Western Maryland had earned him national recognition, whose efforts have raised Western Maryland from a position of comparative obscurity in athletics to a position of prominence and esteem, whose interests have not been limited to the production of winning teams, but have also included the development of character, leadership, and men—to "Dick," an eminent coach, a sincere friend, a Christian gentleman, and an inspiring leader of men, we, the Senior Class, respectfully dedicate the 1932 ALOHA.

FOREWORD

Western Maryland College has embarked on a program of expansion of endowment and plant. In order to carry out this program of improvement our Alma Mater must look to the alumni of today and of tomorrow. As an indication of our appreciation of what Western Maryland has done for us, and of our interest in her future development and expansion, we have chosen The Greater Western Maryland as the theme of this book. As we embellish the pages of our annual with suggestive sketches of some of the proposed buildings, we dedicate ourselves to bringing into reality the dream of The Greater Western Maryland.

Alma Mater

When our college days are over,
Round our hearts shall cling
Memories of our Alma Mater,
Every day shall bring.

But our life is swiftly passing,
Soon its course is run,
What e'er our lot we'll ever cherish,
Friendships here begun.

"Dot"

Music—English

IRVINGTON, NEW JERSEY

Irvington High School

*Philomathean Literary Society; Y. W. C. A.;
Glee Club; Honorable Mention 3.*

"Dot" doesn't take education. And is she superior about it? When she sees the rest of us struggling with term papers, units, and the intricacies of Morrison, she merely sniffs unsympathetically and sails off down town. "Dot" always has plenty of spare time on her hands, since she doesn't believe in overworking herself. Although an accomplished pianist, she has a horror of recitals and frequently refuses to "inflict herself upon the public" as she calls it. "Dot" never seems to worry about the future. If you ask her what she intends to do after graduation, she exclaims, "How should I know? Genius is never appreciated!"

 ger; Boxing 3; Student Volunteer; College

"Joe" is not the kind of person who attracts a lot of attention in his comings and goings. What he does he does well and without much display. Those who do not know him are apt to think of him as overserious, but those who know him well appreciate his sound philosophy of life and his preference for the better things.

As you can see from his activities "Joe" is interested in things literary. He is a reporter on the Gold Bug, has done advertising work for the ALOHA, and has won praise for his efforts in advanced composition.

"Joe's" literary interests have not been confined to writing; for, during his years at Western Maryland, he has interested himself also in literary societies and in dramatics.

Howard left Dickinson Seminary with an "A" record and the honor of having served as "Y" president. He has repeated those accomplishments here at W. M. C. By his sincerity and scholarship he has won the admiration and friendship of both students and faculty.

Although Howard spends much time studying, he is not a grind; he has found time to take part in speech plays and in Inter-Collegiate debating. Not less noteworthy has been his success as president of the "Y." Through Howard's personality and capable planning the work of the Christian Association has been keenly stimulated, and through his influence voluntary student chapel attendance has been introduced.

College produces changes in all of us. The degree of change varies quite naturally with the individual. "Barney" came to college a serious-minded, bashful, athletic young fellow. We liked him at once. We still like him. We'll continue to like him; but different adjectives must be used to describe "Barney" now. He has developed quite a bit as an athlete. He has remained serious-minded enough to pass his courses with quite creditable marks. But the adjective "bashful" can no longer be applied to him. For the boy who, as a Freshman, never looked at girls now not only looks, but assiduously cultivates their acquaintance. In fairness to him we must say that at least sometimes he is successful.

If you should see a raccoon coat with a girl inside it strolling in a leisurely fashion up "The Hill," too late for the first class and somewhat early for the second, that's "Cappy"—on the way to first class. Upon arriving she'll tell you piteously that she dashed off without breakfast and simply rushed herself to death, but just couldn't make it on time. A little later, Senior Hall will resound with "Who's going down to Royer's? I want my breakfast!" Nothing worries her, she's always good-natured and always in for any fun that's going on. Although she has been a town student all four years, she has been a familiar and welcome figure in the dormitories.

Why did they name her Celeste? The only thing French about her is her volubility—in English! Aside from that, "Bennie" is a thoroughly lovable bundle of good nature all wrapped up in a wide grin. She is never too busy to trot down to Bonnie's, never too tired to dance, never unwilling to lend anything she owns—even if she had planned to wear it herself. "Bennie" always keeps "open house." Her room is a gathering place for everyone, including town students, and she never seems to mind the racket. The only fault "Bennie" has to find with college life is that she's always on some food committee or other. But since she serves so efficiently she has no one to blame but herself.

"Bishie" knows how to do what she should do when she should do it. She is one of the real students of W. M. C. There's no talking her into going to the movies when she has a quiz tomorrow; and yet she manages to find time to play bridge and go downtown. And her dramatics! "Bish" can be as hard as nails or as sweet as sugar in her rôles and you will like either. She likes feeds, too, either to give or to receive, especially if there are oranges. Yes sir! "Bish" should make a good Latin teacher next year, for she knows her Cicero.

An honor student, a practical joker, a saxophone "tooter par excellence," and an athlete of considerable merit is Bolton. It's true that this looks like an unusual combination; nevertheless, all of these designations are characteristics of the man. At times we haven't understood him. At times we haven't known whether to take him seriously or not. But we have never questioned his ability in any of those fields in which he has worked. We have never doubted his fighting spirit as we have seen him directing from the quarterback's position a handicapped team in its fight against odds. And we have always admired and almost envied him for the success that has been his.

Beneath a countenance like a thunder cloud, "Kay" really is a sunshiney person. When we first knew her (she joined us at the beginning of our Junior year) we thought she was just about as ferocious as any small person could be. We soon called her bluff and found that the scowl was all pretense. We finally decided that her frequent preoccupation was in some way connected with the good-looking fraternity pin she wears. It's a good thing that "Kay" has a "lot" of friends. She never was known to be on time for breakfast, but since she is always sure of having a place saved for her she takes her own good time.

"Winnie"—versatility. For four years her lovely voice has enriched Baker Chapel choir. She is a charming actress, (who can forget her "Beulah" in "The Things that Count?") as well as an excellent student. All in all, she is one of the hardest working people on "The Hill." Missing meals and sitting up until all hours mean nothing to "Winnie" if by doing so she can achieve perfection. The strenuous schedule she has followed has kept us from knowing her as well as we'd like to. We've never been able to keep up with her!

"Ann" is one of those comfortable people who go through life serenely, soothing others by their placidity. Nothing ever seems to worry her or to get her excited. She is always ready to sympathize with you if you have the blues, or giggle with you if you feel merry. She'll remodel a dress for you, or do anything else she can to help you along. "Ann" missed a year through sickness, but she refused to give up as many of us would have done. She came bravely back and carries on with '32. And we've been very glad to have her.

The brownest eyes, the softest drawl, the sweetest smile—put them all together, and you have "Dot." She is terribly in earnest over everything—from practice teaching to chocolate sundae. When she is teased about her seriousness, she blushes and comes down to earth as long as three minutes at a time. "Dot" is from Allegheny County, and she certainly is a loyal citizen. No one can knock Allegheny when she is present. Incidentally, her practice teaching was a huge success. Franklin High approved of "Dot" very much—especially the male contingent!

And so they named her Althea Beatrice. But she fooled them and refused to live up to such a flowery name. So "Bebe" she became—a square-shooting pal if there ever was one. "Bebe" stars in athletics, and her speed on a hockey field is something to marvel at. Not only that; she can dress for breakfast in five seconds flat. Her phenomenal memory for the words of popular songs, no matter how ancient, is a source of amusement to her classmates. But when she insists on singing them at unholy hours in the night, then, to quote Queen Victoria—"We are not amused."

Lady Macbeth is out! "Lou" was famous in her first years at W. M. C. for her impersonations, Lady Macbeth being a stronghold. Of course she isn't one who works up a Morrison unit a week before it is due, but when she works, she does it with a vengeance. You like her ability to laugh at things and persons, provided you aren't included. Her frankness wins her many friends, her original ideas are much sought after—as her presence on various entertainment committees will attest. Yes, we know its trite, but she's also a "good sport" and won't "wet blanket your newest brainstorm."

What should we have done without Alverta? There'd have been no one to straighten us out on a muddled assignment, no one to lend us the class notes we failed to get, no one to outline a course clearly and definitely in a half-hour's lecture. Unlike the ant in the old fable, Alverta is always ready to help the slug-gard, even though doing so means inconveniencing herself. She's such a modest little thing, however, that her knowledge would remain locked up in her curly head if it weren't for the incessant demands made on it by her class-mates.

Church Creek, Maryland, is an historic old place. Traditions and memories are indelibly imprinted on the locality and on the minds of the inhabitants. And, yet, it is doubtful if any of the early inhabitants would ever have dreamed that some day a lad would go from that city to a college in Western Maryland, and earn for himself the collection of nicknames and honors that "Dixon" has gained. Whether we "kid" him and say "Fighting Colonel" or "Sponsor Hunter," or whether we are more sensible and friendly and call him "Dick," or whether we sweetly designate him as Harrison (à la co-eds), we are always speaking to an individual whose friendship we value and whose character we admire.

Eva joined us at the beginning of our Sophomore year, after spending a year at Peabody, and almost immediately she proved her "eligibility" by coming down with a series of violent appendicitis attacks. It is characteristic of Eva that she refused to take time out to have the troublesome appendix removed until she had gotten the points and hours necessary to make her a full-fledged member of the Class of '32. Eva's well-developed ability to keep her nose to the grindstone may be explained by the fact that she wishes to get her work done as quickly as possible so that she may have more time to spend on her music. Eva plays delightfully, and although her tastes are quite classical, she deserted her beloved Bach long enough to fill efficiently the position of pianist at pep meetings.

What a girl could do"

That's Eva playing her theme song, "Turkish Towel." And you may be sure that there's a gang of Seniors around her singing this classic at the top of their voices. Don't think, however, that "Turkish Towel" characterizes Eva's taste in music. Her extensive repertoire ranges all the way from the most difficult classics to the bluest of "blues." No matter what mood you're in, Eva has a selection to fit it. She is always in demand to play for parties and other "doings" on "The Hill." She is usually only too willing to be coaxed into leaving uninteresting work to play "just one or two pieces." And once she is started she'll play as long as you like.

"Whitey's" striking blondness has been a great help to '32, since it has done away with part of the fuss and bother of selecting representatives for the May Day procession. She is not, however, one of your delicate hot-house beauties, for she stars in all forms of girls' sports from hockey to tennis. Perhaps her daily hike up "The Hill" from downtown has helped to keep her in such perfect physical trim, especially since she usually starts late and has to walk briskly. It is a red-letter day when "Whitey" gets to class on time, for she has perfected the art and science of sliding into class about ten minutes late without attracting the professor's attention.

Honor Chairman of the Woman's Student Government Board, President of the "Y" Cabinet—doesn't that give you a good idea of what Elsie's class-mates think of her? She is an excellent model for a "Portrait of a Lady"—sedate, calm, unruffled, always to be depended upon to do her share in whatever project is under way. Not only is she an able student, finding fun in even the most intricate problems in "Math," but her interests are distributed also in the cultural and social fields. She is unquestionably the type of person for whom success can be safely prophesied.

Like a little brown wren Alice slips in and out of classes quietly, cheerful and intent upon her own affairs. Since Alice is a town student, we seldom come in contact with her except during class hours, but we have learned to like her shy, sweet smile. She is by nature retiring, except when grades come out, when she steps forward and garners a flock of A's.

"Louie" is a master mechanic in the eyes of the education department, as is indicated by his two years of service as "General Altissimo" of the college cars. Regularly and dependably "Louie" has gotten out the cars, put them away, taken them down for repairs and gas, and earned the undying gratitude of many a person whose usual mode of transportation classed him as a pedestrian.

"Louie's" ability, however, isn't limited to cars. We have enjoyed his unique expressions of his view of life and his opinions on varied subjects. Not only have we envied his studious application to his work, but we value his friendship and our acquaintance with him.

With "Bob" there seems to be a natural connection between capably taking the leading role in speech production and in charming the hearts of Freshman maidens. The analogy is furthered when we compare his versatility in portraying different characters with his discerning selection of his "co-ed" friends. The "play-boy" of the Black and White is equally at home while taking a stiff quiz, flashing a sabre, or kicking a soccer ball. For four years "Bob's" personality and lively wit have furnished enjoyment to all on "The Hill."

"Sally" is the baby of the class—but no one would ever suspect it. She must have been born sophisticated, nonchalant, all those things that all the rest of us try so hard to be with not very much success. Her taste in literature tends to be high-brow. She not only reads O'Neill and others of his ilk, but discusses them intelligently and charmingly. "Sally's" specialty, however, is her clever and original way of expressing her very good ideas. There is nothing she enjoys more than a well-turned phrase or a cutting epigram. It is her hobby to collect them as other people collect stamps or china.

She's apt to get her feelings hurt, since "Fonny" believes in telling the whole truth without any "sugar-coating." Whenever there's a dress to be made over or mended, we run to "Fonny" for help—and never fail to get it. Whenever a food committee is formed, she is on it. We may more than safely prophesy for Charles a place of note in the musical world, so delightfully has he contributed to our enjoyment through both the orchestra and the "magic ivories." Music is not alone in his list of accomplishments, however; certainly you remember his part as the "eveque" in the French Club presentation last spring. Fidelia is different. Fidelia is individual. Surrounded on all sides by teachers and would-be teachers, she refused to follow the crowd and perversely decided to become a doctor. Once having put her hand to the plow, she has had no thought of turning back but has done her work thoroughly. Hard as she works, however, she is never too busy to help others or too serious-minded to amuse a crowd with her subtle humor. Although she has chosen a profession so difficult, we feel sure that her perseverance and "stick-to-it-iveness" will win success for her and our best wishes go with her.

"Six feet of bone and muscle" which moved leisurely about came to Western Maryland in 1928, and was promptly designated as "Pokey." But that name does not give adequate representation to Hammill's underlying ability nor does it explain or indicate his fighting spirit on the football gridiron or on the basketball court. We should know nothing of the characteristic aggressiveness that he exemplified in his search for a sponsor if we knew only his nickname. His wit and his capacity for making friends would also be unknown qualities if we had not looked beneath the surface of "Pokey's" leisurely existence.

That same smile that lights his face on such an occasion benignly falls on struggling students as they seek his advice in the laboratory. In her Freshman year, someone called Mary "stone-face," and ever since then she has been trying to learn to smile. Sometimes we think she has succeeded. Perhaps Mary's more or less serious outlook on life is due to her scientific interest in things about her. There is nothing so insignificant that Mary will not attempt to discover how the wheels go 'round. If there's anything she doesn't know, she asks questions until she finds out about it. Wayne wandered a long way from home to find Western Maryland, but we're glad that he did so. For a while, at least, Iowa was the loser. Whether she will always be the loser will depend in a large measure on the power of "certain attractions" in the East.

We shall remember Wayne's habit of taking great pleasure in hiking down Main Street. We shall remember the fun we got out of "kidding" him. But three things by which we shall remember him as a college pal are his Iowa drawl, his characteristic deliberateness and dependability, and his underlying sincerity.

Cameron Murchison is one of those Seniors who introduced into Western Maryland the "Wrigley habit"—after every meal. Although his ambitions point toward law he knows his "mills."

On one occasion the "little Napoleon" from Louisiana answers the bell in defense of his Alma Mater; on another, at the introduction of the chairman, he again steps forth in support of some weighty argument of debate.

When one hears the name "Murk," one immediately thinks of all those things which a true Western Marylander should be. Whether it be in scholarship or in athletics, Cameron has always given us his best—a best which might well be envied by any.

"Pat," the clown; "Pat," the court jester in May Day processions; "Pat," the perfect night-club hostess at the Junior party. Her red curls flash over the tennis court, the basketball court, and the hockey field with equal skill and grace. She keeps an audience in an uproar with as much ease as she does a roomful of girls. "Myersie's" hobby (aside from clowning) is finger waving her friends' hair. The echo of "La Mistinguette" of the Moulin Rouge will linger on "The Hill" long after our nightingale has made her debut with the Metropolitan. How could we forget the voice that entertained us so often "way back when?" And as heroine in this play and that, Lee has again scored. We shall remember those parts, too. For a potential artist, Lee has a smoothly flowing disposition. You might think her "high-hat," but don't be afraid of the haughty tone of voice! "That's just her way." Good luck to you, Lee. Occasionally "Clem" has bestirred himself and threatened "to get a date." Once or twice he actually slipped and did so. We have sometimes "razed" "Clem" about his steadfast adherence to work, or lamented our inability to stir him out of his tranquil celibate existence, but we have never doubted his sincere friendship or his admirable ability to stick to his job.

"Once upon a time there was a Mexican boy who came to Western Maryland after a period of military service in 'Sandino's' army, during which time he was decorated for heroism and was taught the 'ins-and-outs' of military tactics." That's about the story we told of "Tom" when the Class of '32 spent the usual six weeks at Fort George G. Meade. Naturally enough "Tom" was then the center of an admiring throng. He took advantage of the prominence brought him by our story, and made valuable contacts with the fellows at camp. Although the joke leaked out he kept his friends.

As our Senior year has approached an end we have valued "Tom's" friendship more and more. His unflinching good humor, his dependability, and his studious application to work have earned him our admiration and esteem.

"Stew," Dos Passos, or "Blue Monday" are varied terms that we sometimes apply to the Business Manager of the ALOHA. The first is his rightful nickname adopted by his friends who wanted something more informal than Stuart. Dos Passos is his "designation" when aspiring young journalists strive to win approbation by clever remarks or by digging up family corpses. "Blue Monday" is a term that was applied only once to him and then in a disguised attempt to identify him as a prominent experimenter with mice. But regardless of whether we call him by any of these names or whether we designate him by his real "John Henry," we remember that he's a great fellow, a wonderful source of fun, and an efficient worker in extra-curricular affairs.

His accent clung to him in spite of the efforts of the ladies of the speech department. However, his abilities were gradually disclosed. He proved to be a hard worker on the football field, a capable tennis player, and a rifleman with a steady aim and an uncanny ability to "ring up" good scores. In his Junior year "Win" lead the entire Third Corps in the individual rifle competition. In his Senior year he himself fell victim to a shot—this time from Cupid's bow.

We pass "Bill" on the campus. He always greets us with a "Hello!" Sometimes it may seem a little abrupt—that is, if he's hurried—but it's always there. Those who have been in a "bull" session with him will remember his capacity for argument. His unflinching assertions of his unique views have sometimes startled us, but we had to give him credit for great perseverance in argument. From the "heat and fury" of many a "bull" session have developed lasting friendships. "Bill" has gained quite a few in this manner.

Happy-go-lucky, good natured, carefree, yet always rising to the occasion—that's "Squirt." He was on "The Hill" when we arrived in '28, familiar with the campus, its organizations, and its traditions. In those "days of trial" "Squirt" proved himself to be a friend from the start. That same friendly spirit has always been shown whether he was firing a record target on the rifle range, fighting for the last point in an inter-collegiate tennis match, or merely "chewing the rag" in the candy room.

History of the Class of '32

It is a sad hour when a Senior Class prepares to say farewell. It is a time when old bridges are crossed in memory and new ones are designed in thoughts. We, the Senior Class, fling our torch to our successor: "Yours be the task to hold it high." We have kept it burning brightly during our year of leadership, burning with the fuel of scholarship, loyalty, and love.

The Class of '32 has made its place in Western Maryland history in every way: in scholarship, athletics, dramatics, music, and debating. Ours was the joy of adding to all these college activities as well as to the social life of the campus.

We arrived on College Hill full of our own importance at being among the chosen few to enter the gates of higher education. The overwhelming reception of waiting hours at the library for the privilege of registering gave us no warning that we were not so important as we had supposed. For one unparalleled week we held our exalted position. We were feted night and day by faculty, student government, and "Y." But suddenly our rainbow disappeared; the deluge descended in the form of the Sophomores, who reduced us to the status of "rats!" From September 18 until October 12, the girls obeyed all behests of the Sophs. From September 18 until November 2, the boys bent obediently to the swish of the paddle. But on "Color-Rush Day" both boys and girls proved their mettle by triumphing over the Sophs. With such an auspicious beginning, the Class of '32 has moved forward with success, lending its talent to every enterprise.

By the end of our first year we had made a record in athletics that has been supplemented each year by additional success. Material for undefeated varsity teams has been recruited from our numbers, while the class teams managed to take their share of the spoils each year. The good sportsmanship displayed by both men and women athletes has laid a foundation for clean play in later years.

The Jesters and the College Players have profited with the splendid performance of our artists, and the French Club owes a part of its success this year to us. The initiation of individual music recitals with this class displayed the talent of our several music students.

'32 gave much in time, talent, and taste to the Lantern Chain in '29, the Hallowe'en party in '30, and in '31 to the first Junior Prom to be held on "The Hill." The girls' Yacht Party to the Senior Girls in '30 was one of the outstanding social events of the year.

Scholarship, after all, is supreme. Of what good is success in athletics, of what advantage is position in society if scholarship be ignored? We, the Class of '32, are proud of our ideals and of our standards, maintained in achieving and retaining the level of scholarship befitting a graduating class of Western Maryland College. May our name and memory live on here on "The Hill" while those we leave behind and those who will come in the future push forward, holding high the banner of success that we now hand to you.

The musical score is written for piano on a grand staff (treble and bass clefs). It features a key signature of one flat (B-flat) and a 4/4 time signature. The melody is primarily in the treble clef, while the bass clef provides a harmonic accompaniment with chords and single notes. The lyrics are placed below the notes. The score includes various musical notations such as slurs, accents, and dynamic markings like ff (fortissimo) and ritard (ritardando). The piece concludes with a final chord in the bass clef.

History of the Class of '33

An ordinary, good natured, and particularly noisy class registered as Freshmen in 1929. They spent a bewildered year wandering through the maze of college life to the tune of "How Green I Am." Before time and the generosity of kind professors made them Sophomores they had realized that there still remained something to be learned.

During their second year the class took a more definite part in the extracurricular activities and in the social life of the campus. They carried out most of the traditions of Sophomoredom—doing their grim duty by the Freshmen, and giving a very successful Hallowe'en party, at which dancing on "The Hill" was allowed for the first time. On the debating teams, in the literary and social clubs, on the Gold Bug staff, and in the various phases of athletics they very competently did the work assigned to them.

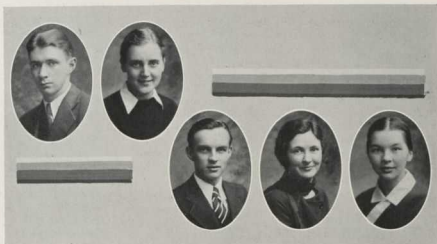

From the very beginning of the junior year there was a noticeable change in the attitude of this group. It was not only that studies were taken more seriously, but the new feeling of responsibility seemed to have its effect on whatever the class undertook. Perhaps it was that the more specialized work required of the Juniors brought them to realize that there is a definite goal at the end of their college days. As "big sisters" and "instructors" of the incoming Freshmen, as officers in the various organizations, or as hosts at the Junior-Freshman party and the Senior prom, they gave the impression of a new-found self-confidence and poise.

After all, there has been nothing extraordinary in the achievements of the class. They have done their share as well as they possibly could, and in so doing they have left their mark on whatever they undertook—and so, with a feeling of a task well done, they stand ready to enter their Senior year.

History of the Class of '34

How can the Class of '34 be glorified through the mere relating of its history, or is its history glorification enough?

We have carried on the traditions of the previous Western Maryland Sophomore classes, with a few slight modifications. The tough rules placed annually upon the Frosh were not so tough, and the Hallowe'en party was given just before the Christmas Holidays, but what of it? Both traditions were upheld and probably benefited by the slight changes. We are, perhaps, not responsible for our introduction into J. G. C. before our Junior year, but we may be. It proves our superior intellect. We pride ourselves on being original, but we seldom stray far from the well beaten Sophomore trail. Maybe that is why Sophomores have been called "Wise Fools."

This year, at least, we have contributed a wealth of material to Alma Mater both scholastically and athletically. Although it is the natural thing for Sophomores to be ignored by all except the humble Freshmen, who must notice them, our class has called attention to itself by its achievements in both these fields.

"Life is real, and life is earnest" says the Sophomore when he works, plays, or marks times, and proceeds to get the most out of it. In the Freshman year that lesson was well taught us by other Sophomores. Maybe it "went home" to the Freshmen this year—with the "sound" of the paddle, and the better example of the Sophomores. We hope so.

We realize that this year has meant more to us than last. We gather from the comments of the members of the Junior and Senior classes that although we appreciate our Alma Mater now, she will become even more dear to us during the next two years.

History of the Class of '35

A rattle of trunks and the honking of horns announced the arrival of the new "Freshies" on "The Hill." Proud high school seniors were beginning a new phase of their life story. From the bewilderment of tests and adjustments they rushed against the outstretched paddles of the eager Sophomores. All traces of superiority were soon dispelled in that period of initiation into college life. The girls were decked in small dunce caps on coiffures arranged in the most becoming, back-from-the-face style. They wore modest name plates on their green dresses. The boys did not look so fetching in their green hats and yellow ties, but their misery lasted much longer. What a mine of torment the Sophomores had discovered!

In due time things quieted down, and the newcomers set themselves to their tasks. They proved to be an all-round class—up to the mark scholastically, interesting socially, and greatly talented athletically. There is a "pep" and vim in the Class of '35 that promises to carry it along to the attainment of the highest ideals of Western Maryland College. Come on, '35!

Intra-Mural Athletics

The year 1931-32 saw the most significant progress in intra-mural athletics ever made at Western Maryland. For the first time opportunities for athletic participation were not only open to every one, but, through definite intra-mural leagues, each student was expected to become a playing member of one or more teams.

For some time intra-mural athletics for women have been approaching perfection through the tireless efforts of Professor Marie Parker and Miss Roselda F. Todd. It has remained for Mr. H. B. Speir, however, to take over the task of organizing the men.

As Director of Athletics at Western Maryland, "Dick" Harlow has ever championed the cause of athletics for all, and to him goes a large share of the responsibility for the present success of intra-murals for men.

One of the chief difficulties in the past has been the lack of a properly trained faculty member to supervise universal athletics. To meet this need, H. B. ("Barney") Speir, who was already busy with his duties as Graduate Manager, enrolled in the graduate school of Columbia University last summer in order to get the necessary training in physical education. Football season postponed action on men's intra-mural leagues until January, when Mr. Speir, working in conjunction with representatives of the various fraternities and student leaders, announced the formation of a schedule designed to include every man in the college.

Basketball opened the movement, with each fraternity and each class entering a team. Alpha Gamma Tau emerged at the head of the fraternities; the Freshmen topped the upper-classmen. In the final championship play-off, the latter team earned the basketball crown of the College.

As in former years, the R. O. T. C. devoted several drill periods to basketball, operating a seven-team league, of which the Second Platoon of Company B earned the title.

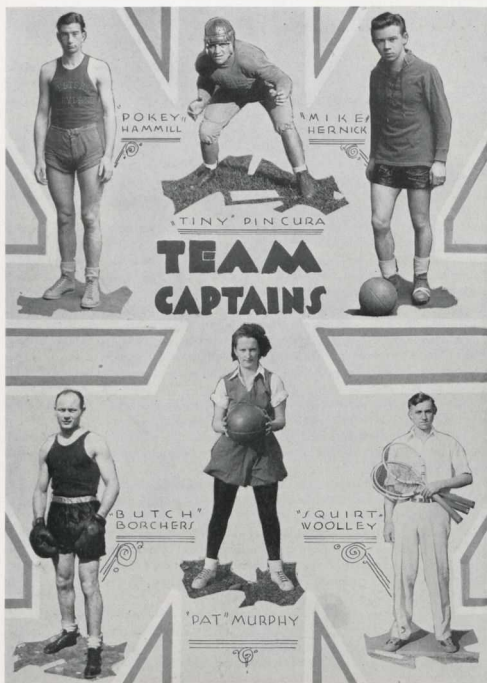

To fill the gap between basketball and spring sports a volleyball league was formed. Tennis, horseshoe-pitching, and, possibly, baseball were placed on the schedule for the warmer months.

The co-eds achieved their most successful intra-mural year. Hockey was started early in November and continued throughout the month until, on Homecoming Day, the Seniors wrested the title from their closest rivals, the Class of '33.

A brand new sport for women at Western Maryland succeeded hockey, when soccer was announced as a minor sport. Another innovation appeared when, instead of playing off for the championship, an honorary hockey team was chosen at the end of the season. Russell, Ebaugh, Senat, Weaver, Crowther, Mary Humphreys, Murphy, Hamsch, Bush, Kephart, and Timmons earned berths on the mythical eleven.

After an exciting season, the Juniors carried off the honors in the co-ed basketball tournament, while the Freshman "A" team crashed through to win the volleyball tournament, ending the women's winter sports program.

Baseball, played under indoor rules, and tennis were planned to complete the year in intra-mural sports.

1931 Varsity Football Résumé

Without doubt, the 1931 gridiron campaign was one of the most heroic ever waged by the Green Terrors. Loss of valuable players, a figuratively suicidal schedule, and devastating injuries formed a Triple Alliance which seemed too formidable for even such a great coach as Richard C. ("Dick") Harlow to surmount.

From September on, the outlook often appeared so dark that expert observers sometimes doubted that the team would be able to complete the schedule, which was perhaps the most difficult that any small college in the country had ever attempted.

In spite of it all, however, the team pulled through, and though the glorious record of twenty-seven games without defeat was broken, the Terrors still electrified the football world in breath-taking battles with Washington-Jefferson, Duquesne University, and Boston College.

All in all, the coach, the team, and the college combined to turn what seemed doomed to be a disastrous campaign into a creditable season. Above all, Western Maryland has shown the college world that it knows how to be game losers as well as good winners—and that is a real achievement for any college.

Although the Terrors did not dominate the various All-Maryland selections as in former years, they still received a good bit of prominence. Sadausky, Barnett, Kopp, Dunn, and Jones were nominated for berths by various selectors, while Bolton, Doughty, Brown, Hammill, Lamb, and Pincura received honorable mention.

The season opened with Georgetown. Pre-game book-keeping revealed a hopelessly unbalanced ledger. As assets the Terrors could only list their all-time record of twenty-seven games without defeat (which eclipses even that of Notre Dame) and a fighting heart. The liabilities were so great that they completely overshadowed the assets. Of the twenty-three men on the squad which had contributed 1930's undefeated State champions, seven had graduated and eight others did not return. Fifteen men, the majority of 1931's possible squad, were not even in the ranks anymore. Undismayed, the scrubs from the previous year stepped up in a brave attempt to fill the breach. The entire squad sacrificed a slice of summer vacation, returning for training camp a month ahead of school-opening, in order to help Coach Harlow weld the meagre array of inexperienced material into some semblance of an experienced unit. But already the first of the season's "jinxes" had appeared. The opening game of the season was cancelled when Rider College dropped football. A green team without even the benefit of a practice scrimmage was faced with a mighty eleven, composed of Georgetown veterans for the opening tilt of 1931.

That first Saturday of October brought a reversion to mid-summer temperatures, with a broiling sun beating down upon the sod of Griffith Stadium, in Washington, D. C. For two quarters the Western Maryland team, weakened by illness on the previous day, gamely held an edge over an inspired Georgetown eleven. On two occasions the Terrors had the ball virtually on the Hilltoppers' goal line, only to lose the chance for touchdowns, once by the half-time whistle, and again by a fumble. In the third and fourth periods, fresh Georgetown reserves and the torturing heat had their inevitable effect upon the half-sick, inexperienced, but gamely fighting band of Terrors. Georgetown emerged with an unprecedented 25-7 victory. For the first time in nearly three years a Western Maryland team had met defeat.

But the Terrors had not failed to leave their mark. Later, the Hilltoppers were to acknowledge this by placing Barnett, Terror guard, on their all-star, all-opponent eleven.

The Green Terrors bounced back from this first disappointment so energetically that on the following Saturday they rolled up the highest score amassed by any team in the country that week, defeating St. John's College, 59-0. Unfortunately, this contest was the last in which the two former State rivals will participate for some time, since St. John's later regretfully checked the Terrors off their 1932 schedule.

Western Maryland had long looked forward to the next opponent, and when W. and J. came sweeping down from the hills of Pennsylvania, they met a clan of Terrors in the Baltimore Stadium who gave them their biggest fight of the season.

In many ways this gridiron engagement was the most thrilling and spectacular exhibition of football ever staged in the Baltimore bowl. Bolton's thrilling 60-yard run with a Washington-Jefferson pass brought the Terrors' first touchdown, but even this thriller was eclipsed when "Bob" Deacle, President fullback, returned the subsequent Western Maryland kick-off 97 yards to give W. and J. a total of thirteen points. A fourth period touchdown by McNally brought the Terror total to twelve, and the Presidents squeezed out with a one-point victory. Later, they unanimously voted the Terrors the toughest opponent of their season, which included Bucknell, Temple, Carnegie Tech, and West Virginia Wesleyan.

The schedule offered no respite for Western Maryland, however, and the following Friday found the Terrors locking horns with Duquesne University at Pittsburgh. Once again the assignment was a tough one, for the Dukes, coached by Elmer Layden, of Four Horsemen fame, had just held Georgetown to a scoreless tie. The Terrors showed that they had improved greatly since their own Hilltopper clash by putting up what Pittsburghians proclaimed to be a more stalwart battle than Georgetown had shown against Duquesne the previous week. A special edition of The Gold Bug scooped the metropolitan dailies to give the local campus a direct-wire story of the scoreless struggle, the first tie which had been Western Maryland's lot since the Albright game in 1930, and the second in four years.

The Loyola College Greyhounds, who had long looked forward to a good showing against the Terrors accomplished what sports writers had deemed impossible, and tied Western Maryland, 7-7 on the following Saturday. Showing a rushing attack far surpassing anything that their most ardent supporters ever dreamed of, "Tony" Comerford's fighting eleven played inspired football to gain what they had long hoped for—a tie with the Terrors.

Regardless of statistics, most Western Maryland fans concede that the Terrors put up one of the best fights of the year on November 7, when they held the Eagles of Boston College to a 19-13 victory in the Baltimore Stadium. This game had everything. Boston, rated as one of the major gridiron machines in the country, brought a large and colorful rooting section to the Monumental City, and the Terrors played an exceedingly high grade of football. Despite injuries, Western Maryland kept the game on even terms and made the contest even closer than the one-touchdown margin would indicate.

The Terrors jumped back into the win column with the next encounter, submerging Johns Hopkins, 40-0, in the Blue Jays' first defeat of the season.

Mt. St. Mary's and Muhlenberg were in turn blanked out. The contest with the Mounts, staged as the annual Western Maryland Homecoming game, provided an interesting spectacle for the returning alumni, with the Terrors coming out ahead by a 20-0 score.

Muhlenberg, which had already been torn to pieces by a disastrous season, offered little opposition, and the Terrors romped off with a muddy 34-0 victory.

The Maryland game, always the climax of the season anyway one looks at it, proved this year to be an anti-climax. The Terrors were completely snowed under by a 41-6 score. It is useless to deny that the disappointment was keen; but from a historical point of view, the game does not stand in such a poor light. For the two preceding years, the little Terrors had trounced the Terps with vigor, each time wresting the State Championship Crown from an institution with five times the enrollment of Western Maryland. But the law of averages had to get to work sometime. The Terrors took their medicine without a whimper, but—well, just wait 'till next year!

Freshman Football

Winning three out of four games, the frosh eleven turned in the best record of any Green and Gold team during the fall season. Neil Stahley, in his second year as Freshman coach, welded together a gridiron machine that consistently gave capable performances against tough opposition. The season opened against the George Washington University Freshmen—and for a while it looked as though the beefy Hatchetmen would walk away with the victory. At the end of the first half, the score stood 12-0, in favor of George Washington. During half-time, however, a bunch of boys who had never seen each other until a month before, put their heads and hearts together. The third quarter opened. Bang—one touchdown! The try-for-point is good. Ditto—the score is tied, 12-12. But those Baby Terrors are not to be stopped, now. As the final whistle sounds, the Green and Gold Frosh are victors by a 31-12 margin.

On October 24, the yearlings met Bucknell University Freshmen in the only home game of the season, and received their only defeat. Twice Terror touchdowns were just around the corner, once with the ball on the 6-inch line, where it was lost on downs. Bucknell went home with a 7-0 victory. The following Saturday found the Frosh at Bellefonte Academy, where they did what no recent Freshman eleven has been able to accomplish, defeating the Pennsylvanians. The game was, however, the toughest win of the season. With only two minutes to go a long Baby Terror pass over the goal line clinched the game for Western Maryland. The try-for-point was successful, and the final score went down as 7-0.

The yearlings wound up their season with a 19-13 victory over Georgetown Freshmen at Washington, D. C., on November 13.

Games which had been scheduled with St. John's and Maryland were cancelled by those institutions.

The Freshman squad consisted of Ryscavage, G. Jones, Fleagle, Lucas, Frame, B. Kaplan, Lipsky, Sheppard, Romito, Gorsky, Olsh, L. Kaplan, Ferguson, Mergo, Commerford, Schwieker, Greene, Kaddy, Blissman, L. Patterson, Marks, Burger, D. Moore, C. Moore, Thornberry, Albright, Rusteberg, W. Boyer, Keyser, Long, and McKibben.

Junior Varsity Football

This year, for the first time, Western Maryland was represented by a Junior Varsity Football Team—a goal which had long been sought by “Dick” Harlow as an opportunity for more men to engage in athletics.

Soon after classes started in the fall a call was sent out for all men weighing 150 pounds or less who wanted to play the great gridiron game. A good squad reported for practice and had their workouts each day of the season, along with the heavier varsity, who took turns acting as coaches.

Because of the late date at which the team was formed only two games could be scheduled. The Jayvees broke even on these, defeating Mt. St. Mary's Freshmen 7-0, and losing to Mt. St. Mary's Prep, 6-0.

In the first game, played at Emmitsburg, the 150-pounders were outweighed, since the opposition was a regular Freshman eleven not restricted to any weight.

Undaunted, the middle-weight Terrors sailed in, and by means of a pass, Boyd to Mahoney, were placed in a position to score in the first half. Tollenger carried the pigskin across for the only touchdown, and then Western Maryland began a long fight to hold down their heavier opponents, which was only ended by the final whistle.

The Mountaineer Preps pulled a surprise in the second game, by holding the Jayvees scoreless and walking off with a 6-0 victory at Westminster.

Significant is this development of a team composed of boys too light for the varsity. The idea was enthusiastically received from the start, and grew in popularity as the season progressed. A complete schedule of five or six games is planned for next season.

The 1931 squad consisted of Boyd (Captain), Musselman, Delaney, Myers, Woolley, Kiefer, Malkus, Ebert, Sparrow, Fleming, Hissey, Tollenger, Calvert, Mahoney, J. Seitz, and Martin.

Dixon (Manager), Bussard, Noble, Routson, George, Beane, Leitch, Wright, Brinsfield, Bryan, Grimm Jaeger, Speicher, Townshend, Chandler, Hernick (Captain), Woolley, Martin, Tuckerman

Soccer

Like the gridiron campaign, the ninth soccer season at Western Maryland was played under great handicaps. Before the campaign opened, the first blow fell when it was discovered that the Athletic Association would be unable to secure the services of a full-time coach, a position which had been held by Western Maryland graduates in 1929 and 1930.

Upon the shoulders of "Mike" Hernick, fell the double duties of captain and student coach, jobs which he fulfilled creditably in view of the difficult schedule.

As usual the season opened with Maryland State Normal of Towson, and on October 14 the Terror booters emerged victorious by a 5-1 score. In the next two weeks, the soccer team met three of its most formidable opponents, and suffered the expected set-backs. Penn State reversed the scoring of the State Normal game on October 17, battering their way to a 9-0 victory on the following Saturday, and Navy sank the booters, 7-2, the next Wednesday.

The Terrors would not be held down for long, however, and they bounced back to trounce Dickinson, 4-0, on November 7 at Westminster. In the return game on the following Saturday, the Pennsylvanians retaliated by reversing the tables by the same score.

This marked the last loss for the booters who closed their season with victories over Gettysburg and the return game with Normal. The Bullets fell, 6-2, on November 13, and Towson succumbed by a 6-1 score a week later.

Too much credit cannot be given the few loyal men who gave their best all season in the face of great odds. Hernick, Etzler, Noble, Townshend, Tuckerman, and Woolley will be lost by graduation. Other letter men were: Chandler, George, Jaeger, Leitch, Martin, J. Randle, and Routson. Reserves were: Bussard, Bryan, Brinsfield, Beane, Barto, Cross, Grimm, Holmes, Lantz, Perkins, E. Randle, Rhodes, Staines, Speicher, Taylor, Whittington, Wright, and Wyand.

For the second time in as many years Western Maryland presented to the world an undefeated, untied Freshman basketball team. With Coach Stahley's time taken up with the varsity cagers, "Joe" Kleinman, a Junior whose knee was injured in football last fall, took over the duties of Freshman court coach. The choice was a happy one, as the season record indicates.

In addition to hanging up a new record, the Frosh cagers displayed some heart-cheering material for next year's varsity.

The squad consisted of Mergo, Ferguson, Ryscavage, Jones, Patterson, Kaplan, Berger, Gorsky, Lipsky, Marks, Stallings, and Commerford.

Varsity Basketball

The 1932 season marked the second Western Maryland basketball campaign under the mentorship of Neil Stahley (Penn State, '30), and indicated, above all else, signs of the Terrors' return to the line-up of major state quints. Working with willing, but inexperienced material, the coach turned in a record which was a significant improvement over the last three Terror court seasons.

For the first time in many years, Western Maryland was victorious in every one of the contests on the home court, where Washington, Bucknell, Hopkins, and Loyola fell before the Stahleymen.

During the early part of the season, Coach Stahley experimented with various line-ups, in an effort to find the happiest combination. Hurley and Mahoney soon settled down in the guard positions, while Captain Hammill still proved the best bet for his old berth at center. Throughout the campaign, Brown, Woolley, Murray, Schilling, and Sadausky in turn received the initial call as Terror forwards.

Willis, Cole, Diksa, Dunn, and Bussard formed the only reserves available, and were welcome additions in the tougher games. Sickness kept Doughty and Kopp away from practice most of the season.

The basketballers were faced by no less a team than Bucknell in the season opener, and the Bisons were forced to the limit to elude a 35-32 victory. On the next night Penn State, which later proved itself one of the best quints in this section of the country, snowed under the Terrors. Loyola's clever combination repeated the story in the next contest, but in the fourth game, the quint came into its own to defeat Washington College, Western Maryland's ancient court rival, in the first Green and Gold triumph of the season.

The remainder of the campaign was one of ups and downs, with every "up" evidenced on the home floor. Somehow, the Terrors couldn't break the away-from-home jinx. Each of the five teams which the Stahleymen vanquished in Westminster emerged triumphant when they played on their respective home courts.

Despite this inconsistency, the season was a promising one—especially so since Captain Hammill and Neil Woolley are the only regulars to be graduated this year. Hammill's steady game at center will be hard to duplicate and Woolley did splendid work as forward, especially in the latter part of the season. There will be a splendid combination to form the nucleus for next year's Terror quint—a team which should put Western Maryland definitely back in the running in intra-state college basketball competition.

Varsity Boxing

Along with the football team, the Green Terror boxers suffered by last year's graduations and withdrawals from college. Ekaitis, Brubaker, Flater, and Crosby—more than half of last year's varsity were missing when Coach Harlow sent out the call for leather-pushers this year.

With such a wholesale withdrawal of the best material, Terror fans looked forward to the season with misgivings. In spite of these difficulties, however, Western Maryland put in the ring a team of which any coach might be proud. Although they did not achieve the prominence allotted to the last three Terror teams, which were ranked among the best in the country, the 1932 boxers performed creditably on a difficult schedule.

The Terrors fought Dartmouth to a draw in the opening meet, continuing the tied series with the Big Green team. The 1932 clash marked the first appearance of Keyser and B. Kaplan in the Terror ring. Western Maryland boxing fans took hope when both men won handily from their New Hampshire opponents, Kaplan's victory tying the meet.

In the next two contests, Army and Penn State crushed the Terrors by decisive scores, but the Harlowmen rallied to hand the University of Pennsylvania a 5-2 drubbing in the second home clash of the season. This meet marked the initial appearance of another newcomer, diminutive Kale Mathias, of Westminster, whose spunky victory in the 115-pound class cheered local rooters.

The Terrors made two wins in a row, when, in helping Tony Commerford to inaugurate boxing at Loyola, they downed the Greyhounds, 6-2, in an eight-bout match. The chief interest of this meet lay in the reappearance of "Tiny" Pincura, Terror heavyweight, who had been kept out of earlier 1932 contests by the new E. I. B. A. rule which substitutes a 155-pound class for the unlimited division. The big Terror star won handily, defeating Cullen by a technical knockout in the second round.

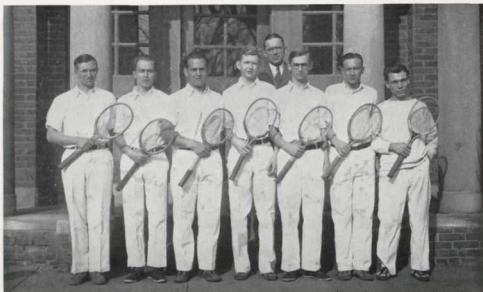

In preparation for the Olympic try-outs, Pincura got in some more practice two weeks later, when Navy was host to the Terrors in the annual clash at Annapolis. As usual, the Tars won the meet, but Western Maryland did not fail to leave its customary calling card in the form of hard-hitting, willing bouts.

West Virginia University completed the schedule by defeating the Terrors, 4-3, in the Westminster Armory. Without a doubt, this was the closest match of the year. With the score tied at 3-3, Kaplan waded into his toughest opposition of the season in the person of Hawkins, Mountaineer boxer who defeated Pincura a year or two back. The Terror seemed to be more than holding his own, when, midway through the final round, a short right from the all but exhausted Virginian, caught Kaplan on the chin, flooring him for the count of ten.

For the first time in four years, the Terrors came back from the annual Intercollegiate Boxing Tournament without a championship. "Bunny" Tuckerman, 135-pounder, fared better than any of the other four Terrors who represented Western Maryland in the tourney, garnering the second prize in his division.

Aside from the varsity, by far the most arresting thing about the season was the record-breaking number of men out for practice. More than fifty boys enjoyed the grueling work-outs during the entire campaign.

Graduation will again take its toll, however, with Pincura, Barnett, Wallace, Tuckerman, C. Murchison, and Snyder scheduled for the big sheepskin occasion in June.

With the entire varsity line-up back from last year, the 1932 tennis team sailed into one of the best schedules ever arranged for a Western Maryland racquet squad with a style that promised to rival their 1931 record of eleven consecutive victories.

The Terror racketeers started off their current season with a victory over Gettysburg. Loyola went down in the same fashion and while the stickmen were vanquishing Washington College in lacrosse, the tennis team turned in a smashing triumph over the University of Maryland.

Much could be said of the untiring efforts of each man on the team to perfect his game through grueling practice, but at least part of the tennis successes of the past two years must be credited to Prof. G. R. Taggart, Jr., an excellent court star himself, who has unselfishly devoted a large part of his time to polishing the play of the team.

C. L. Bussard, in addition to arranging an excellent schedule as manager, has also been a consistent performer on the team.

The many Terror fans who have prayed for a good lacrosse team at Western Maryland have at last had their hopes fulfilled in the 1932 clan of stickmen which Coach Stahley has developed.

Cold weather and snow prior to spring recess made practice impossible, and the lacrosse team which represented Western Maryland at C. C. N. Y. and Army was as green as inexperience could make it. Three weeks later that same team defeated the best stick outfit that Washington College had ever produced and bid fair to finish the season in good style.

The answer to this sudden reformation lay in drill on the fundamentals of the great old Indian game, plus intelligent coaching and willing hearts on the part of the squad. For the first time, Western Maryland sent a lacrosse team on the field which bid fair to give skillful competition to its opponents.

The Association is governed by an executive board consisting of the officers and the head of each sport, advised by the Directors of Women's Physical Education, Miss Parker and Miss Todd.

The Association sponsors participation in Basketball, Hockey, Baseball, Volleyball, Hiking, and Tennis. Western Maryland "blazers," "M's," and class numerals are awarded to those qualifying according to the constitution of the Women's Athletic Association. In its two years of existence the organization has done much to create general interest in women's sports on "The Hill" and to raise the athletic standards.

RIFLE TEAM

R. O. T. C. Rifle Team

The Rifle team finished another successful season on the indoor range with Staff Sergeant Thomas J. Lavin acting as coach of the team, which finished second in the Third Corps Area, and was designated as one of the Corps representatives in the National Intercollegiate Match in competition for the National Championship. Matches were fired with ninety of the leading colleges in the country, the team winning 55 and losing 35. Cadet Lieutenant Willey finished second, Cadet Captain Woolley third, Puro sixth, and Cadet Lieutenant Bowman eighth, to constitute four of the first ten best rifle shots in Pennsylvania, Maryland, Virginia, and District of Columbia. All men received medals for the placements, and, in addition, all firing members received a medal as contestants in the National Championship Match. In the National Rifle Association League for this territory, in which the Navy won the title, Western Maryland earned fourth place. Most of the matches were fired on the home range and the results telegraphed upon conclusion.

CERCLE FRANÇAIS

Le Cercle Français

Il y a six années le Cercle Français fut organisé pour l'instruction et l'amusement des étudiants français et tous les autres qui s'intéressent à la langue française. Bien entendu, le Cercle a fait beaucoup de progrès et les programmes ont été variés et intéressants avec autant d'esprit français que possible.

A Noël nous avons présenté la dramatisation d'une partie des Misérables de Victor Hugo.

Le six février le Cercle a donné une danse au fameux cabaret du Moulin Rouge, Montmartre, Paris. C'était une danse qui a réussi merveilleusement.

Des membres du Cercle ont écrit des pièces françaises. Les pièces furent très bien écrites et très bien présentées.

Chaque année nous présentons une pièce. Cette année nous avons représenté le Bourgeois Gentilhomme de Molière dans la Salle d'alumni.

The Sunday School has offered varied courses of study to its members this year under the direction of the teachers mentioned above. One of the most impressive events of the year was the Christmas Service in Baker Chapel, at which the Christmas Story in music was rendered by the choir. An offering was collected by the various classes and divided among the Children's Aid Fund and the Aged People's Homes of the Methodist Protestant and the Methodist Episcopal Churches. Although the organization has had a small membership, it has afforded real inspiration and help to those who have availed themselves of the opportunities it provides.

Originality of Theme

IT is not one whit too soon to be thinking about the book you are to get out next Spring—its theme—its cost, and how it will perpetuate your story down through the years.

Business Managers and Editors will find here a hearty, helpful cooperation that will minimize their work greatly.

Horn-Shafer have been producing college annuals of an unique and better type for over twenty-seven years at very moderate prices.

Our best references are Business Managers and Editors whom we have served in the past.
