DEDICATION

We, the class of 1961, dedicate our yearbook to a man whom we admire and respect. In the brief time since he has returned to the Hill, his presence has been felt in every area of campus life.

As he stands before us in the classroom to present thought-provoking ideas, there is a readiness to share more than factual information—a bit of his philosophy and of himself as well. Such classes never fail to be challenging—they encourage us to search for life's meaning and to master more scholarly learning. Outside the classroom, his time and talents have been generously shared.

When the curtains part in Alumni Hall, they reveal a blend of academic, aesthetic, and social creativity. Not only dramatic art students, but the audience as a whole realizes that your part in making each production a success goes beyond a paint-spattered set shop. Your talent for creating a mood becomes as evident here as it does in the classroom.

To those of us who had previously known you only through others, you demonstrated your particular interest in us as a class last spring. During preparations for the Follies and the Junior-Senior Prom you guided us so there would be no regrets later.

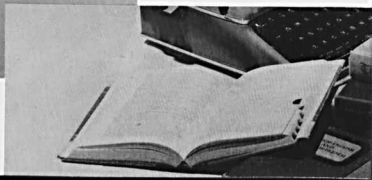

These are the obvious things. There are many other areas where your efforts will add to our college memory. Participating in panel discussions, speaking at S.C.A. meetings, taking part in the Leadership Conference, attending our parties and dances—these are just a few examples. Perhaps most important of all is this—you are interested in us as individuals. You never pass without a cheery greeting; you are always willing to take time out to advise; you are never too busy to chat.

Thus, as a token of appreciation, we dedicate the 1961 ALOHA to you—William L. Tribby: scholar, teacher, friend.

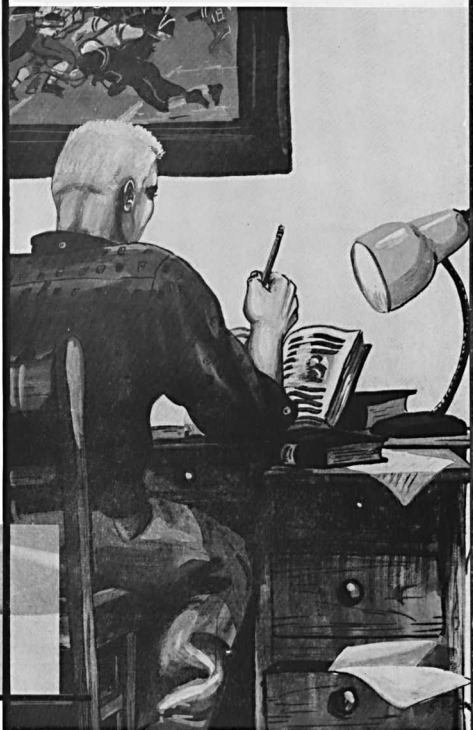

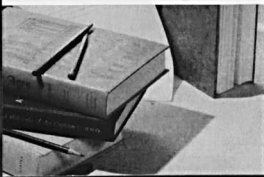

Mr. and Mrs. William L. Tribby and their son, Jay.

THE VOICES

Greetings to the Class of 1961:

I am writing this on a perfectly gorgeous fall afternoon in mid-November. You will not be reading it until the winter has passed and the trees, now resplendent in multi-colored foliage, will have awakened to the warm touch of springtime. This succession of the seasons is quite similar, in a sense, to the succession of college classes.

You entered as freshmen in 1957 with many of the characteristics of springtime—eager, alive, fresh, and yes, even green. You now graduate in 1961—mature, resplendent in cap and gown, having run the course of a college education.

As the tree continues to live and grow, so may you in your intellectual development, in service to your various communities, in your family and vocational relationships, continue to exemplify the qualities of an honored graduate of Western Maryland College.

My best wishes go with all of you.

PURSuing ACADEMIC IDEALS

Here at Western Maryland, student interests have often sparked the formation of special clubs and societies, many of which are directly related to our classroom pursuits. Those people drawn to classical heritage, for instance, have formed and perpetuated a Classics Club; likewise, people interested in French culture may join the French Club. In addition, anyone in our student body has an opportunity to become a part of the Home Economics Club, the Student Education Association, or the International Relations Club.

People who have proven themselves not only interested but also proficient in their studies may become members of the Argonauts, our campus honor society. National honoraries have a place on the Hill, too: in music, Delta Omicron; in social sciences, Pi Gamma Mu; and in biology, Beta Beta Beta. Each of these societies works to foster more research in its field and to bring together people who have common interests. Such societies could not be continued without student support and initiative, however.

Indeed, this same initiative has brought to us this year what is perhaps the prime example of student participation in campus life; for when the symbolic remnant of Old Main was mounted at the center of our campus last spring, another strong yet more intangible cornerstone was being set in our school's changing foundation. This was the idea of an academic honor system for Western Maryland College. Entirely student-initiated, student-legislated, and finally accepted by the students as a body, our honor system now begins to mark its influence in the classroom and, we hope, in every phase of our college's student life.

The Argonaut's tea gives prospective members a chance to become acquainted with the society.

EXAMINING SPIRITUAL CONVICTIONS

In various ways through the years, Western Maryland has tried to help her students gain insight into their individual lives. This aim has become an integral part of the Hill, as evidenced by the always-open doors of the small Baker Chapel, the Sunday evening services that fill the sanctuary with the richness of musical chords, and especially by the activities of religious organizations on the campus. The Religious Life Council represents these different denominational groups and coordinates activities that have in years past become traditions at Western Maryland.

This year the largest religious organization on campus, the S.C.A., succeeded in arousing interest in their new program; "Last Lectures" provided a new Wednesday evening attraction as we heard some of our own professors deliver what they might say if they were addressing their last class. The S.C.A. also sponsored a quiet Christmas communion in Baker Memorial Chapel that lent a peaceful touch to our last holiday activities on the Hill. Another event greeted with anticipation was the annual Easter play, a tradition for which our class is proudly responsible. We watched, also, as arrangements were made for our yearly W.U.S. bazaar, which was supported by the entire campus. Smaller denominational groups were at work this year, too, expanding membership or joining forces in a united effort to further encourage fellowship.

The question of real participation still rests with each individual, however, for all the associations, clubs, and organizations imaginable will profit us nothing if we cannot reach other people with our purpose and with our enthusiasm. Anyone concerned about the wonders and questions in our universe, anyone who has ever marvelled at the seasonal frieze surrounding our college or at the smallness of us all—surely this same individual has also, from time to time, looked within himself and begun to discover there the same infinite spark. It is in this search for insight that our campus life has found its greatest challenge. And it is only through continued cooperation and understanding that students at Western Maryland will be able to vitalize their spiritual concerns.

THE

EXPLORING THE REALMS OF ART

College life on the Hill offers opportunities for the person interested in developing both deeper aesthetic values and a creative imagination. One of the areas in which he may bring his ideas to fruition is in the realm of art. Although campus interest in art has been at an ebb recently, the same spirit that prevailed at Old Main's exhibits is still fostered by a few faithful individuals.

Drama, a sister to the plastic arts, attracts interest, too. Quite a few students work in the drama department; in fact, some become members of the College Players, the group responsible for campus dramatic productions. Naturally, they were pleased this year when "The Merchant of Venice" was brought to our stage by Players, Inc. Two other outstanding visitors were Anna Russell, concert comedienne, and Theodore Ullman, pianist. As an added pleasure, we heard the National Symphony and attended faculty music recitals.

Not only visiting groups, but activities on campus give evidence that music is popular at Western Maryland. The College Choir, which adds much to our Chapel services, also gives programs at Christmas and Commencement. The Women's Glee Club and the College Octet are other active music groups, the latter boasting a student conductor. Student-centered also are the symphony and band; the former gives student-conducted concerts and the band contributes to half-time activities at football games. Indeed, each of the Hill's activities in the arts is helping, through its work, to build a society that encourages creative expression.

Mrs. Brady.....Helen Murray

Inherit the Wind is based on the famous Scopes Monkey Trial. Jerome Lawrence and Robert E. Lee, the authors, have written the following about the play: "Inherit the Wind is not history. The events which took place in Dayton, Tennessee, during the scorching July of 1925 are clearly the genesis of this play. It has, however, an exodus of its own."

It is a conflict of two great men in their battle for the right. Matthew Harrison Brady (William Jennings Bryan) has come to prosecute the defendant, Bertram Cates (Scopes). Henry Drummond (Clarence Darrow) is defending Bert Cates' right as an individual to think. Each member of the cast of forty takes a side in this clash between these two great minds.

Even though most of these characters are based upon real people connected with the trial, the play is not limited to Dayton, Tennessee. It goes beneath the surface of the trial and brings a universal truth which can be applied to all men of all ages declaring that each man has the right to think—"A thought is like a child inside our body. It has to be born."

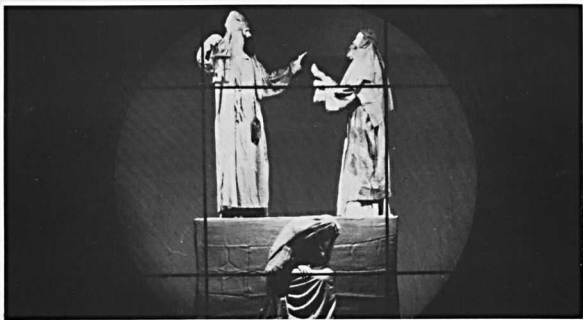

"... how come you're so anxious to get that front seat over there?"

"Bert, it's still not too late. Why can't you admit you're wrong?"

"As your new president, I say what I have said all my life . . ."

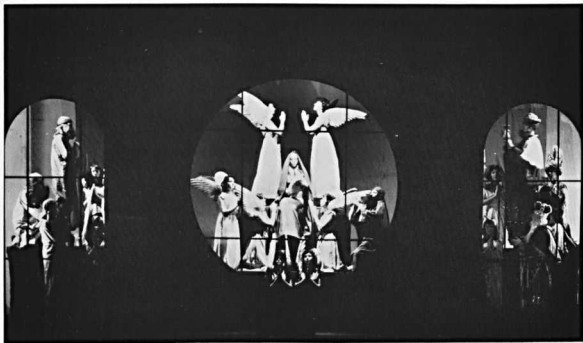

"There was no room for them in the inn."

LEADS TO CONFERENCE HONORS

The athletic program at Western Maryland College is designed to include all members of the campus. From cooperative teamwork in the competitive football season to individual triumphs in wrestling, and from inter-collegiate competition to fraternity basketball routs, all students have the opportunity to engage in some sport.

Western Maryland has held Mason-Dixon honors in recent years in several varsity sports and has also heard victory cheers from Blanche Ward gym at the other end of the campus. Green and gold clad co-eds travel from dorm to dorm and to the hockey field, participating in inter-class and inter-scholastic competition.

Individual accomplishment does not go unrewarded. Members of Green Terror squads have received All-American, All-Mason-Dixon, and All-Methodist honors plus the coveted varsity letter. Trophies and letters are awarded by the Women's Athletic Association for achievement in hockey, basketball, volleyball, and others. Besides these outward symbols, the athletic program lends to the full development of the individual on the college campus.

W.M.C. gets short yardage around end.

The Green Terror Gridmen closed the 1960 season with a winning 6 and 3 record and as co-holders of the Mason-Dixon Conference crown. Opening with a victory over Bridge-water, Terror quarterbacks Roy Terry and Skip Brown used the roll-out pass effectively against the Eagles. Fred Dilkes highlighted the Penn Military game with an intercepted pass return for 40 yards, and Roy Terry's pass to Dick Yobst in the Randolph-Macon clash turned the tide in the favor of Western Maryland.

Outgaining the Hampden-Sydney squad, the Terrors were unable to overcome the aerial game of the southern team, and poor pass defense accounted for the heavy loss to Juniata.

In their first game with the National Aggies, the Green and Gold came from behind three times to finally win in the remaining minutes of the contest. Len Biser's interception clinched the victory over Lycoming followed closely by Dilkes' 48-yard run. Drexel rooters witnessed the Terrors' first and only field goal of the season. Besides kicking the field goal, John Holter also made an excellent punt return.

The closest game of the year came against traditional rival Johns Hopkins. With seconds to go, the Terrors took an unprecedented intentional safety to prevent a punt from being blocked. Behind at the half 15-6, the Terrors pulled ahead to defeat the Bluejays. Fred Dilkes closed his career at Western Maryland with an impressive record and was voted most valuable player in the Hopkins game. Dilkes has been a consistently high scorer for the Terrors and has rated high in the nation. Also honored was Jim Pusey as Defensive Lineman of the Year. Rated on a point system, this award includes a trophy for the winner and the engraving of his name on a plaque placed on display in Gill Gym. Individual skill and teamwork combined to bring the Green Terrors a winning record and conference honors.

BOOTERS FILL CONFERENCE SLOTS

Well represented on All-Conference teams, the Green Terror booters pushed through to a winning season. On the All-South team were senior co-captain George Varga, junior co-captain Jack Baile, and halfback Laszlo Zsebedics. Both Varga and Zsebedics also took Middle Atlantic and Mason-Dixon Conference positions. Wayne Whitmore, a sophomore, received Honorable Mention on the Middle Atlantic squad. Consistently high scorer and All-American from last year, Varga alone scored 17 goals, which equaled the goals scored against Western Maryland this season.

Opening the season with two losses, the Terrors snapped back quickly with a shut-out against Washington College. The only tie of the campaign came against Catholic University. Leading until the final quarter, the Terrors were unable to maintain their lead in this CU homecoming contest. This was the first time in over 20 years that Catholic University was unable to win a homecoming game. The victory over Hopkins concluded a successful season for the soccer squad at Western Maryland and graduating star George Varga.

*Mason-Dixon Tournament

Green Terror cagers closed the 1961 season with honors in both Middle Atlantic and Mason-Dixon Conferences and a record season for the college (16-7). Early season victories were climaxed at the Bridgewater Holiday Tournament in which the Clowermen trimmed Roanoke 68-65 and defeated Lynchburg 76-59.

Coach Clower had a well-balanced group of starters in scoring averages. Captain Dave Sullivan and sparkers Dave Martin and Richie Klitzberg formed a strong nucleus for the 1961 Terrors with Tom O'Malley and frosh Ron Shirey rounding out the strong starting squad.

Highlighting the season, O'Malley broke a tie against Susquehanna, and Martin scored the winning points against Elizabethtown—both in the last few seconds of the games. Years of rebuilding have found reward, and with most of his starters returning, Coach Clower can look forward to another top season.

MATMEN PIN TO WIN

Under new coach, Bill Smith, the wrestling squad opened its 1960-61 season. Sophomore Sam Case, who participated in the Mason-Dixon Tournament last year, assisted in coaching this year.

Captain Charlie Runkles and brother Joe Runkles headed the Green Terror line-up. Charlie and novice Don Leneski will be graduating this year.

Promising new additions to the team are Mike Eagan, Al Rose, and Mike O'Connor. A transfer student from Columbia University, Kurt Wenzling, will probably see plenty of action next season. Coach Bill Smith has seen a year of building for the Western Maryland grapplers. Strong programs for individual development and team spirit should lead the Terrors to a strong season in the year to come.

RIFLEMEN SCORE HIGH UNDER COYNER

An excellent example of individual accomplishment, the Rifle Team has been strongly developed under its present coach, Master Sergeant Crawford Coyner. After four years with the squad, Coyner retires this year. Playing under the strain of a tough schedule and the loss of two seniors, the riflemen started the season with a few losses. However, a victory over Delaware picked up spirits and the Terrors pulled ahead to defeat a perennially tough Bucknell squad. Although a loss, Coy-ner claimed Gettysburg as the best early season match.

Junior Steve Hatton has maintained a consistently high score followed closely by team captain Ron Poore. Ron Cronise, a sophomore, also developed into a pretty good shot as the season progressed. Each team member is expected to practice at least three times a week which provides an excellent use of leisure time for individual development.

W.A.A. SPECIALIZES IN SPORTS

The Women's Athletic Association strives each year to set up a sports program for all interested girls, regardless of skill. Through the intramural and interschool programs, the girls aim to uphold a spirit of competition, sportsmanship, and responsibility. Each board member acts as a manager for a particular sport, and two members are selected at large to assist with sports and the award parties.

The intramural program includes hockey, basketball, badminton, volleyball, tennis, archery, and softball.

In addition, a school basketball team is chosen from those girls participating in the intramural program. This female counterpart of the Terrors travels to neighboring schools for its own interscholastic competition.

SURVEYING STUDENT LIFE

We are a community-in-miniature, students in a small college responsible for building many of our own recreational and academic diversions. We are called the "apathetic generation," yet we are capable of harshly criticizing our own actions. We know that tomorrow we inherit the cyclotron, but today we must learn how to laugh at ourselves.

Our college life is based on friendliness and informality . . . professors know our first names; house mothers make pop-corn for us; and we all say "Hi!" to everyone.

Our college life is composed of small but memorable incidents . . . singing "Happy Birthday" in the dining hall, dancing in the student lounge on a snowy winter night, joining the mailbox mob after dinner.

But we do not take all of these events lightly. Just as our little campus pavillion sits in the center of the Hill, so the spirit of its inscription, Carpe Diem, is beginning to plant itself firmly in our minds and attitudes. We discover an interest in common with other people and we form a club—or, more frequently, we simply sit down and talk about it. Gradually, we form ties with the world outside our memorial arch and beyond the highways.

In short, we are discovering that social activities are a vital part of our college life—that our crazy antics in the dorm, those late card games and special dances, our standing jokes, and even the organized confusion of getting up late for class are all part of our student life at Western Maryland.

VOICE OF THE STUDENTS

All students at Western Maryland are members of their Student Government Association, a governing body that meets weekly and includes representatives and a cabinet of voting members elected by the students. This year's S.G.A. has exhibited an active concern for campus participation in student government by holding monthly open meetings and by fostering the growth of new ideas in the well-planned fall leadership conference.

Other responsibilities of the S.G.A. include orientation week, Homecoming, and special school activities. By far, however, the largest task of the S.G.A. has been ironing out the wrinkles in our new honor system, a student initiated venture.

This same initiative is the spark of our success; every student should become familiar with his campus government and, we hope, follow the example of this year's able leaders.

Many new pledges who sang "We are members of the crew" were added this year to the oldest women's organization on the Hill. They came to participate in the "friendship, goodwill and love" of Iota Gamma Chi. For the Iotes' fine academic achievement, Dean Howerly presented the Intersorority Scholastic Cup to the Club.

Thanksgiving saw the girls giving food to the needy. At Christmas they gave a clothing basket and food to another family. The club's T.V. was donated to a men's ward at Springfield State Hospital. The year underway, the club settled down to plan projects and fun in sisterhood.

October found the “cows” busy keeping tabs on the new “calves.” At Homecoming, they proudly displayed a sign that read: “Your Queen is our Queen!” on their first-place float.

At Thanksgiving and Christmas the Phi Alphas prepared food baskets for the needy and entertained patients at Springfield Hospital. They enjoyed both the party given by the Gamma Bets and the club party at Frock’s where the seniors received their traditional stockings and poems.

With spring nearing, the girls were busy preparing Storybookland for its annual visit by the freshmen, and before long it was time for their spring banquet.

Sound-offs were heard as the Sigmas counted thirty-four new skunks this fall. Pledges and members alike worked hard selling birthday calendars which donned new faces this year. The profits from this project were given to CARE.

A first this year was the newsletter which gave the "low-down" on the new pledges and its sequel which revealed the seniors' plans for the future.

Enthusiastically, they became interior decorators as they made plans for changing the clubroom.

Christmas parties, banquets, the tea, and the Sigma Circus—all were festive and fun. It was a busy and meaningful year for those united in "Fide et Amore."

Thirty pledges donned the blue and white jackets to swell the ranks of Alpha Gamma Tau this fall, and under the fine sponsorship of Mr. Richard Pugh, the club had a successful year.

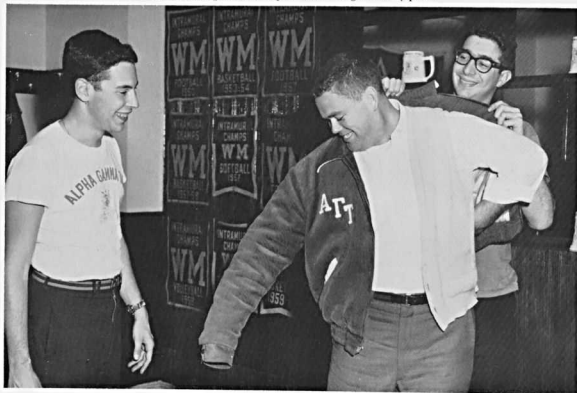

This year's annual Homecoming banquet is looked upon as being the largest ever, with many active alumni on hand. Other highlights of the semester were two closed parties and the second Bachelor-Delt Christmas party.

The second semester found the Bachelors pulling together to support the I.F.C. and present to the student body the first "open interfraternity" party under the new code of conduct. The traditional campus favorite, the May Day dance, rounded off the club's activities for 1960-61.

The Purple and Gold again had a fine year under the excellent tutelage of their sponsor, Mr. Richard Clower. No sooner had Delta Pi Alpha welcomed their new pledges than they found themselves busy with preparations for the annual Homecoming dance.

This year Western Marylanders were treated to "Topsy Turvy," featuring the music of Cozy Cole, which marks the first time a big name band has appeared on WMC's campus.

Miss Barbara Horst was chosen the Preacher Sweetheart and was serenaded by the brothers of the fraternity.

As usual, the Preachers displayed their interest in athletic competition. They captured both the Varsity Participation Trophy and the Interfraternity Athletic Cup, winning the latter twenty-two out of twenty-three years.

Seventeen new faces appeared in the ranks of Gamma Beta Chi after this year's bidding. Under the guiding hand of their sponsor, Mr. Philip Uhrig, the fraternity had a busy and successful year.

Included among the year's activities were aid to the needy at Christmas, Thanksgiving and Easter by the donation of food baskets and clothing. An additional undertaking of the Gamma Bets was the annual Christmas program at Springfield State Hospital in which the members, in conjunction with Phi Alpha Mu, their sister sorority, put on a show for the hospital patients. Capping the year's major activities was "Cupid's Delight," GBX's version of the annual Valentine dance.

Pi Alpha Alpha opened the year's activities by sponsoring "Another Evening of Barber-shop Singing," which was highly successful and in keeping with their tradition of providing musical entertainment for the campus.

Success continued as they welcomed sixteen pledges, giving them their largest membership in a number of years.

Early in November, the Black and Whites joined their Sigma sisters in a picnic, and in December the members sponsored "Snow Flakes," this year's Christmas dance.

Captain Paul Adams, who became an honorary member this fall, shared the responsibility of guiding the fortunes of Pi Alpha Alpha with the fraternity's co-sponsor, Dr. John Makosky, during Dr. Reuben Holthaus' second semester absence.

“...THE VERDANT

We've come a long way this year from that first impressive week of tests, mixers, speeches, pep rallies, and picnics.

Classes began with most of us sitting down and doing more studying than ever before. The friendly upperclassmen threatened us with stories about the professors, and we soon added stories of our own as our knowledge and admiration grew. Many of us dreaded those Saturday classes and long biology labs.

During our two weeks as Rats, we experienced the freshman humility we had forgotten and became better acquainted with our peers.

FRESHMEN"

Homecoming found us working together for the first time. That red ribbon really looked good until we saw the bill for materials.

Our active campaigning for class elections aroused school wide enthusiasm, increased our class unity and further stimulated our interest in student government activities.

Sorority teas, fraternity parties, Lantern Chain, class projects, and active participation in school sports and activities—all helped us get the true feeling of college life and made this year one we'll never forget as the first big step in our college career on the Hill.

The class of '63, the largest ever to come to the Hill, returned from a pleasant summer vacation ready for another year of work and fun.

No sooner had we readjusted ourselves to the familiar routine of classes than we were in the midst of pledging sororities and fraternities. After an eventful pledging period and formal initiation had passed, we felt stronger ties binding us even closer to life on the Hill.

Our first project of the year was Rat Week, which proved to be a big success. After the two-week period we felt that our goal to become better acquainted with the freshmen had been realized.

Because we had decided in the final days of our freshman year not to let anything destroy the unity of our class, we set about carrying out our first projects for this year. A very successful hayride, much acclaimed and supported by all, initiated our unity plans. Building a homecoming float was our next class venture.

We soon realized that it was time to assume our real responsibility as upperclassmen and to do our part to put the class of '63 high on the Hill.

Returning to the Hill from our many varied summer experiences, we inherited the responsibility that goes along with being the junior class. The inauguration of an honor system and the appearance of a big name band on campus were the newest additions that faced the old and weary juniors returning to begin their academic specialization.

This was our year to initiate new pledges and to require respect rather than to be subordinate. Anxious to be back in the fold, we supported our class by building a prize-winning Homecoming float and by paying our back dues so we could participate in the Follies. time and class cuts to preparing for our Folies and Prom. Sleep-filled nights became a fond memory.

All the while we took careful notes of the busy seniors' efficiency in the hope some of it would rub off on us next year. We had the opportunity to present comical imitations and to honor the seniors at Rose Cup Ceremony. Anticipation and suspense filled the air as we watched our girls tapped as Trumpeters. With final exams, our junior year came to a hectic but very pleasant close. Now we are eagerly awaiting our senior year as a climax to our college career.

Four years ago, Western Maryland College was a strange campus to most of us. Centered around the hub of Old Main, the Hill seemed, in those first weeks of school, a whirl of green and gold beanies, rat court, early morning classes, and late afternoon labs.

But there was also time for relaxation—time to stop and chat in the office with Mrs. Veale or Mrs. J.; time for surprise candlelight serenades by the fraternities; and time, too, for all willing young men to be initiated into the “line-up” outside our dining hall.

As the year moved on we became better acquainted with our new home: we tacked crumpled beanies on our Homecoming float; we discovered the joys of our first Christmas vacation—followed by the headache of exams; and we even grew somewhat accustomed to peering through the smoky-blue atmosphere of the rec hall trying to find someone on the other side of the room or make our way to the Ping-pong table.

When the freshness of these customs began to wear off, we started a few of our own: we launched a Japanese Weekend for campus clean-up and were more than secretly proud when some of our own class members presented an Easter play for the campus.

With the innovation of attendance cards, we were pleasantly surprised at being able to take our seats anywhere we wished in the new Baker Memorial Chapel. And, if the truth be known, this same sense of change remained with us when it was time to go home that June. We had only begun to introduce ourselves to the Hill.

This was a year of beginnings, both within our class and on the college campus. Departments and offices were being transplanted while a modern split-level building began drawing our attention to the other side of the Hill. Old Main wore a curious smile as she watched our class of pledges prancing across her front porch-stage in sorority and fraternity antics. Perhaps she was thinking of the new friendships that we were to establish; perhaps, too, she was wondering how we would reconcile so many loyalties to our sophomore class of '61. When the costumes and paddles were packed away and skits-after-lunch forgotten, did we remember Old Main's warning to temper these same loyalties with moderation?

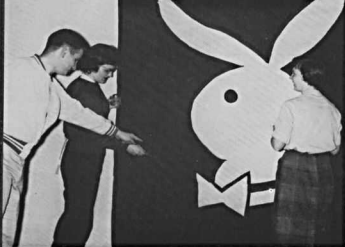

Determined to remain a class, however, we announced the second of our Japanese Projects: in one weekend we managed to dust and mop dormitories, auction box suppers at Harvey Stone Park, dance that evening, and collect enough money to send overseas to a Japanese school. Reassured that our class spirit was very much alive, we spent the remainder of our year in anxious planning for the coming fall. “Good-bye, Old Main,” we called that Jure—but what would take her place?

Old Main, so long the hub of campus life, became only a memory after the summer of 1959.

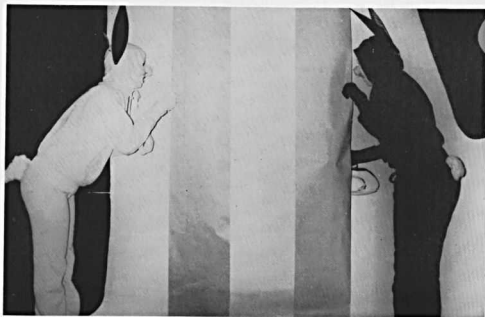

The box supper auction was welcome relaxation after a hard day's work for both “cleaning ladies” and “sidewalk superintendents.”

"His tie's crooked!"

"...WE'VE WORKED TOGETHER

CENSORED!

Traditional promenade pause . . .

. . . another memory of Playboy Party.

TO EARN OUR FAME..."

As usual, the males got all the help...

Gone were the remnants of Old Main; no benches in front of the grille, no more "rec hall" dancing, only a few bricks scattered here and there. Instead, cold winds blew over our lonely hill, reminding us of the old grandame's protective warmth. But she had left behind her a stately Georgian chapel and a new Student Union Building to help us through our mourning. After we had learned to open our tricky mailboxes and to speak above the music at dinner, we turned to our special projects of the year. But where was our class?

... while the weaker sex was left to do it alone.

The Playboy Junior-Senior Prom was fun, but only a partial success—perhaps because only part of us supported it. Not until one night at Follies rehearsal did we fully realize how artificial our separate ties had become. Challenged by our sponsor's sage advice, we worked more for each other in those two days before Follies than we had in the previous two years.

"Here we is, Suh Teddy."

The champion jousters and their horses were proof of Sir Wob's qualifications to be a square knight.

King Arthur bowed to Gwenohowery, who boasted, "It is because of me that thou art where thou art today."

That final night, we were an anxious group of costumed and grease-painted people huddled waiting for the overture to "Square Knights of the Round Table." How many months of writing, collaborating, rehearsing, and just plain worrying were wrapped up in that show! Here we had a Medieval English story of the kidnapping and rescue of Dame Gwenohowery, a story whose knights, Yo-yo men, and maidens strangely resembled people we knew on the Hill. But would our audience like it? After a peek through the curtains at our full house, after that first burst of laughter and applause, we were on our way to an evening of entertainment of which we could be proud and to a party afterwards that completed a very memorable junior year.

Sir Burp had been accepted to occupy the Seat Peerless, but it seemed that his mind was on other things.

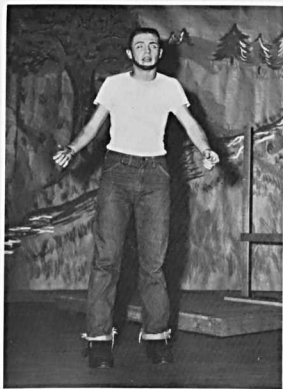

Our Hero of the Yo-yo men boldly "volunteered" to rescue the kidnapped Gwenohowery.

"The chances of finding her are good, but . . ."

The guitar salesman communicated with the spirits to locate Gwenohowery.

Morgan lá Gershner gave the clue to the search—the Ozzard of Wizzie.

While assisting the Hero, Tuna Fish encountered the Bully...

... and the Bully girls shouted encouragement.

The Ozzard of Wizzie—at last!

At the Pad, dancers lured Tuna Fish from the search.

The Cat God declared his intent to turn Gwenohowery into a Mouse.

Gwenohowery was found and the "magic word" broke the spell.

"... We've worked together to earn our fame..."

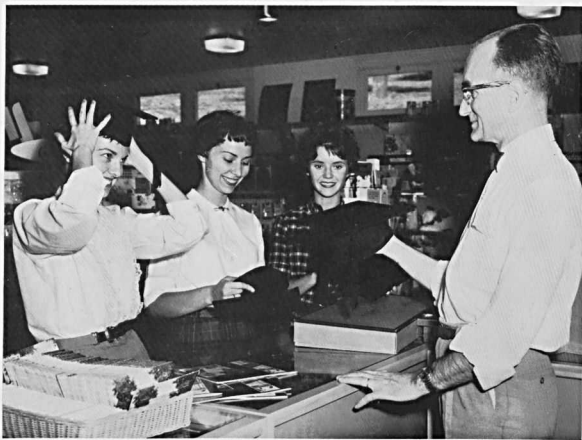

"...AND THE HILL WILL REMEMBER OUR NAME"

It takes a full year to become accustomed to being a senior—to get used to walking out first from assembly, remembering that last year's familiar faces have graduated, and wearing a mortarboard that insists on slipping over one ear. This last year on the Hill found us tossing coins in Old Main's cornerstone, reminiscing about Summer Camp, enjoying automatic late leaves, and finally initiating our long-sought-for honor system. Older traditions took on special meaning, too—Homecoming Weekend, Christmas banquet, senior investiture, and even the kiss under Memorial Arch all seemed to remind us that time was creeping by. But we worked on through student teaching, football practice, and Graduate Record Exams to a spring that had arrived all too soon for us. Somewhere between Rose Cup and trying on graduation gowns, we tied together the ribbons of friendship that for so long had blown about in the breeze of school activity. Almost impulsively, we smiled more often than usual and began shaking everyone's hand.

What did it all mean? Superficially, this was the culmination of four years work and play in a scenic campus world; memories of Old Main, autumn colors, and chapel chimes had become a part of us. Far more, however, our life at Western Maryland had helped to shape the attitudes and knowledge we would bring to a world virtually crying for responsible citizens. Not one of us could leave the commencement platform without thinking that all peoples of the world needed to understand the same fruits of peaceful co-operation that our own class had experienced after four years at Western Maryland College.

1961 CLASS SONG

*We're the class of '61,
Full of spirit, full of fun;
We've worked together to earn our fame,
And the Hill will remember our name.*

*Soon college days will be behind us,
But our hearts will e'er remind us;
We're the greatest, and we're the best,
We're the class, yes, the class of '61!*

A WORD OF THANKS

Many innocent bystanders found themselves involved in helping us tie together the pages of this 1961 ALOHA.

A few of them wore out shoe leather working as obedient photographers: Bill Rettberg, of Rettberg Brothers, who patiently followed our crazy schedules and took the bulk of our pictures; and Mrs. Henrietta Essom, Jim Worden, and Sam Margulies, who were always on hand to snap candid shots.

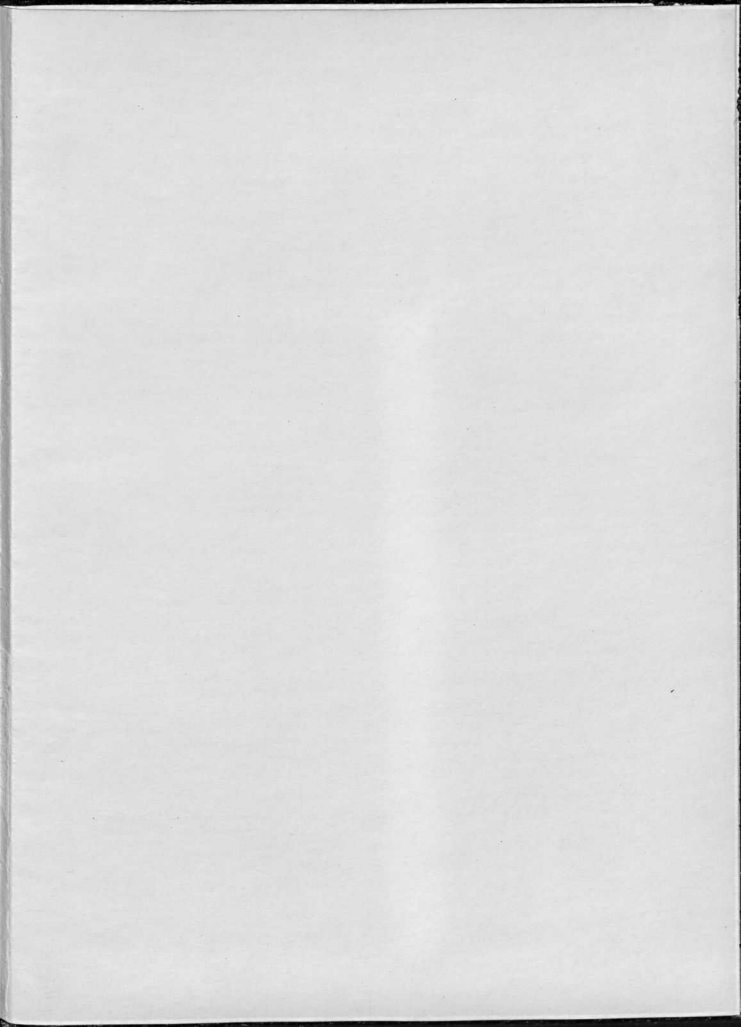

Others gave sage advice when problems plagued us: Miss Nancy Winkelman, our advisor, who was a willing consultant throughout our planning and polishing days; the Horn-Shafer Company, particularly Mr. W. G. Horn, Jr., who traveled to the college and guided us when our yearbook was in its embryonic stages, and also Mr. Raymond Fisher, who gave technical assistance.

We also express thanks to those uncomplaining individuals whom we inconvenienced daily in our hectic attempts to meet deadlines.

Finally, we thank our patrons, advertisers, campus organizations, and especially those who bought the 1961 ALOHA and thus made our book of memories a reality.

WESTERN MEXICAN COLLEGE

1961 ALOHA SUPPLEMENT

"American students will demonstrate . . . solely on their own initiative."

somber may day in washington

Approximately one-third of the student body piled into busses and cars bound for a rainy Washington.

"The time has come to show the world that American students do not approve . . ."

Wide World Photos

Our world's growing pressures touched Western Maryland this spring when a group of concerned young men presented to the rest of our student body the plan for a student picket demonstration at the Russian Embassy on May 1. In about three weeks nearby colleges had been invited; our students had finished making posters; and press officials had been contacted. All the while we were wisely reminded that ours was to be an orderly, non-violent demonstration—one that would not stoop to communist tactics.

May 1 came and went. Despite rain and a long ride to Washington, our picket was successful. Yes, successful. True, our letter of protest was not received at the miniature iron curtain of the embassy, but we had proven to the world—and more important, to ourselves—that American students will stand against communism.

Our letter of protest against communism met closed doors at the Russian Embassy.

The refreshment table was a focal point at the Junior-Senior Prom.

Our investiture speaker—traditionally unannounced—was Dr. J. L. Straughn.

“college ties can ne’er be broken . . .”

We seniors rose as President Ensor symbolically invested our class president with the academic costume.

We found warm hospitality . . .

and scrumptious refreshments at the Ensors' reception.

Juniors first comically imitated us at Rose Cup . . .

but then bid us each a fond farewell.

Senior Trumpeters waited for the chapel chimes to strike seven before tapping their successors.

Food . . .

Springtime belongs to seniors—a green and pink blossomed background for traditions of parting from four years of college. Spring is for seniors because it is then that they, more than anyone, begin to glean vitality from their expectations.

Maybe it was the gown that did it. Maybe wearing our black robes (with proper dignity, as we were told) that first day of Investiture made us feel how unprepared we were for the busy, unbalanced world we faced and would tomorrow hold. Then we stopped to count the days—days until graduation, until weddings, new jobs, or Army assignments. Some of us felt our eyes and minds being opened, too. What more natural reaction than hysteria: horror at seeing our inherited world, laughter to lubricate the machine of its management.

And that same laughter was a necessary part of all our final activities. We could hear it, along with the strains of our Follies songs, at the reception which Dr. and Mrs. Ensor held for us. Not much later we could hear giggles, too, as the senior women, accompanied by their freshmen counterparts, tripped down to Hoffa Field for Lantern Chain. Laughter, too, was a guest at Rose Cup—here mixed with tears—as the junior women happily imitated our idiosyncrasies acquired over four years. And bright loud laughter at the senior bull roast, our class party with delicious roast beef, slightly warm sunshine, but warmer spirits. Here we signed yearbooks—the 1961 Aloha that had honored one of our guests, "Bill" Tribby, father of little Jay who was the life of our party. And as we penned away feeble wishes foolishly trying to write four years of thoughts in four lines, didn't we then feel the tug of college ties? We would soon have to break them, it seemed.

One more sunrise on the misty green hills and we turned around to commencement weekend—our very own commencement. What finer expression of our inmost concerns than J.B., our commencement play that Friday night? And who could not be humbled, reciting the ten commandments at our baccalaureate service? Have you ever stopped and listened to a congregation saying, "Thou shalt have no other gods before me?" And still the ties to college were to be broken.

Finally the morning came. June 5, 1961. At 9:30 we lined up—mortar boards askew, robes slightly rumped—and were checked in. Everything went smoothly, even putting out the right hand to shake and left hand to grab; everything went smoothly until a tall snowy-haired man stood up and spoke to the audience. Do you remember? "Excuse me," he nodded to the audience, and turned his back to them just to face us! Then he shook his finger and told us not to be afraid—that we needed to escape sometimes, but to know why and where; that we had to conform to the world at times, but to know when; and above all, that we were all individuals and should act accordingly and be proud of the fact. Well, that was it. After those words, after parents' rough handshakes and tears, our own confused faces seemed the final goodbye to it all. But something struck us as we marched out of Alumni Hall, new alumni. The sun was still shining; the campus was still full of spring's pristine beauty—everything was wonderfully familiar. Then slowly we saw; we began to know. Springtime is for seniors because only then, just as we hear the class of '61 clumsily sing its own alma mater together for the last time, only then do we realize that what we anticipated would never happen. College ties can never really be broken.

At the tea on baccalaureate Sunday, Mrs. "J" poured from the punch bowl given by her class in appreciation of her service to the college.

We fell into formation for the walk down the aisle . . .
