a person is always

alone . . .

even when cast among others in a crowd, his individuality shines through . . .

he is a unique being . .

none that have proceeded him or . . .

others that will follow after, have been an exact replica . . .

an individual is a colorful kaleidoscope . . .

his feelings of love joy and sorrow forms patterns in his life.

there are times when he needs . . .

but even then, the companionship is strengthened by the uniqueness of the individual persons involved...

sometimes a person seeks solitude, not to escape from the associations of his world . . .

but in order to restore a sense of belonging to it all . . .

his uniqueness stands always vigilant . .

to guard against becoming merely part of the mass... although a person competes with others as a unified mass . . .

he stands on his own in the end to face the reality of triumph or defeat . . . man is as diverse as his uniqueness causes him to search for answers...

where there once was nothing . . .

to destroy, what was once there...

from the individual came the . . .

means and ideas which are combined to form .

everything that has been formed and ever will be created...

in the final count, as one enters this world

alone . .

every mark he makes upon it will be spread and diffused through others . . .

long as . . .

this world exists . . .

the individual is important —

he does matter.

"I think every person has a creative instinct or creative soul — but this has got to be developed and worked on. I have found in drama a field that is very fulfilling and it appeals to me greatly. I love the arts — you get it into your bloodstream and then you can't get it out — it's just there! And if you don't work on it, you feel really very out of place; that there's something more you have to be doing — you feel stifled until you can get into it."

"That's why I'm a drama major — it's just a really good, close field and it contains all the things I really love dearly."

"My biggest gripe about this campus is that everyone knows everyone else so well. It's nice that it's a small campus, but I'll be the first to admit that it's when people know each other so well that everyone knows everybody else's business. It's nice when someone gets engaged or pinned. However, you have the other aspect, that when anything goes wrong or you do anything wrong, everyone immediately knows it — that's a hassle, especially in the dating situation."

"I would love to play Merlin — I love the magician aspect — I love the power he had." "I believe in unicorns and buttercups; I believe in the mystical and the dreams that people have. You have to have a dream, and you must reach so much higher to reach and exceed your grasp."

"If you don't dream you don't have anything; you must have something your soul wants. I think there's something out there for me; whatever it's going to be I will try my best to get it and I will get it."

bobbi kristiansen

"Directing the Junior Follies was one of the most fantastic experiences I have ever had. To go in with an original script, and with 57 people totally new at acting (amateurs plus), made it very challenging. The people in it made it totally worthwhile — people were so energetic and enthusiastic about doing it. I found it was so easy to work with them, because the cast was willing to try anything. I truly had a lot of fun."

"Actors are very gentle, delicate creatures, and they have to be handled with 'tender-loving-care' because they're so delicate."

"The theatre is for the people; by people; with people; to effect people; to challenge people; and to coerce them into doing something." "I think one of the biggest lacks of my purposes on this campus is that it is so white. For a long time, I've never worked in a non-black setting. When I drive into the city for a meeting I wonder what I'm doing in this crazy white world. It's one of the critical issues to be solved in the world that we live in — that people are racially different from us."

"At this college, you take young people at a stage when they are learning and changing, and have them in a white atmosphere. It's a bad time to be racially segregated. I'm also aware of some of the stresses. More trauma would be good for all of us. If there were more black students, there would be more activism and more confrontation. I think it's a healthier atmosphere."

"When I was in social work, I always considered myself a middle-of-theroader. Here I find myself radical. I feel more radical here than I've ever felt in my life."

"During my lifetime, two people have exerted much influence. First, Esther Smith, who began to teach me how to get in touch with my own feelings. She was beyond a teacher. Then, there was Maud Williams, a black supervisor, who really freed me to be honest about my own feelings, and share them with other people; never be afraid of the way I felt. She was a neat lady. These people had a tremendous impact because they were so free with giving themselves. They helped you to find yourself."

"In social work, you are trained to try to understand people, and reasons they react the way they do and not to be critical of this, but to try and be helpful. How good you are depends on the person. I have certain strengths and weaknesses. As a whole, social work is a damn hard profession." "It's really hard to teach. In the beginning I thought it was something you could learn to do. The first year, I wanted to quit every week. Now I think it's something you never learn to do and be satisfied."

"I think teaching is probably one of the most exerting things you can ever do. What I teach is not only facts, but an ability to use yourself as a person in a relationship with another person. It's honest, free, and open."

> "It's strange. At home I fight to get anyone to listen. It's egocentric to be in a classroom."

mrs. mary ellen elwell ninette: "I love WMC because of the friendly people. Also, I think I'd be a lot different if he (gary) hadn't been here."

gary: "I like Western Maryland because it's so full of knowledge, and because my fraternity brothers are such a close group of guys that I can turn to any of them and feel wanted. The frat adds a special meaning to my life here at WMC."

gary legates and ninette mellott gary: "I feel I've come a long way at college because I'm no longer afraid of people as I was before coming here. People accept me as much as I want them to. I thought sighted people were weird before I came to WMC. Now I'm more comfortable about life."

ninette: "I have never learned to listen to people. I want to hear what people say, but I'm too busy talking to listen. Being at WMC has made me aware of this deficit in my personality."

gary: "I want to make sure people understand that I'm perfectly independent. I detest the admiration the average sighted person gives any blind person even if he hasn't mastered his handicap."

ninette: "We both want to work for the admiration we receive." "My parents impressed upon me honesty, integrity, faith in a supreme being, a competitive spirit, and a drive for education. My parents were very much concerned with imparting their fulfillment in their children. I certainly feel that much of my fulfillment is in what my children will subsequently become; not that I don't have a life of my own. But it seems to me that a child, in part, is a kind of temporal immortality this is where a person's success or failure is determined. Perhaps not success or failure so much as love, understanding, and compassion."

"I like to think of myself as a generalist, but my special scholarly interest, at this moment, happens to be in Joseph Conrad, a Polish-born British novelist, and also John Galsworthy, a British novelist. I'm primarily interested in poetry. At a school like Western Maryland, you can teach one thing and do research in another. That's one thing I like so much about it — I'm teaching actually what I want to here, and at the same time I'm working professionally in another area."

"I think so often we get lost in the day to day chores at WMC, students and faculty alike, that we forget the overall and controlling purpose and that is, that college is not something that is an isolated entity. We lose perspective of our relative importance, and sometimes what our role as instructor or student really ought to be — not that it's a rigidly categorized or confined thing. Rather that it's a thing you pick up; a change or growth. We just seldom realize what we're about in its long term consequences, in the sense of finding a kind of perspective for a lot of things."

> "Today, there's the individual theme about college. For example, there's an interest away from fraternities; because of this there are other small groups forming. Students now are more aware of topics because of television; more knowledge is available to young people. Today, there's the need for the assimilation of knowledge; the need for one to come to grip with one's self."

dr. ray stevens

"... and talk of poems, and prayers, and promises, and things that we believe in, How sweet it is to love someone, How right it is to care, How long it's been since yesterday. And what about our dreams And what about our dreams And all the memories we share?"

— John Denver

"You ask if I'm happy? As long as this remains a part of me, yes."

sue tustin

"When I first came to WMC I was impressed by the way you can play a sport, make friends, and still hang in there as far as studying goes. Also I liked the way you can hang in bed when you don't want to go to class."

> "The class is a part of me — it's my way of getting WMC together."

"Too many people hold grades as ultimate measures of college success. Some teachers are behind the times, some were never with them. Most teachers place too much emphasis on the almighty grade."

> "I have a long way to go — there are lots of goals I want to achieve as far as being a person is concerned."

dr. theodore whitfield

"Two things probably kept me at Western Maryland: First, I liked it here. Fve enjoyed teaching so much that Fve made my home here. Secondly, I realized that in the big universities you have to publish or perish, and I want to teach. My first love is teaching — I just love to teach."

"I guess I would have been happy being either Robert E. Lee or Stonewall Jackson. I respond to Lee because of my devolution to the South, my love for military history, and the nature of Lee's nobleness and generosity. Also I think it would have been interesting to have been Thomas Jefferson or George Washington. I don't think I could have been happy as Napoleon or Pres. Lincoln. Napoleon because of his bruital disregard for human life, and Pres. Lincoln because of his failure to honor the constitution, even as he fought to protect it. I'm thinking of the arbitrary flouting of the constitution as the safeguard of the people north of the Potomac when he arrested them without a trial."

"Lack of courage on the students part irritates me most about my classes today, which comes to lack of purpose. I mean this — we permit students to drop out as late as April 21st this year with no damaging grade being recorded. Too often, I have felt, this has resulted when a student stumps his toe, without breaking his leg; but stamping his toe, he's felt that he couldn't get up and go on."

"I most want to be remembered for my integrity. It's so basic to anyone's being — self-respect. How can you ask something of someone else if you don't have some integrity. I made up my mind early that the students might think I'm too hard; that might be, but I wanted above all for them to think I was fair."

"Twe sometimes thought when I heard Richard Crook singing part of the tenor solo in Faust that if I had my choice in life, that I would have liked to sing the tenor role in Faust."

mrs. ann coffey

"I'm in favor of equality, women's rights, and equal opportunity for women. This will come with time anyway, but women can help it along."

"I'm not in favor of radical, destructive liberation groups. I prefer N.O.W. because it is a fairly conservative group, working for political goals."

"I dislike the attitude that most of the women students at WMC will never amount to anything; that they're only here to get married. Most departments don't even encourage women students." "Students should use their time in college to learn all they can, by taking a wide variety of courses. This is one time in their life when they don't have a lot of pressures on them, such as a job, raising a family, etc."

"I like to cook international cuisine. It's relaxing to cook and then see a finished product in three or four hours. Whereas in the classroom it may take an entire semester. My first love is to bake bread." "oh, i have had my moment... and if i had to do it over again, i'd have more of them! in fact, that's what i'd have the most of. just moments. one after another, instead of this living so many years ahead of each day."

"sittin here half-dazed and under trying to think of words to say what needs saying. this is a yearbook it is mine. i give it to you it is ours."

smiling faces on campus -

"I like working in the post office. It's given me the incentive to want to improve myself in one way or another."

"If I sound like an enthusiastic nut, that's just what I am."

"I've always enjoyed working with the students and being around them."

"At first, I had to learn things the hard way. As a consequence, I wasn't always able to handle things in a diplomatic manner. Today, since Fee learned a lot, I do better by the students and faculty as well."

"The title of Postmistress is an honor. I hope to carry it well."

irene young

"I like my job as long as Γm out front to see the students, and able to chat or laugh with them. I feel like a Mother Hen sometimes."

"I like the friendliness of the students; their interest in humans, the problems they have and talk to me about. It makes me feel accepted, not as an old fogy, but just the lady at the bookstore."

"It's nice to feel liked. If I couldn't be active with them in the store, I know I would leave."

"I really don't know what person I would have liked to have been — I have to find myself first. I'm me, but can't explain who me is just now. Maybe someday it will hit me in the face."

cordelia "sis" bowers "I like this whole college environment. I think the college has so much to offer a teacher. The biology department is extremely congenial, and the students are very fine. They are nice people besides being good students. I like the whole atmosphere."

"Unfortunately, ecology has gotten to be sort of 'old hat' now, just like going to the moon. Ecology was a big thing a little while ago and people became aware of the problems, but now Γm not sure they're so much concerned."

"I think the students today are more concerned with helping others; this was not the case with students in my day. It was mainly what can I do to help myself. I see this great awareness now in the problems of other people."

dr. jean kerschner

"I think I've been friends with few people. How deep are 'friends'? I don't know of many people that I'm close enough to, to reveal myself. There are many that I can be friendly with. I try to be sincere with them, not bullshit them. It means a lot to me that I know their names, and that they know mine. You have your own little place here and know where you fut in."

"From all the people I know, I get different perspectives. I think I've helped a lot of people and there are people who've helped me — I really enjoy that! I enjoy being friendly with the people around here; really friendly, not just a 'hi, how are you."

"I essentially want to be kind to people; I don't want to hurt anybody. The really important thing is to act fairly and honestly with friends — then everything you do will turn out all right."

"I like the way people act. You in your heart know how you would like to act to others — you know how they could act."

"The time has come to get out of here . . . you gotta move. Four years is more than enough, considering what I was doing and how I was growing. The nostalgia has sorta hit."

"As time goes on, you become more perceptive — you can feel yourself grow. You only recognize the changes by looking back. It's difficult — you end up drawing pictures in your mind, instead of using words." "Right now, I'm in a pessimistic mood. If you'd hit me on a good day — not when I'm ready to leave — it'd all be different. I basically think I'm a pessimistic person — this is what I am."

"I think the women's athletic program is definitely handled well; it's great that the program offers so much to so few, and it's great for a small college. The program is well organized and much better than I expected. But there are things it lacks: there's a need for more coaches; better equipment; more diversified courses that aren't geared solely towards men; and more method courses.

"I prefer playing far more than I think I do coaching. I know when I'm on the bench, sometimes I get so mad that I want to jump in the game. I really like the physical involvement aspect of sports. Coaching is a tougher job — it's hard to get the players to do what you want them to."

"I have definitely matured through sports, especially the team sports. I've become more knowledgable in group situations through sports — acquiring the ability to think together in a group."

"There were various win-loss records, failures and victories in each sport; there were winning seasons, losing seasons, and within the same sport, win-loss seasons — no matter where you look I found myself learning in every instance. It's great because it gives you a total picture to learn from."

"Some people are too quick to judge a coach — no where are you going to find a perfect coach. People at WMC are too fast to judge them on their initial faults or small faults along the way. Every coach has faults and you're going to learn from them as well as from their good points."

"Many athletes tend to put down things that aren't good enough, that they think should be perfect. They should look at themselves and the program, and try to make do with the things they have."

ron athey

"Im very much concerned about the role of the faculty at a small liberal arts college; the role of the administration in a small liberal arts college, and that there has to be a very strong, working relationship between the administration and the faculty. There connot be a lack of communication — it must be very open. I think mutual respect, consultation, advice — all of these things are very important. I think the faculty should be actively involved in the affairs of the school — this is my biggest gripe; the faculty don't assent their rights and responsibilities to help run, and make decisions concerning the direction of this school. . . . I's basically a matter of recognizing your resources, which a good administrator must do, and utilizing your resources — I think the faculty is a resource."

dr. robert weber

"My primary influence to being an undergraduate political science major was a black professor — a great teacher for American government. He was the only black professor I ever had or ever associated with as a student. He was really good. Of course in those days you had to be good, because you had everything going against you. He came through the system, so the idea that if you came through this kind of a system with all the prejudices against you, you had to be good. I took him for three or four courses."

"Every now and then I have the urge to shave off my beard, but it passes immediately. Five only had a full beard for 3 years; I had a little goatee for about 6 or 7 years. The whole beard thing at that time meant a very political thing or a number of ideological things. Mine was really basically that I didn't want to shave. Then it has the reverse effect, that to shave around the goatee was more of a project than actually if I shaved cleanfaced — that's when I felt I was defeating the whole purpose, so I let it grow out."

"Every political scientist I guess has either thought of running for a political office or thought of running some one. Probably if I were to evaluate my chances of winning a political office I would have to make a number of changes in my life style. I'd have to be more calculating than I am in order to win an election. Rather than make all these adjustments, I would rather support other people and candidates that would probably do a better job, and try to be an influence that way — it's the old behind the scenes game vs. The one out front."

"The best thing I do with my children is that I listen to them a lot; that when they talk, I pay attention to what they're saying. If I were to summarize it, I'd say that when you talk to children or students, the thing you have to do is treat them as people. I think this is what I try to do — I deal with them as people." "When talking to students I always like to use the expression, 'hang loose.' What I really mean by this is that what you're doing here as far as grades are concerned is really not important. One should keep an open mind, and of course, take it easy. There are more important things in the future."

"Generally, I try to 'hang loose.' I'm basically easy going, happy-go-lucky, optimistic, and a positive thinker with a sense of humor." "My rapport is very good with students, inside the classroom and outside. Because I'm approachable, I think most students think they can talk to me."

dr. donald zauche

"Through teaching, I have learned to know more about people, and also to be able to talk to them. Because I was always shy, I couldn't imagine, even in college, standing in front of a group. I learned to communicate with people other than in front of a group. I think I've realized that the students are not just students, but individuals. Finally, I've found that academics can be fun; studying can be fun when you do it on your oun."

"I'm happy and enjoy what I'm doing."

"I guess the biggest challenge I've had is to be a good teacher because you really have to work at it. It involves a certain type of personality which you have to master, knowledge of the field, rapport with students, and being on top of the situation, because you're really an actor up front and all eyes are on you." "One night we were all sitting around together and Don Quixote drew Eternity out of his knap-sack, smiling, "Friends, this is all there is." Then Sancho Panza pulled a flower out of his ear and said, "This is life, and that is all there is." However, in the meantime, Dulcinea rode by on her satin horse, proclaiming: "I am Beauty, and that is all there is."

Everybody had a good laugh over that one, and if it hadn't been almost curfew, we never would have gotten to bed that night."

now a traveler — i did come to know the lonesomeness. the me it took me nearly four years, but here i am i found a mingling — minds and bodies ten thousand evenings spent listening to the small sound of evening, night. everybody has the answers or they'll make them up for you. just once, i'd like to hear a brand new question. the black is now gray and the white less pure. but for this, i have gained. a little better i know the me. by knowing the blend. the paint is now mixed. sometimes i feel i've always been just passing through on my way, or toward . . . there's a few more lonesome cities that i'd like to see and so, mixed and mingled, peopled, i go.

DAWN ZINKAND Sociology Phi Alpha Mu. A little knowledge that acts is worth infinitely more than much knowledge that is idle.

If your knowledge teaches you not the value of things, and frees you not from the bondage to matter you shall never come near the throne of Truth.

If your knowledge teaches you not to rise above human weakness and misery and lead your fellow man on the right path, you are indeed a man of little worth and will remain such till Judgement Day.

Learn the words of wisdom uttered by the wise and apply them — but do not make a show of reciting them, for he who repeats what he does not understand is no better than an ass that is loaded with books.

all year i have thought of very profound and important things to say here, but when it comes to putting it down on paper, i find it too hard to express my deepest, innermost feelings. a very big part of me went into this yearbook that simply can't be measured by the days of this year — in truth this book in many ways is me.

i would like to say thänk you to: my entire staff for their support right up to the end; mary anne, for keeping track of the money; and dave korbonits, who was always there when i needed his help, and finally, a very special thanks to my parents for their encouragement; my robumate, jerry, for his patience and understanding; and to my close friends, who were simply themselves.
